Concorde foes to blockade airport

NEW YORK (AP) — The long battle to block the sleek Concorde supersonic jet from landing at Kennedy Airport takes to the highways today as opponents of the fast but noisy plane plan to jam airport roadways with an automobile blockade.

"We are going to clog it," said Joseph Ewald Jr., president of Return Our American Rights — ROAR. "We're trying to show that we are upset and we're prepared to do whatever we have to do. We are law abiding, working people. But we have to fight for what is ours."

The planned demonstration, a repeat of one that filled airport highways with about 1,500 cars in February 1976, is aimed at pressing the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey to permanently ban the 1,400-mile-per-hour jet from landing at Kennedy Airport.

At a recent rally, one area resident summed up local opposition to the Concorde: "It is simply that the Concorde is a very dirty and very noisy plane."

Protesters said they would not be deterred by a court order issued Friday against the motorcade.

"We're going to be inconvenienced for the rest of our lives if they let that plane come in," said another anti-Concorde leader, Saul Ginsberg.

The Port Authority, a bi-state agency that runs the airport, temporarily barred the Concorde from landing here more than a year ago pending evaluation of noise, vibration and pollution data. It has postponed a final decision several times.

The latest postponement appeared to leave the final word up to the courts on whether the agency can ban the Concorde after the federal government on Feb. 4, 1976 approved landing rights in Washington and New York for a 16-month test.

The Concorde has been flying into Dulles Airport outside Washington since May 1976.

The lucrative route to New York is crucial to British Airways and Air France, who concede losing $54 million on the Concorde in the first year of the SST's operations.

The plane, capable of crossing the Atlantic Ocean in less than four hours, carries only 100 passengers.

Strong opposition to the Concorde has come from residents of the densely populated communities surrounding Kennedy, who claim that it is the noisiest plane in the skies. The Concorde's manufacturers claim their plane is no noisier than the loudest of the subsonic planes. They recently presented the Port Authority with take off and landing plans they say will limit the sound impact.

The controversy has had international ramifications. French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing reportedly has warned President Carter that denial of landing rights at Kennedy could provoke a crisis in U.S.-French relations.

Amnesty for illegal aliens, says Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter says he thinks some form of amnesty will be required for the estimated eight million illegal aliens or undocumented persons in this country.

The White House made public on Saturday the transcript of an interview Carter had on Friday with a group of editors and broadcast news directors, even as a group of Hispanic groups was staging a demonstration in favor of such a move.

Carter told a news conference Friday that he hopes to send to Congress within two weeks a message on the subject. He said Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell and Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland expect to have recommendations for him shortly.

"Some element of amnesty will be mandatory," Carter said in the media interview.

"Some of these illegal aliens have been here for 15 or 20 years. They are American citizens in the practical sense of the word 'citizen.'

"They have good jobs, they are self-supporting and we don't want to kick them out. But I think the definition of amnesty is the difficult part, but I do think amnesty is going to be a part of the program."

As Carter's remarks were made public, a coalition of Mexican-American and associated organizations called Concerned Hispanic Citizens of the United States assembled near the Lincoln Memorial, marched to the White House and then listened to more speeches at the nearby Ellipse. All were in Spanish.

Sponsors of the event had predicted that 5,000 persons would attend the demonstration. Inspector A. D. Borah of the Park Police estimated the crowd at the Lincoln Memorial at 300.

The Hispanic groups have called upon Carter to issue an emancipation proclamation for an estimated eight million illegal aliens, whom they refer to as undocumented persons. Many of them are of Mexican birth, but there are others from Central and South America, Eastern Europe, Canada and the Orient.

The demonstrators carried signs pleading for jobs, education, housing, health, food, nutrition and citizenship. The hispanics note they are the second largest ethnic minority in the country and are destined to become the largest.

Roman Catholic Bishop Patricio Flores of San Antonio, Tex., opened the celebration with a eucumenical Mass, pleading for human rights.

"We are here to tell the government to give us a chance," he said. "If Hispanics have given their lives to this country, the government can give their fathers and mothers, their brothers and sisters a chance.

"In 200 years, we haven't had one. This is what this Marcha de Reconocimiento (March for Recognition) is all about."

RTD in drastic cut of bus drivers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Southern California Rapid Transit District laid off 191 bus drivers Saturday because of a budget deficit and said more layoffs were likely in the near future.

The RTD said 150 of the 191 drivers will be furloughed April 26, with the remaining 40 to be laid off the following week.

The action is expected to save the RTD about $200,000, a spokesman said. The move was necessitated by a $10 million deficit in the district's 1977-78 budget.

The RTD has warned recently that as many as 700 employes may be out of jobs by summer, resulting in dramatic cutbacks in services. Workers with lowest seniority were to be the first laid off, spokesmen said.

SHHHH!

In an attempt to lower traffic noise, Torrance city officials have experimented with posting signs stating the noise limit of 82 decibles for motorists. The level is twice as loud as a vaccum cleaner and less than that of a low-flying airplane. The city has one of the strictest noise ordinances in Southern California.

Hamburger contamination in school lunch program?

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Nearly half the hamburger consumed by children in the national school lunch program comes from a Wisconsin firm with sanitation problems, the Des Moines Register and Tribune said in a copyright story in its Sunday editions.

During this school year, government records showed the U.S. Agriculture Department bought more than 60 million pounds of ground beef from Packerland Packing Co. and its allied plants, the story said.

That is about 42 per cent of the total purchased by the USDA.

On file in the USDA's inspection department were "hundreds of documents" that indicate a "long standing pattern of sanitary deficiencies and questionable operating practices" at Packerland and its affiliates, the newspaper said.

In an incident apparently unrelated to its bidding on government contracts, the firm's president, Siegfried W. Frankenthal of Green Bay, Wis., and his daughter, Betty, were arrested by FBI agents last December and charged with wiretapping competing meat packing plants.

When the agents appeared at his daughter's home to arrest the pair, Frankenthal dropped dead in the driveway.

Betty Frankenthal has since been indicted by a federal grant jury on three wiretap conspiracy charges, pleaded guilty and been sentenced to prison.

A 1975 report centered on Elkay Enterprises. It said:

"Poor Maintenance of facilities and equipment and poor operating practices strongly suggest that meat product possibly may be subjected to contamination and-or adulteration during processing operations."

Dr. James Mathis, chief staff officer at a regional USDA office, said in 1976 that "dirty meat was being ground" into hamburger at Elkay.

In June 1976, an inspection report on the Chippewa Falls plant noted "beef quarters with killing floor contamination, i.e. hair, dirt, etc., are placed on boning tables."

The story said the USDA closed the Texas plant in June 1976 because of fears for the safety of federal inspectors.

OK for Young to speak his mind, says Mondale

DETROIT (AP) — Vice President Walter F. Mondale said Saturday that Andrew Young, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, "speaks his mind and that's the way we want it."

Mondale defended Young at a press conference when asked about the ambassador's assertion that the white South African government is "illegitimate."

"We are not a buttoned-up operation or one of those operations where everything has to be perfect and preplanned and cleared," the vice president said. "This is an open administration and we are not demanding of every one of our leaders an absolute clearing process."

He called Young "a marvelous person" who has done an outstanding job as ambassador.

Without saying that Young had done as much, Mondale offered that "once in a while I say things unartfully."

The State Department has informed South Africa that Young's statement about the legitimacy of the government does not reflect official U.S. policy. That Young statement was the latest in a series that raised the hackles of other diplomats.

At the United Nations on Saturday, 20 Arab delegations challenged Young's assertion that Arab hatred of Jews reminds him of Ku Klux Klan hatred of black.

That remark reportedly was made March 30 to a closed meeting of U.S. Jewish organizations. The Arab delegations said "all Arabs differentiate between Zionism and Judaism. We consider Judaism a sacred religion as Islam and Christianity."

Zionism is the movement to set up a Jewish homeland in Palestine.

Despite Young's comments, Carter said Friday he has never reprimanded his U.N. ambassador. But Rep. Jim Martin, R-N.C., told a Republican gathering in Charlotte on Saturday that it is time Carter acted.

The ambassador "has terrified our allies and insulted the British," Martin said.

Letters evidence of Korea lobby

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several members of Congress wrote letters to South Korean President Park Chung Hee in 1973 that indicated they knew businessman Tongsun Park was lobbying them as an agent of the Seoul regime, the Washington Post reports.

The letters, provide the first documentary evidence to contradict public denial of Tongsun Park's role, by both President Park and some of the congressmen, the Post said in today's editions.

MURDERER MARRIED

Convicted killer Richard Lawrence kisses his bride during marriage ceremony in judge's chambers of Kay County, Oklahoma courthouse. Ten minutes later Judge sentenced Hager to death in the electric chair for a Feb. 22 execution-style slaying. The bride, former Connie Sue Vaughn, had been the state's chief witness against Hager.

Attorneys in move to curb malpractice insurance cost

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The board of governors of the State Bar of California, in hopes of slowing down skyrocketing cost of attorneys' malpractice insurance, voted Saturday to seek laws creating a public corporation to handle claims.

Board members meeting here were told that projections show malpractice insurance rates by private industry will reach $57,000 a year by 1992. Current policies written by Travelers Insurance Co. are due to jump this year from $400 to more than $2,000 annually.

Under the plan approved Satuday, lawyers would pay about $400 annually into a fund administered by a public corporation. The money would be used to pay clients who win malpractice actions.

The annual rate under the proposed system would increase according to the actual cost of the program. The plan, in essence, insures lawyers against malpractice while operating on a non-profit basis.

Young reporter experiences 'Moonie' mindwash 1st hand

EDITOR'S NOTE: Reporter Dana Gosney of the Redwood City Tribune lived the life of a recruit in the ranks of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon, the Korean-born evangelist with some 60,000 young followers in the United States. For the story, Gosney researched Moon's Unification Church for three months and finally spent two days at a "Moonie" camp in Boonville, north of San Francisco.

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — A chilled and nearly sleepless night was brought to an abrupt end as a foot thundered onto the wooden plank floor.

It was 6:30 Saturday morning, and the children of the International Ideal City Ranch were squirming to life in the freezing coastal air.

Moonies and their new recruits were scattered about on the floor of a converted chicken coop as I made my way to one of three tiny doorways.

What had been billed by my hosts as "The Best Weekend of Your Life," was beginning to unfold.

Johan Shahi, the man whose invitation led me here, slipped up behind me. He was to be my "spiritual partner" and would not leave my side for as long as I remained on the 700-acre ranch.

Guitar strings strummed a greeting as nearly 400 young Moonies and their 40 new recruits (averaging about 23 years in age) began to sing and sway, arm in arm, to "You Are My Sunshine."

Then came exercises, held in two gigantic circles, one within the other. There were the standard high school gym class warmups with a taste of yoga thrown in.

Ranch rules seemed easy enough to follow. There was to be no smoking, no drugs, and no alcoholic beverages.

A fourth rule seemed at first to be as innocent as the other three. We were asked to leave our "negativity" at the main gate, with the inference that if we decided to leave, we could pick it up on the way out.

"Negativity," as described to us, is a vague concept that encompasses hate, fear, anger, anxiety and skepticism. It also is used to discourage any critical questioning

When our group went to a breakfast of granola, fruit and orange juice, I was introduced to an often-emotional little game called "sharing." It required that we "share" personal religious, economic, educational and family backgrounds with other members.

After the sharing and singing at breakfast, one of the childlike Moonies called for a "Chooch" chant, which seems to hold a mystical power that pulses through the Moon community.

"Choo Choo Choo, Choo Choo Choo, Yeah, Yea-Pow," the Moonies thundered.

On to lecture — an introduction to the series of five lectures that are the framework for the Unification Church. "The Divine Principles," repeated with scientific regularity, are the basis for all discussion and the justification for any activity.

Jeremiah, my group leader, was on stage to relate the community's goals.

Each new round of ideas brought howls and screeches from those around me. Some had the presentation memorized and were mouthing the words along with the speaker. Others were muttering, "Yes, father," over and over again.

The principles made unnerving sense.

I was 150 miles from home, on a ranch isolated from the outside world, faced with a threatening new definition of truth and without a way to check my bearings.

I wanted to be alone for a few minutes to collect my thoughts but it was explained that self-reflection could have no value. Even as we went to the bathroom, there was someone there asking and discussing.

After lunch came the every-afternoon dodgeball game that provides physical activity between the second and third lectures.

During the last meal of the day — vegetables and a "New Age Big Mac" (soyburgers) — there was more discussion of the day's activities.

Sunday proved a repetition of Saturday — lectures, discussions and games, all in the same order as the day before.

I was pulled away from the afternoon dodgeball game by Johan, who led me off into the trees to plead with me to stay for another five days to "learn the true meaning of life and the universe."

There was more talk of leadership, but still in very vague terms — no mention of Moon — just of a father image and no reference to the Unification Church.

So I asked Johan to cut through the jungle of vagueness.

Johan hesitated, but after a long silence he said the group believes in the teaching of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon.

He was quick in following up with the same sort of logic that had been used over and over in the lectures — the world is afraid of a new leader. Moon is not a bad person as the press would have you believe, he is simply another Jesus Christ, a new messiah.

It was now 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and I was sure of only one thing — I wanted out.

There was nothing physically to restrict me from leaving camp, but I sheepishly asked permission to leave. Permission was denied.

After threading through a maze of young faces, each pleading, I reached my sleeping gear and turned to ask Johan for the use of the phone, as we had agreed earlier. I then was told that the telephone didn't work.

It is several hundred yards from the "Chicken Palace" to the main gate, and Jeremiah suggested that the whole congregation walk with me on my journey from the ranch. As it turned out only Jonah trailed along to unlock the gate and give me my freedom.

It was 6:30 p.m., 3½ hours after I had first asked to be released.

Two steps beyond the gate, I experienced the sensation of falling and reached out to steady myself. My stomach, after churning for several hours, forced its contents from my mouth.

Then I began to weep uncontrollably. I was crying for those I had left behind.

GOP faces 'oblivion,'—warning by Ford

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former President Gerald Ford said Saturday that Republicans must concentrate on broadening their base and should forget about ideological purity if they want to remain a viable political force.

Ford also told the National Conference of Republican State Legislative Leaders that the GOP faces "oblivion" as a party unless it controls more than its current four state legislatures when congressional and legislative districts are redrawn after the 1980 census.

He did not mention any names in his criticism of ideological purity, but Ford's comments were similar to his campaign attacks last year against former California Gov. Ronald Reagan and the conservatives who supported Reagan against Ford for the GOP nomination for president.

"The old slogans of Republicanism will not attract the American people," Ford said. "Contests within our ranks to prove who is the purer of ideology will not attract the American people.

"This is a moderate nation of moderate people to whom ideology is far less important than practicality. Voters prefer common sense to conservatism and-or liberalism," Ford said.

The stated purpose of the three-day conference of about 50 GOP leaders from 17 states was to list things Republicans are doing wrong and how they could be corrected. Ford joined in the criticism.

"The Republican party is not about to die," Ford said. "The Republican party's future is getting better every day."

But he added, "It is a fact that too many people see our party as old, tired, wedded to the past. They see us unfortunately as a tool of big business, indifferent to the needs of minorities, unfeeling to the poor and the unemployed, an enemy of progress and a defender of the status quo.

"The longer this false impression exists, the weaker our party will grow," he said.

Reagan, who also has criticized Republican ties with big business, declined an invitation to address the group, citing other speaking commitments.

Ford said he saw reasons for both encouragement and deep concern looking ahead to the drafting of new legislative and congressional boundaries nationwide after the 1980 census.

The Southern and Western sunbelt states, where Republicans have made their best gains in recent years, will gain more congressional strength at the expense of big-city Democratic strongholds, he said.

But state legislatures have the authority to draw the new district lines, and Republicans now control only four statehouses, he said.

"Unless we increase our control in the next three years, the Republican party may be redistricted into oblivion," Ford said. "We must between now and 1980 gain control of dozens of state legislatures."

Ford said he has visited three college campuses since leaving the White House Jan. 20 and that he plans many more campus visits. He said other Republicans should do the same thing rather than write off the campuses.

Without listing specifics, Ford said Republicans must rethink their old beliefs and become the "party of imagination."

"We cannot expect the shortcomings of the Democratic party or this administration to carry us to victory. That's an unimaginative, negative approach. I believe very strongly we must earn our victories in the future," he said.

Asked by news reporters as he left the conference to assess President Carter's Democratic administration, Ford said it was too early. But he did respond to Carter's election reform proposal.

Ford said he opposes any easing of restrictions on political activity by federal employes and opposes the election-day registration proposal. But he said he supports repeal of the electoral college.

Hayworth can leave

NEWPORT BEACH (AP) — Actress Rita Hayworth, who has been hospitalized here for over a month, was granted permission to leave California Friday.

A hearing to determine whether a permanent guardian will be named to look after her affairs was continued until April 29.

Miss Haywort, 58, was described as "disabled by mental disorder or chronic alcoholism" in a suit filed by the Orange County counsel's office last month.

CAC split over gang violence

By JON MORRIS
PB Staff Writer

There is a difference of opinion in Chino on how to control gang violence in the city's troubled barrio.

Some citizens would just as soon see the youths clapped behind bars, no matter what the offense was. But others might take a more liberal approach to solving street crime.

Members of the Chino Community Actin Council (CAC) at one time told police to run a low-keyed approach to crime in the barrio. The group reversed itself later after a man and woman were slain in front of Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church last May 17.

But a long-time split between liberal and conservative factions of the CAC surfaced two weeks ago with the resignation of chairman Martin Salgado and several top officers.

The CAC is the group of parents formed in 1975 to deal with growing problems attributed to gang activity in the barrio. With the resignations of Salgado and several others who walked out of a recent meeting, it's anyone's guess how effective the CAC will be in the future.

Tony Vicario, a more liberal member of the group, has taken over as interim chairman. Nick Medina, long-time community activist, was picked as publicity chairman.

Salgado, considered a conservative and "pro police" in his feelings, complained he had been harassed and that someone had tampered with his pickup truck. He was known to be displeased with certain CAC members, and often was at odds with them over philosophy.

"The police can control Salgado," says Medina. He claims police and their wives, plus city officials voted during a recent election for CAC president in which Medina lost to Salgado by eight votes.

"That was another swipe at us by the establishment," noted Medina.

So now the CAC is controlled by the liberal faction and there may be some changes in how the group deals with gang violence and youth problems.

Psychiatry for wayward dogs

CARBONDALE, Ill. (AP) — There's help for that thoroughly disgusting pooch who tries to bite the mailman and gobble up all the furniture legs in sight. Psychological counseling.

Psychologist Bruce Niebuhr and three Southern Illinois University graduate students have taken on the task of straightening out wayward dogs.

"Sometimes people feel if a dog chews on furniture, the only alternative is to accept it or get rid of the dog," says Niebuhr. "They're often not aware that something can be done."

He characterizes chewing on furniture as "an unfortunate kind of thing ... We come up with a combination of treatments. Dogs chew. But if a dog has no toys, the owner should give him something to chew on that's okay."

Niebuhr says that the counseling involves the owners more than the dogs. He said his experience shows that "people just aren't aware of what they're doing with animals. Inadvertently, they're rewarding the wrong behaviors."

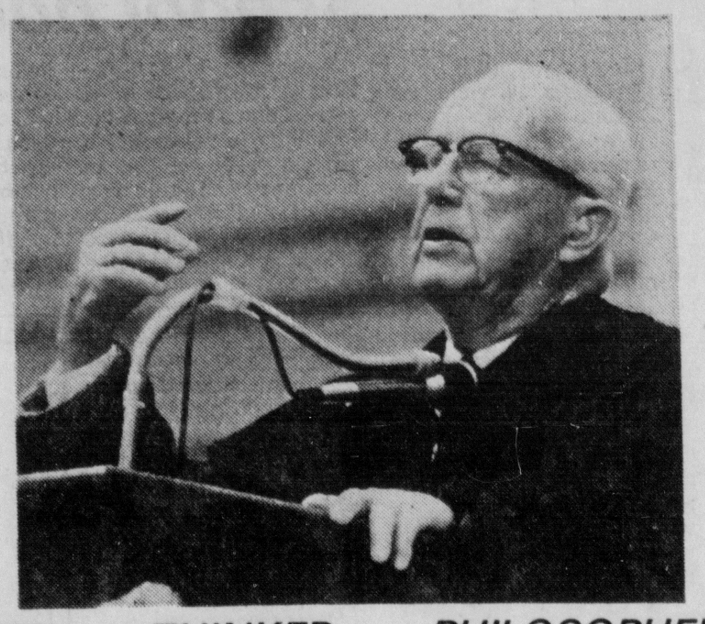
People who have those toothbaring, snarling, ankle-nipping dogs often pick them up and try to reassure them when strangers come near, he says.

"On the face of it, that might seem reasonable. But the owner may actually be rewarding the dog" with the soothing words, as far as the dog is concerned.

The psychologist uses conditioning techniques to correct bad behavior. "We use reward training ... soft words, petting, playing." He said punishment, if necessary, often can involve only verbal scoldings. "Dogs respond to scolding."

The part-time counseling service charges $25 and offers three house calls to check the dog's behavior and progress and to map out a conditioning program.

But the enterprise doesn't have a thriving business, Niebuhr said. "We have to admit that southern Illinois just isn't a big market for it, although this type of thing does well in larger population areas."



BUCKMINSTER FULLER . . . THINKER . . . PHILOSOPHER. . . HUMANITARIAN

R. Buckminster Fuller: faith in humanity

Story and photos by Bob Swetnam

He is called a prophet by some, a genius, a visionary and intellectual phenomenon.

It would take a book over 50 pages long just to list his honors and accomplishments.

His invention of the geodesic dome, which encloses space with less material and expense than any other structure yet conceived, is believed by many to be a solution to world housing shortages.

He is world renowned in the fields of engineering, mathematics, science, architecture, education, cartography and philosophy.

In short, he is the "best known American thinker alive."

R. Buckminster Fuller, inventor, author, world traveler and about everything else imaginable is now 81 years old.

He made a rare appearance in the Southland Friday to honor Cal State Los Angeles students and to discuss "The Next 30 Years."

It is doubtful Fuller, or "Bucky" as he prefers to be called, will be around 30 years from now, but his impact on world thought will undoubtedly be felt.

What he offered honor students and visitors at Cal State was a "hope, optimism and faith in the future of humanity."

A short, slightly rotund little man stood frailly at the edge of the microphone. He faced the crowd of 4,000 students and visitors.

A noticeable hush fell over the audience.

"To speak about the next 30 years of humanity on earth in only 30 minutes leaves only about a minute per year," Bucky joked in his typical, unrehearsed "thinking out loud" style.

"But the next 30 years will be a period of extraordinary challenge in our time."

Fuller traced a brief history of man's life on earth, talking of ice ages and time and world religions as if they were somehow intertwined in some great plan beyond the present realm of human understanding.

"There has been no other time in the history of human beings upon our planet where so many humans have had knowledge of the existence of so many other humans," exclaimed Fuller.

He described how the vast increase in knowledge that has occurred in the 20th century has the potential of "liberating mankind from the clutches of poverty, pestilence and war."

First, however, human beings have to learn to deal with the totality of their planet and the needs of the rest of their fellow beings," Fuller believes.

"Man gradually survived the evolutionary process by learning how to cope with his environment. The vast knowhow accumulation that has taken place in our time has given us the ability to take care of everyone on this planet.

"The world is rapidly becoming integrated, not isolated. Sixty per cent of the humanity now experiences a higher standard of living than the richest king did when I was a child."

Fuller believes the world is not experiencing a period of dwindling natural resources, as some scientists have suggested, but that we are learning "to do more things with less materials."

Advocating a new way of thinking and a design revolution, Fuller says there is not only a hope for human beings, but a future. He believes advances in science engineering and technology will soon make politics and war obsolete.

"Twenty-three years from now all humanity could enjoy very high standards of living if we would stop our outmoded thinking of national, local and personal survival.

"We should begin to look out for one another. There is enough to go around for everyone. It is just a matter of realizing how we can use the total."

Fuller said world society has changed so drastically in recent years that it is almost impossible to predict 10 years in the future, let alone 30.

"We can begin to put the highest hope in our young, for they are the ones who are receptive to the new knowledge, the rapidly changing world. The young are ready for the new leadership."

BACK ON THE 'MAINLINE'

San Dimas got back on the "mainline" for the first time in 67 years Saturday as an Amtrak train made an unscheduled stop to help open a big Western art show. The city has not been scheduled stop on the Santa Fe rail line since 1910, although trains sometimes stopped for ticketed passengers as recently as 1930. Mayor Marvin Ersher welcomed Western artist Easy Cheino, right, as latter stopped off train for American Indian and Cowboy Artist Society show. The art exhibit continues today at San Dimas Civic Center.

The show, sponsored by the American Indian and Cowboy Artist Society, will run from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. concluding a three-day run which opened Friday evening.

The art exhibition and sale got a boost Saturday with the unscheduled stop by an Amtrak train at the old railroad station on Monte Vista Avenue. It was the first train stop in San Dimas since at least 1930. The station is now used by the San Dimas Chamber of Commerce which helped sponsor the exhibition.

Doctors' group supports strike

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Leaders of the California Council of Anesthesiologists voted unanimously Saturday to support a "paper strike" by doctors working in state mental hospitals.

The California State Employed Physicians Association began the strike at Porterville State Mental Hospital April 14 to protest what they say are deteriorating conditions in all 11 state institutions.

Association spokesmen said that the Porterville doctors are refusing to sign medical forms needed by the state to collect money, and that the strike could spread to other hositals.

Dr. Seymour Wallace, president of the anesthesiologists' council, said his group could go out on a sympathy strike, but added, "We hope sanity will prevail in Sacramento."

Doctors in the state's mental hospitals have demanded that the state health department reform the doctor-patient ratio and its recently enacted guidelines limiting the dosage of certain psychotropic drugs, such as stelazine and thorazine.

Wallace said his council would send a telegram to state Health Department director Jerome Lackner, demanding that the current doctor-patient ratio of 45-to-1 be reduced to 20-to-1, and that the "cookbook" guidlines restricting psychotropic drugs be revoked.

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — More than 125 members of the Titanic Historical Society gathered Saturday for a weekend convention to mark the 65th anniversary of one of history's worst maritime disasters.

Two survivors, Frank J.W. Goldsmith of Lexington, Ohio, and Mrs. John Synder of Minneapolis, Minn., were on hand to recall their personal experiences, as Titanic buffs wandered through memorabilia and exhibits showing front-page newspaper accounts of the sinking.

There were also displays of the White Star Line's trio of luxury ships — the Titanic, the Olympic and the Britannic.

The Titanic, which had been billed as unsinkable because of its many safety devices, sank April 15, 1912, after striking an iceberg on its maiden voyage from Southampton, England, to New York. Of the 2,224 persons believed aboard, only 706 were saved.

Edward Kamuda, co-founder of Titanic Historical Society, estimates that 120 survivors are still living, ranging in age from 70 to 95.

The society is interested in raising the wreck of the Titanic from the ocean floor, but this would be almost impossible, society vice president William Tantum said.

The ship was almost certainly demolished when it sank, because it struck the ocean floor at an estimated 200 miles an hour, he said.

In addition, the exact location is not known. There are five possible sites for the wreck, Tantum said, and all of them are 3 miles below the surface.

The wreck is presently owned by a silk-dye worker in Britain who bought it from Lloyds of London for the reasonable price of about $50, Tantum said.

On Sunday at 10 a.m. a memorial service for victims of the sinking was planned. On Friday, the U.S. Coast Guard's International Ice Patrol dropped a wreath on the spot where the Titanic is believed to have gone down.

Man dies of sore tooth

MIAMI (AP) — An autopsy has determined that Willie Moore's sore tooth caused his death, doctors said Saturday.

"He died from a toothache," said Dr. Ronald K. Wright, deputy chief medicial examiner.

"He complained of shortness of breath and trouble swallowing," a hospital spokesman said. "He did not appear in any unusual distress."

Dr. Wright said a normally healthy man would have survived such a tooth infection.

The death was classified as Ludwig's Angina. William Frederick Von Ludwig (1790-1865) was a German surgeon who first reported death from a toothache.

Pair jailed in stabbing of two men

Two men were arrested in Pomona early Saturday morning following a stabbing and fight with knives and chains in the 10500 block of Mills Avenue in Montclair.

Kenneth Penn, 23, and Fernando Clarke, 22, were arrested by Pomona police on Park Avenue north of Holt Avenue shortly after Frank Hernandez, 30, and Jose Galarza, 21, were stabbed.

According to Montclair police Penn and Clarke became involved in an altercation with Sandra Smith, 20, and Renee Scheufile, 21, around 2 a.m. on Mills Avenue. When Hernandez and Galarza came to the aid of the two women, a fight broke out with Hernandez and Galarza receiving the knife wounds.

Hernandez was treated for multiple knife wounds at Montclair Doctors Hospital and released. Galarza was treated for a laceration of the head and released. Miss Smith received a minor cut and Miss Scheufile complained of pain from blows to the head and abdomen. but neither of the women required hospitalization.

BEAUTY STRIPPED

School housing problems studied

The future of San Antonio High School curriculum, a report on the feasibility of placing 7th and 8th grade students at Sycamore Elementary School and a report on school housing problems in light of development in the northeast portion of the city will be considered by the Claremont school board Monday evening at Mountain View Elementary School, 851 Santa Clara Ave., Claremont.

From 7 to 8 p.m. students of the school will present music and drama activites for the board. The board will then meet informally with those in attendance from 7:45 to 8 p.m.

The report on San Antonio is broad based and expected to touch on a number of points including the future of a permanent facility for the school.

The housing boom in the northeast portion of the district has created an imbalance in the school enrollment causing something of a decline in the schools in the southern portion of the district and an increase in enrollment to the north.

The board will also hear a report on the expiring terms of members of the district advisory committee.

Project study slated

Plans and specifications for two major public works projects will be considered for adoption by the Pomona City Council Monday night.

The two projects, new maintenance facilities and a heliport for the city's police helicopters, will be financed with a $1.3 million federal grant already received.

The new maintenance facilities, replacing buildings constructed almost 70 years ago, will cost about $1.1 million and will be built at the city yards on Monterey Avenue west of White Avenue.

The heliport facility will be constructed at Brackett Field in La Verne. It will house the aircraft and also include a maintenance area.

Control of rent probed

A discussion of a possible rent control law, sought by mobile home owners, is scheduled to highlight the La Verne City Council meeting Monday night.

The meeting starts at 7:30.

City Manager George Caswell says the item is included without recommendations. He said that even though a state rent control law is now under consideration in Sacramento, the council may want to have its own ordinance.

The regulation is requested by the homeowners who claim their rent of spaces at mobile home parks has risen as much as 60 per cent in the past three years.

Book fair set Monday

North San Antonio Elementary School, 2181 N. San Antonio Ave., Pomona will hold a Book Fair from Monday through Thursday. Books will be available for browsing and for sale.

Hours will be 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The public is invited.

Heat collected through ceiling vents

EDITOR'S NOTE: You say your boss gets more out of you than your 35 or 40 hours a week. You may be right. And one company, AT&T, uses body heat to help keep the place warm.

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
AP Science Editor

BASKING RIDGE, N.J. (AP) — When Dick and Jane and Boa and Mary come to work in the morning they become living furnaces to help heat their offices.

Heat is collected through ceiling vents by fans and used to heat water. In turn the hot water surrenders heat to air from the outside mixed with recycled air.

Offices and corridors can be heated to 65 to 85 degrees. Rarely does an electric boiler have to be turned on unless outside the temperature drops below 15 degrees.

The saving in oil and energy is startling.

A person of average size radiates or wastes 350 BTU's (British thermal units) of heat per hour about the same as a 100 watt bulb says William Draper assistant manager for AT&T's energy conservation program here. One BTU is the heat required to raise the temperature of one pound of water by one degree Fahrenheit.

The saving each month from body heat is equivalent to enough oil to heat an average size house for a year, Draper estimates. Or it would exceed the energy in the gasoline needed to drive a car daily for one month the 460 miles round trip from New York to Washington, D.C.

A person's body heat comes from food turned into simple fuels, measured in calories . . . or in BTU's.

A heavier person produces more heat. Excitement and physical activity boost the output. And some people have a higher metabolism.

What is unusual they say is total recovery of heat and control by a central computer which is a busy "brain" not only for the heating system but for about a dozen other tasks in the building, with some 2 million square feet of space.

The Minneapolis-Honeywell H-316 computer permits an employe to order less or more heat or light for his office. It keeps track of carbon monoxide levels in a 3,000 car garage and turns on fans to reduce any hazard. It cuts off fans or other non essential electric equipment when brown outs threaten. It also monitors security guard operations.

SHE HELPS — Marietta Brower does her part to help heat the giant AT&T headquarters in Basking Ridge, N.J. The modern facility uses body heat as a power source and Miss Brower's body is part of the fuel reserve. The development may be the thing of the future.

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE CITY COUNCIL.

The City Council are the people's elected representatives. In carrying out their duties, they and they alone are responsible to see that the City Government is run properly, responsibly, economically, and in keeping with the desires and wishes of the people. It is the responsibility of the City Administration to implement the policies, programs, and procedures defined by the City Council.

PUBLIC SAFETY.

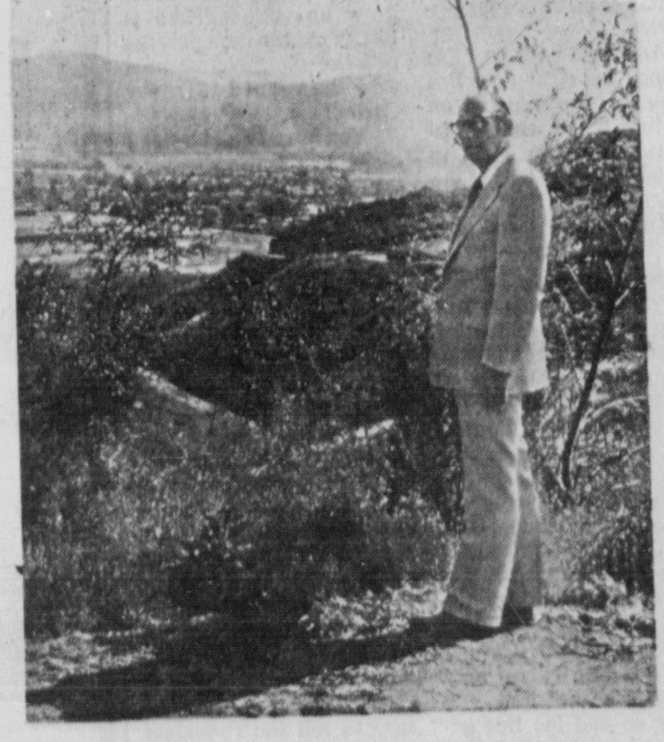
Our City must be made safe — obviously this must be the top priority in any decisions made by the council. Pomona's residents deserve safe homes and safe streets and deserve freedom from fear of crime. Without accomplishing this, it will be difficult to take the necessary steps to move Pomona forward.

RESTORATION OF POMONA's CIVIC PRIDE.

Traditionally, Pomona has been the center of Government, Education, Trade, Commerce, and Cultural activities for the entire valley. Pomona must work hard to regain and hold its position of leadership within the valley.

Carefully planned and implemented programs can accomplish this goal, but it will take the co-operation of all segments of the community to achieve this.

Pomona's residents want to see their city succeed, given dynamic leadership they will work together to gain a restoration of civic pride.



G. STANTON SELBY

G. STANTON SELBY - THE INDEPENDENT CANDIDATE WHO IS FREE FROM THE INFLUENCE OF PRESSURE GROUPS AND SPECIAL INTERESTS.

What he doesn't know about politics isn't worth knowing

Tip O'Neill: a blend of wit, high spirits and power . . .

EDITOR'S NOTE: He's one of the most powerful men in Washington and what he doesn't know about politics isn't worth knowing. He's also one of the most entertaining men, a blend of high spirits, wit and the most retentive memory in the Western World. That's Tip O'Neill, Speaker of the House who will have much to do with the course of the Carter administration.

By SAUL PETT
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — In Jimmy Carter's pious Washington where all the leaders at both ends of the avenue are new and the territorial limits are still undefined there stands in impressive bulk, Thomas Philip "Tip" O'Neill, Speaker of the House, captain of one of the great majorities in history, third in the line of presidential succession, staunch defender of the Democratic faith, jealous guardian of Congressional pride, graduate cum laude of the Jim Curley school of charm, veteran of the old politics, interpreter of the new.

"We'll get along just fine" he says of the President.

"The Georgia style of politics is flowery, sweetness, brotherly love. Ours is rough, tough, direct, terse. The results are the same."

Getting along with O'Neill will be crucial to Carter's ambitious plans for reforming the body and soul of government. So, the President had the O'Neills over to dinner recently at the White House. Just the O'Neills and Carters.

While he goes often to the White House for working sessions, O'Neill seldom accepts social invitations there in small or large groups.

He much prefers a night at Duke Zeibert's corned beef emporium, talking with other members of the Massachusetts delegation, sipping a Canadian Club and Fresca, telling old Curley stories, singing now and then in a baritone bellow.

Like many of his countrymen, Tip O'Neill had to learn to take Jimmy Carter seriously. He recalls their first meeting in January 1975 when the man from Plains stood at the bottom of the presidential polls with one half of one per cent.

"He comes in and he says 'Tip you know in your heart that Teddy Kennedy is not a candidate and Hubert Humphrey won't be a candidate and Scoop Jackson is going to be out of it after three or four primaries."

"And then he says, 'I'm telling you right now I'm going to be nominated on the first ballot without opposition and I'm going to be elected President of the United States.' "

"And what did you say, Tip?" "I laughed.

"But by God, he did everything he said he was going to do. Now he went out and made promises to change the ethics of politics in America, to reorganize the departments, to stimulate the economy and come up with a national energy policy. I have every confidence he can do these things and we're already started. The guy instills confidence when you get down there at the White House.

"You know, on the television, he had the seater on and the fire going, and up on the Hill they're saying, 'Did you ever see such cornball.' Then they went home over the weekend like I did.

"And the following Monday Congress comes back and now they're saying, 'Say didn't Carter do a terrific job on television the other night?' "

O'Neill, 64, is a politician of impeccable Irish credentials — product of parochial schools, son of an Irish city councilman grandson of a bricklayer who left County Cork during the potato famine. Tip O'Neill served in the Massachusetts House of Representatives from 1936 to 1952. He became the state's first Democratic Speaker. He was elected to Congress in 1952, on the seat vacated by Jack Kennedy who went to the Senate that year. In one precinct, Tip got four fewer votes than Kennedy did for the Senate.

One reason O'Neill has remained in Congress 25 years, moving up the ladder from Majority Whip to Leader to Speaker this year is that he never neglects his regular "ethnic walk" back in his district. To wit:

The delicatessen run by Italians, the vegetable market run by Greeks, the saloon run by an Irishman, the hardware store run by a Jew, the "Chinaman's where I pick up my shirts" and "John the shoemaker whom I've known 50 years never knew his last name but he's a lovable guy." O'Neill who has a story for everyone, recently unloaded this one on John herewith reduced to its essentials:

Man goes into a shoemaker, says he left a pair of shoes there 10 years ago but lost his ticket. Shoemaker says he remembers. Are the shoes still there, per chance. "Sure", says the shoemaker and he produces them. "They'll be ready Tuesday."

Among his peers in Congress O'Neill has the reputation of being honest, unpretentious, true to his thinking. He was, for example, the first Democratic leader to oppose Lyndon Johnson publicly on the Vietnam war, in 1968. Though they are totally unlike the politicians he grew up with, O'Neill is full of admiration for the new breed of Congressmen and has told Jimmy Carter:

"You have to understand these people, they're very different. The days of Sam Rayburn telling freshman Congressmen to be seen but not heard that they've got to go along to get along, are over.

"If you tackle this Congress, you're not tackling the Georgia legislature. You're tackling able, talented, dedicated more educated, more independent, sincere, thinking people who since the 93rd Congress have come to Washington just like you did. They too ran against the Establishment.

"They are close to their constituents, they have their confidence. (O'Neill didn't think it was necessary to tell the President that 75 per cent of the new members ran ahead of him last year.) And if you start telling these people they're wrong they'll go back to their areas where they used to attack past administrations. They'll think nothing of attacking you."

O'Neill says the only friction he has had so far with the Carter White House was because of the new staff there, not the President. That was the day he learned in the press that Elliot Richardson, a Massachusetts Republication, was appointed roving ambassador. For that transgression, he flayed a senior White House aide. "A man ought to be informed beforehand about something in his area," he says. "That's simple politics."

The new Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives says that Congress still has a way to go to restore the proper balance of power between it and the White House.

"We have to make sure that we are co-equal with the President, that we have input, that we don't get into a period of frustration and vetoes. And we've got to get a better press so that the public understands we're co-equals especially the House. Our problem is we're always being overshadowed by the Senate. Which reminds me of a story.

"There's a banquet in my state and I'm sharing a platform with our two senators who are of course famous. Afterward, 200 people come up and ask for Ted Kennedy's autograph and 100 come up and ask for Brook's autograph and 18 come up and ask me for a favor."

His 12-year struggle isn't over

EDITOR'S NOTE: Cesar Chavez has won the fight with the Teamsters for the right to organize farm workers in California. But his 12-year struggle isn't over. From California, he eventually will launch a national campaign. Before that, though, the growers will get his attention once again.

By ROBERT McEWEN
Associated Press Writer

COACHELLA (AP) — It's been nearly 12 years since a slightly-built farm worker named Cesar Chavez organized his people in the fields and vineyards of California to the battle cry of "Viva la Causa."

Looking back today at the long struggle, Chavez says: "I learned what life teaches all generations, that one must fight for justice and truth. You can't sit around and complain. You've got to get down to it and make demands."

Now 50, Chavez has just weathered perhaps his most serious challenge with the decision of the Teamsters Union to leave the field to his United Farm Workers.

Since he first asked an entire nation to stop eating grapes to help him win recognition from the growers, Chavez' farm workers have won new contracts, survived bloody battles with the Teamsters and brought a measure of social change to the farm lands.

To his people, he is part messiah, part teacher. To his adversaries, he is a demagogue who has damaged agriculture by divisive strikes, political alliances and national boycotts, a labor leader who can't run his own union by professional standards.

His tactics and zeal are unchanged. He has sacrificed his private life for the union. He can't remember when he last saw a movie. His credo is self-discipline and denial.

"There is no life apart from the union," he says. "It is totally fulfilling."

One recent Sunday, thousands of the some 40,000 Mexican-Americans, Filipino and Arab farm workers who joined his UFW turned out to march behind their leader. Mile-long, uneven columns of men, women and children formed along the dusty shoulders of Highway 111 near this small desert town.

They sang religious songs, shouted "viva la Causa" and carried banners emblazoned with the UFW emblem — black eagle on red background.

The steady buzz of the crowd increased to a roar when Chavez, burdened by a back brace and the effects of a 14-day fast, appeared at the end of the line and began trotting alongside the columns of marchers to take his place at the front.

Walking at the head of the column a few minutes later, he impatiently dismissed questions about the adulation he received.

"People fail to understand that it's a mutual thing," he said. "What I have with these people developed during the formative stages of the union. We've been through a lot together and developed solidarity. I know a lot of them personally.

"I feel like I'm the same as any other. We are all involved. They shout 'Chavez' but they might as well shout 'Perez' or 'Martinez.'"

The affection people display for Chavez is more than brotherly love. They feel he brings results.

A Coachella farm worker named Ramiro Gastelum, who brought his young son and aged father to a crossroads to watch Chavez pass by, explained in Spanish what the UFW means to him.

"Sure I follow Chavez. Chavez means more money, more medical," he said.

While it's hard to generalize about salaries and benefits statewide, which vary depending on the time contracts were signed, the UFW notes that before the union struck the Delano grape country, workers were getting about 85 cents to $1 an hour as they had for about 15 years.

Today, Delano area workers get $3.54 an hour. They also have medical plans, pensions, vacations, holidays and employer contributions to an economic development fund that pays for clinics and educational programs. None of these benefits existed in 1965, the union says.

The famed boycotts of the late 1960s and early 1970s are mostly memory today. Chavez says the union officially still is boycotting Gallo grapes and non-UFW lettuce, but he admits neither is being pursued very vigorously.

Whether the boycotts are revived depends largely on events in Coachella, where the UFW four years ago passed through its darkest hour, losing 30 of its 31 contracts to the Teamsters.

Those agreements have expired and with the Teamsters out of the picture, Chavez is trying to win his old contracts back through state-supervised elections.

"The eyes of growers around the state are on Coachella," says Chavez. "We'll see how they treat us this time around. If things aren't shaping up, we'll take them on with boycotts again."

Chavez first gained nationwide prominence when he struck table grape growers in Central California in 1965. After a five-year boycott, Delano area growers agreed to sign a contract with the UFW.

But in 1973, growers refused to renew those contracts and signed with the Teamsters instead. They contended Chavez had mismanaged UFW hiring halls. Conceding some problems, Chavez laid them to inexperience on his part.

Chavez struck, organizing protests that resulted in 3,500 arrests for violating court-ordered limits on picketing at ranches. He ended the strike and resumed the boycott after a UFW member was shot to death on a picket line.

The California Legislature, spurred by Gov. Jerry Brown, enacted a law in 1975 to guarantee farm labor elections. Voting began during that fall's harvest, and the UFW won almost half of the 406 elections in the next four months.

But the election process stalled in early 1976 after the Agricultural Labor Relations Board ran out of money. Chavez then began negotiating with the Teamsters. Last month an agreement was announced that gave the UFW sole jurisdiction in the fields and left the Teamsters in control of cannery workers.

The UFW had about 70 contracts in the state early this year, down from a 1973 high of 250 but better than the low of 12 when the growers first switched to the Teamsters.

Chavez says California will demand his attention for a long time before he launches a national campaign. He will not forecast a timetable.

"It depends on many things. We have to consolidate our gains here first. And the recession has slowed us down," he says. The two-year drought gripping the West will become more of a problem to the workers as time goes on.

With them came legions of clerks, muggers, bureaucrats and kings

Falling Apart: 'Cities' may be the root of most evil

EDITOR'S NOTE: Thousands of years ago man invented his grandest and most troublesome institution, the city. With it came legions of clerks, bureaucrats, muggers and kings. A new book by a British author looks at the urban world and suggests that city life itself may be the root of most evil.

By LEE MITGANG
AP Urban Affairs Writers

An Oxford Educated woman from the backlands of Wales says modern cities face two possible fates — both bleak — whether they're a healthy Dallas or a decaying New York.

A new book, "Falling Apart: The Rise and Fall of Urban Civilization" by Elaine Morgan, traces the history of the history of the idea of the city from the time the Israelites toppled Jericho to today when urban walls from New York to Bangkok threaten to crumble.

Ms. Morgan dismisses those who believe we could have a well oiled urbanized world that someone will find better ways to pick up garbage, wipe out poverty and bring city and suburb into harmony.

Her book says that the world either will continue its present course toward huge cities and what she calls an unsolved mess, or people will learn that "small is stable; it gets you further from 'Live now pay later' and closer to 'pay now, live further.'

The problem lies in why cities exist. Ms. Morgan believes that perhaps 5,000 years ago farmers settled on some unusually fertile land and found that they could produce more than they could use.

"At some point the beneficiaries of the work became separated from the performers," she says. "Somebody got the bright idea: 'With crops like that if he'd only put his back into it he could grow enough for two and the second one could be me.'"

It didn't take long to learn that crops could be taxed. And artisans could build tools for the farmer, the better to produce even more food. suddenly the farmer was a service consumer and those who provided the services needed his food. Then laws and accountants were needed. Rulers armies and gods lent legitimacy to the enterprise and cities were born.

The slogan "all roads lead to Rome" takes on an especially sinister meaning in Ms. Morgan's book. Cities always have apped rural surroundings of goods talent and hope. Even now, when most cities can only promise newcomers a slum, hope of the better life for their children draws the young and talented from hills to the city.

But something has gone wrong.

Along the way, cities learned that substituting coal and oil for muscle power led to undreamed-of wealth. To impoverished rural people and immigrants, the industrial cities seemed paved with gold.

Cities developed new services, and services to serve services.

But lately, the party is ending for older and larger cities. Those living outside the established metropolitan area began to realize "If you can't lick 'em join 'em."

New metropolitan areas sprang up in the sunbelt, near the coal fields in places where larger more modern factories could be built. The wealth that older cities once monopolized began to seep. It now is flooding into the newer cities.

The New Yorks are decaying, the Dallases seem to be thriving. But there's a catch.

Ms. Morgan says the bigger and more concentrated a city is, the more it tends to favor services over production and the poor arrive ill equipped to enter an increasingly white-collar job market.

Thus cities tend to grow hollow and decay at the core where the poor collect. Living in eyeshot of minks and Cadillacs it's hard for the poor to believe that here is no money to help them. Hence crime fear and despair.

Worse, cities running on oil power now must face the prospect of power running out.

Ms. Morgan concludes that what happens to cities in the future depends on how mankind faces this energy crisis.

Almanac chooses world wonders

CHICAGO (AP) — More than 2,000 years have passed since Antipater of Sidon listed Seven Wonders of the World as a sightseeing guide for ancient Greeks on tour. In that time, all but the great pyramids of Egypt have passed into oblivion.

But a lot of genius has come and gone since the glory of Greece faded. To bring things up to date, the 1977 Rand McNally Traveler's Almanac combed the earth to make its own selection of 101 Wonders of the Modern World.

The Almanac's wonders include many old familiar favorites. There's the Greek's own Parthenon and the Romans' Forum, Colosseum and Pompeii. The Taj Mahal, the Eiffel Tower, St. Peter's Basilica and Westminister Abbey also made the top 101, as did Stonehenge, the Kremlin, the Empire State Buiding and the Grand Canyon.

Perhaps less well known are the walled medieval towns of Carcassonne and Rhodes, the underground Salt Cathedral of Colombia, the rock temples of Ellora and Ajanta in India, the rose-red city of Petra in Jordan, and Rhodesia's mysterious Zimbabwe Ruins, built entirely without mortar.

Other selections include the fjords of Norway, the Great Mosque of Cordoba, Leningrad's Hermitage Museum, Old Jerusalem, the palace and gardens of Versailles, the Church of St. Sophia in Istanbul, the Red Fort of Delhi, Hong Kong Harbor and the temples and tombs of Luxor.

Named among man's newest wonders are the ultramodern city of Brasilia, rising like a futuristic vision from the midst of Brizil's wilderness; Gateway Arch in St. Louis, the tallest man-made monument on earth; Japan's bullet trains, whizzing past age—old temples at 130 miles per hour; and Cape Canaveral, launch site of the first men to walk on the moon.

DAISY, DAISY . . .

One out of five 'Pomonans' are using public welfare aid

But nearly 44,000 jobless fathers have found southland employment

By BOB NAGEY
PB Staff Writer

A slight but steady decline in the number of hard-core welfare recipients in the valley is being reported by the Los Angeles County Department of Social Services.

The drop, approximately 5 per cent here and 10 per cent throughout the county over the past five years, is the result of an improved employment market, which, among other things, has returned nearly 44,000 jobless fathers in the county to work, according to Keith Comrie, director of the department.

Despite the reduction, about one out of every eight persons in the county — one of 10 in the valley and more than one of five in Pomona — is still on some type of welfare, latest figures compiled by the department shows.

This compares with one out of two persons in Watts and Compton, and one out of every three persons in Long Beach. In the City of Los Angeles, one out of six persons is on welfare.

Comrie said the declining figures are hard to spot because they are clouded by a tremendous increase in the number of those who have taken advantage of Medi-Cal. Persons getting Medi-Cal aid rose from 53,000 in 1971 to 175,000 last year in the county.

But every other classification in the county has shown a drop from five years ago. Aid to families with dependent children went down 13,000; general relief to individuals dropped 5,100, and food stamps only programs decreased more than 6,000.

Comrie said there were two basic reasons why the number of hard-core recipients in Pomona did not drop as much as the county average.

One was the influx of Vietnamese refugees to Pomona 18 months ago. Comrie said 410 Vietnamese out of a total of 3,962 brought to the county are on welfare in Pomona, but the costs are paid by the federal government.

The other was cheap housing here until last year. Comrie said the average welfare family of a mother and two children gets an allotment of $338 a month. Out of that it is supposed to spend $109 on housing.

Because during the early 1970s there were plenty of vacant dwellings in Pomona, rent was cheap here and welfare recipients were attracted to the city.

However, those rentals are now filled and the rates have, more or less, caught up with other parts of the Southland. As a result, the migration reportedly slowed down to a trickle this year.

The welfare department says its latest tabulation is as of Oct. 1. Those figures show that at that time the county had 846,000 welfare clients. The Los Angeles County side of the valley, with an estimated population of 215,000, had 22,054 recipients. Of that total, 18,679 lived in Pomona, about 22 per cent of the city's population.

According to the tabulation, the recipients appear to have a stronghold in Pomona. With barely more than 1 per cent of the county's population, welfare clients here account for five per cent of the aid to families of dependent children, and 6¾ per cent of all the food-stamp purchases, the two largest aid categories.

William Hutchinson, head of the Pomona office of the welfare department, said not only inexpensive housing has been a factor in Pomona's sizable welfare population; so has the depressed job market.

He said he has been unable to get statistical information on how the area fares with other districts as far as employment is concerned, but he pointed out that there has been a shift in the shopping areas away from the central areas.

Although Hutchinson discounted the influence of the Welfare Rights Organization, a nationwide nonprofit group which protects the interest of welfare recipients, as a factor in the size of the Pomona rolls, some of his subordinates disagreed.

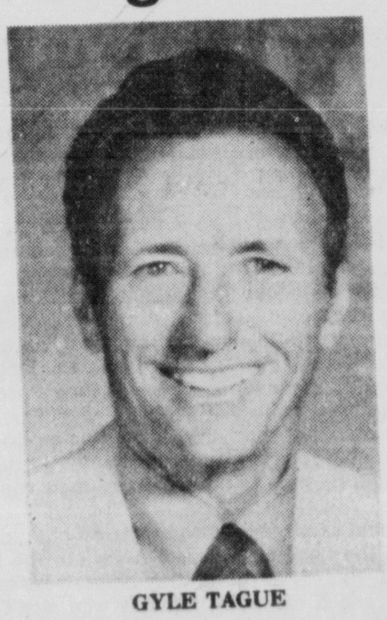
Tague, Neward to spearhead Claremont YMCA fund raising



GYLE TAGUE

Gyle Tague, principal of the Sumner Elementary School, has been appointed chairman of the Claremont campaign to solicit $250,000 as Claremont's share of the Pomona Valley YMCA's $760,000 fund-raising drive to construct new YMCA facilities for the college community.

Theodore C. Neward, chairman of the board of Neward Enterprises, Inc. a plastics research and development firm in Cucamonga, will assist Tague and a group of community solicitors as honorary chairman, according to Al Smith, Pomona YMCA president. Theme of the capital fund program is "The Promise of Youth."

The Claremont fund effort will be the largest of the current campaign to expand and modernize existing facilities at the Pomona central branch headquarters and at the San Dimas-La Verne branch. The central branch is seeking $175,000, San Dimas-La Verne has a goal of $185,000 and $150,000 has been earmarked for the metro operation, said Larry Woods, YMCA general director.

The Claremont drive leaders and their crew of solicitors are considering several different land sites for a new YMCA building which would provide offices for the leadership, a teaching pool for swimming, an outdoor recreation area, basketball and volleyball courts and a jogging track.

Tague, an employe of the Claremont School District for the past 25 years, has also been active in a variety of community affairs most of that time.

He is past president of the Claremont Coordinating Council, a past vice president of the Claremont Kiwanis Club, past chairman of the Claremont Case Conference Committee and president of the Claremont YMCA board of managers. A former resident of Redlands where he also was active in YMCA programs, Tague is married and the father of two children.

Neward, a Claremont resident for 23 years, has been a supporter of area YMCA programs since 1949. And before that, he maintained a YMCA membership in Kenosha, Wis. Locally, he has been an active member of the YMCA steering committee, a past member of the board of directors and past chairman of the building and physical activities committees. Neward still uses the YMCA pool facilities and swims an average of 800 laps every month.

James Kostoff is general chairman of the combined effort and Charles T. Richardson is directing the steering committee which consists of 23 civic leaders from all sections of the valley.

Individuals or organizations wishing to make contributions or to offer assistance in any way should contact Larry Woods at 629-9133.

Pomona residents to chose new mayor, council members

By ED PRATHER
PB Staff Writer

Pomona residents will elect a new mayor and two City Council members Tuesday in one of the most unique and interesting general municipal elections in recent years.

And in the special 4th District race, necessitated when Bader resigned the seat to run for mayor, are John Stanley, Gertha Speiginer and G. Stanton Selby.

The race for the 3rd District seat, held by Benjamin Ochoa, which would normally be decided in this election was eliminated last month when Ochoa won re-election in the primary.

RICHARD BROWNELL

As was expected, the most colorful aspect of the election has centered on the mayor's race, where Bader and Brownell have traded sharp personal attacks in an image oriented campaign.

Although Bader led the primary voting impressively, gaining 38 per cent of the vote to Brownell's 21 per cent, Brownell has portrayed Bader as the "handpicked successor" of the defeated incumbent mayor, Ray Lepire. Besides Bader, Brownell has also turned his guns on City Administrator Jerrold Gonce and Police Chief Richard Slaght, both of whom Brownell says he would fire if elected.

Bader has counter attacked with the charge that Brownell helped create the city's current problems during his two previous terms as mayor. He has asked citizens not to "repeat" those mistakes by returning Brownell to office.

The biggest bombshell of the campaign was dropped by Bader when he revealed that Brownell had claimed a homeowner's property tax exemption on a house at Dana Point in Orange County, claiming that Brownell was not actually a resident of the city.

Bader, 36, would be one of the youngest mayors ever elected in Pomona if he wins. He has twice been elected to the City Council.

Basically a conservative by philosophy, Bader has also sought higher office, running in the local Republican Assembly primary in 1974, when one of his opponents coincidentally was Brownell. They both lost.

Bader has his own property management company. He is married and has two young sons. He resides at 1863 N. Gibbs St.

Brownell, 57, is one of the most colorful and loquacious politicians ever to serve in Pomona, and he has served often, twice being elected to the City Council before serving as mayor from 1967 to 1969 and 1971 to 1973.

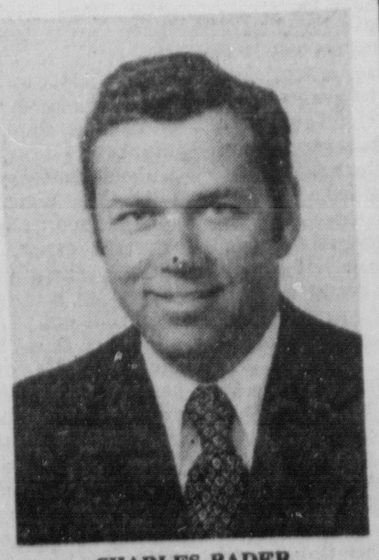
His earthy flamboyant style has more than once been the major issue for his opponent.

This year marks the sixth consecutive time he has run for mayor of Pomona, the last two times being defeated by Lepire.

A self-employed insurance broker, Brownell is also basically a conservative by philosophy. He lists his residence as 1094 N. Park Ave., where his business is also located.

Some bitterness has also been exchanged between the candidates in the 2nd District.

The challenger in that race, William Koch, has run a highly visible campaign emphasizing his experience as a private businessman. He has charged that Wright, a retired educator, does not have an understanding of businessmen's problems.



CHARLES BADER

Wright, who outpolled Koch 48 to 22 per cent in the primary, has campaigned on his record, emphasizing his two previous terms in office.

Like Brownell, although with less irectness, Wright has attacked City Administrator Gonce and has also been a critic of Police Chief Slaght.

Wright, 66, was first elected to the council in 1969. He has enjoyed solid support from the city's voters in each race he has run, with the exception of 1975 when he trailed both Lepire and Brownell in a bid for the mayor's post.

Koch, 57, has run for City Council on several previous occassions since moving to Pomona in 1950.

Koch operates an aluminum business as 1270 W. Mission Blvd., where he also resides with his wife, Eve.

Unlike the races for mayor and 2nd District councilman, the special race in Bader's resigned 4th District pits three political newcomers against each other.

All three have run rather low-keyed non-personal campaigns, each claiming to have the ability and judgement necessary to provide sound leadership.

While the candidates have not clashed on a personal basis, there can be no denying they present the voters with rather distinct choices.

Of the three, two of them, G. Stanton Selby and Gertha Speiginer, have been relatively well-known in the community for many years.

PB choices in city election

In Tuesday's municipal election the voters of Pomona are going to elect a new mayor and two council members.

The Progress Bulletin recommends the election of Charles Bader as mayor, and William Koch and John Stanley as councilmen.

Dick Brownell, who wants to be mayor again, has already served two terms and before that he was on the city council for eight years. He can be proud of his record in public office. However, putting him back in the mayor's chair would not, in our view, provide new leadership for the city.

We do believe, however, that the election of Charles Bader would provide Pomona with a new and dynamic chief executive with a good grasp of municipal management.

Bader's six years on the council have provided him with the background to adequately serve as the city's mayor for the next two years. We are confident that he can be a positive influence in developing a team approach to the problems the city faces in terms of new growth and the demand for new services.

Bader recognizes that the funding of city services is in the crisis stage and we agree with him that the mayor and council must seriously consider new, more efficient and less costly ways to provide city services.

Just as Brownell has had his opportunity to serve the city, so do we believe that Adrian Wright has run his course of councilmanic service, having served eight years.

We need a new outlook and therefore we recommend the election of his challenger, William Koch, who can bring a businessman's viewpoint to solving budgetary problems.

We admire the special qualities of the two other candidates, Gertha Speiginer, for many years an activist in the field of civil rights; and Stanton Selby, the highly respected director of the Pomona Concert Band.

However, we believe that John Stanley's business background makes him better prepared to serve as a council member.

We view the election of Bader, Koch and Stanley as being the practical way of achieving a five member council that will work together to administer the affairs of the city fairly and prudently.

Indian takers

"Red power" is on the march. Passamaquoddy and Penobscot Indians, assisted by a powerful ally, the Great White Father in Washington, are claiming five million acres of land in northern Maine that was wrongfully taken from their ancestors.

The Interior and Justice Departments say the claim is a valid one and have announced that unless an out-of-court settlement is reached by June 1, the federal government, as the Indians' guardian, will sue the state.

As Maine goes, so goes Ohio?

Could be. Inspired by their fellow Indians in Maine, the Iroquois are considering suing the federal government for damages over the loss of a vast tract of land in what is now northeastern Ohio.

"We have a historian studying the history of the area around Cleveland and Akron," says Beeman Logan, a Seneca chief in North Tonawanda, N.Y. "We will decide when that is complete whether to take it to court."

He adds that, unlike the Maine tribes, the Iroquois will probably ask for a monetary settlement rather than trying to repossess the land, although one Indian historian has suggested that part of a settlement might include turning over the Cuyahoga Valley National Park to the Indians for their use.

Also unlike the Maine situation, however, any claim by the Iroquois to land in Ohio may have a fatal defect. Their historians will not have to look very far to find that the area in question once belonged to the Erie nation, which the Iroquois were in the process of wiping out at the time the first French explorers arrived in the Great Lakes region.

What tribe the Eries took it from before that, nobodyknows. The Iroquois conquest was so thorough that there aren't any Eries left today to tell us. But the whole history of America before European colonization was one of constantly changing tribal jurisdictions, with one tribe taking over land previously occupied by another, sometimes peacefully, mostly through war. The tribes the first white settlers encountered just happened to be the most recent winners.

Thus if the Iroquois or any other Indian nation has a valid claim to land they took from somebody else by virtue of conquest, it would seem that the same should apply to the latest conqueror, the white man.

Freeing the Congress

Dear Editor:

With the income tax deadlines behind us I think this would be an appropriate time to examine a section of the tax form which deals more with Novembers than Aprils.

The voluntary checkoff for the Presidential Election Campaign Fund on the front of our federal tax forms was responsible for a quiet revolution in the United States last November. It enabled a President to be elected who is free from the burden of returning favors to the special interest big money contributors who in the past have used their giant contributions to wield undue influence with the White House.

We have through the voluntary contributions of more than 30 million taxpayers, who designated one dollar of their taxes for the fund, established a new system which has proven to work efficiently and fairly. And with the experience of one election under our belt we can now work to refine what little problems arose.

This widespread effort of so many Americans contrasts sharply with past Presidential elections where, as in 1972, when $20 million was given to one candidate by just 153 people, millionaires bought power in elections.

However, even though big money influence has been cleansed from our Presidential elections, Congressional elections are still being financed the old way — by special interests.

Twenty-two million dollars was contributed to Congressional elections by special interests in 1976 — nearly twice as much as in 1974, with the bulk of it going to incumbents.

The largest contributors were business groups, labor groups, medical groups, and dairy groups.

This tremendous flood of special interest money into Congressional elections can be directly attributed to the closing of Presidential candidates' coffers to these lobbying dollars.

These interest groups make contributions because it will make their lobbyist's jobs on Capitol Hill a lot easier. More than one lawmaker's door opened quicker to a lobbyist whose bosses just made a big contribution in the last election.

We can break the iron grip special interest lobbyists have on Congress through giant contributions by enacting a similar system to funding for Congressional elections as we have just seen work so well in the Presidential election.

It will free members of the Congress as it has freed the President.

If the public finahcing system is to continue to work in Presidential election, taxpayers must remember to check the "yes" box on the front of their tax form. It costs nothing extra!

If the public financing system is to be enlarged to include Congressional elections, we must let our representatives know we support it.

There are bills coming up in front of the Senate and the House that will do this. We must let our lawmakers know we want Congress freed!

Change resident law

Dear Editor:

Is a person who owns a business in Pomona and resides elsewhere an outsider? If this is true, I believe that most business people in Pomona are outsiders.

Let's stop kidding ourselves. Pomona needs all the brain power it can get, and I believe that the ordinance that requires that only a resident of Pomona can run for public office is as outmoded as the Model T. Let's abolish such an archaic ordinance and open public office to both owners of residental property and businesses.

We need to open every door to strong leadership. Pomona has stood still long enough.

Germ warfare: No protection

WASHINGTON — The Army has conducted hundreds of germ warfare tests in places like New York City's subway system and Washington's National Airport. Yet, incredibly, no one has bothered to prepare plans to protect the American citizenry from a biological attack.

The military has spent millions on ways to defend against biological warfare, but has concentrated only on protecting its own troops. The general population is supposed to be guarded against biological attack by the Public Health Service. Yet the agency admits it has no program whatsoever to protect the public.

This glaring deficiency in the national defense occurs at a time when military analysts fear that the United States is becoming increasingly vulnerable to a biological attack from the Soviet Union.

The United States destroyed the last of its offensive biological weapons in 1973 after an agreement with the Soviets to ban germ warfare. But worried Pentagon officials say they have no way of verifying whether the Soviets have actually completed their end of the agreement.

Contends one Army official with access to the intelligence reports: "The Soviets clearly intend to maintain an offensive capability, an ability to fight war in a chemical environment."

The agencies of government, nevertheless, keep passing the buck instead of protecting the public. Declared an Army spokesman: "The Army isn't supposed to protect the general population from biological warfare."

Echoed a spokesman for the Public Health Service: "We don't have a role. There is no formal function for preparedness against a germ warfare attack in the Public Health Service."

Footnote: The Agriculture Dept. developed defoliants for use in Vietnam in the 1960s. It has the responsibility to defendthe nation's animals and crops against chemical warfare. But the Agriculture Dept., too, has no defensive program. Sen. Edward Kennedy, D.-Mass., is trying to insure that someone will protect the public from a chemical attack.

DEATH LIST: We recently called attention to a "death list" of imprisoned Argentinians, most of them people of prominence, who reportedly are marked for execution. The Argentine embassy hastily assured us several of the prisoners "have been released."

But the State Dept., which had learned of the Argentine government's message to us, warned us in a straightforward note: "In practice, this has not meant necessarily that individuals have regained their liberty, because in some cases there reportedly are pending civil or criminal charges.

"In other cases, the individual who was 'released by the executive' does not reappear." In other words, he is still being held, or has been killed, despite the official reassurance.

WASHINGTON WHIRL — President Carter's pledge to fill only three out of every four vacant government positions, it turns out, won't apply to his own political appointees. The President can appoint about 1,000 top executives at salaries ranging from $47,500 to $66,000 annually. An internal White House memo reveals that all these positions will be filled as fast as the Republicans vacate them, not just three out of four.

— We reported on March 10 that Florida consumers were overcharged $3.7 million for oil that was sold back and forth between middlemen. We identified Florida Power as one of the companies involved in the overcharging. Many readers assumed we meant Florida Power and Light of Miami. Actually, we meant Florida Power Corporation of St. Petersburg. We apologize for our vagueness.

When the dentist's tooth aches

Dentistry has been described as the only profession dedicated to improving itself out of business.

Every responsible dentist urges his patients to "take care of your own teeth" — to practice "self-discipline."

And collectively, through local dental associations with American Dental Assn. (ADA) guidance dentists discipline themselves.

Government snoopervision of dentistry is less in direct proportion to the degree to which this profession has policed itself.

The ADA Council on Dental Care Program encourages local societies to promote a good dental service and to ostracize anything less.

This is "peer review" — dentists "watching over the shoulder" of dentists — in the interest of cleaning up problems so that government won't have to.

When abuses of Medicare and Medicaid were revealed in some instances in the state of Georgia, the professionals of that state promptly put their own house in order.

Separately, in reviewing advertising claims, the ADA conducts its own examination and evaluation of each product — altogether as strict as any bureaucratic scrutiny — so that government won't have to.

Manufacturers' advertising claims for their product must not only be accurate in fact but also in application — and proof must be available.

In education, five dental or dentistry-related associations scrutinize areas of their separate expertise — evaluating and accrediting only those dental education programs which meet exacting standards in basic sciences, clinical sciences, curriculum, dental auxiliary education, advanced education; even the financial management of the institution itself.

And the dental schools seek to ensure the enrollment only of students properly qualified and properly dedicated.

ADA accreditation is reserved only for those institutions which keep abreast of the very latest in scientific knowledge, methods and devices — so that government won't have to.

In any business or profession there are the mercenary shortcutters.

In dentistry there may be those who would pass off shoddy work when they've been trained to do better.

Or illicit intruders — bushwhackers — illegal dental mechanics who seek to make and market kitchen-chair dentures without professional training.

All these potentials for shortcomings and scores more are undergoing constant expert reappraisal. Dentistry, perhaps more than any other profession, is tested and graded from the inside out.

So when OSHA began to scrutinize the dentist's office for health hazards — radiation leakage, mercury vapor, sanitation — the government's watchdogs discovered that the professionals within the profession had already been there, testing, evaluating, correcting, improving. So that government, and insurers, and the courts won't have to.

Just in jest

We have often been told that one should never let the right hand know what the left hand is doing — a rule of procedure which seems to have been specially devised for the world of television. So much so that one sometimes gets to wondering just how inconsistent the television industry can get and still win friends and influence people. — Well, I never make an accusation without supplying an example. There was this public information program on which a government official pointed out all the little sacrifices and conservation efforts we citizens should make in order to help counteract the water shortage here in California. Following which came the station break and a commercial which enthusiastically described the joys and benefits of a shower massage.

Virginia Payette

Equal rights, equal pay

It's not even a law yet, but the Equal Rights Amendment is already proving one thing: state legislators scare easier than voters do.

But if you go by what most state residents say, you have to wonder why it's taking so long to get those last three states to ratify ERA. The people seem to be all for it.

The folks they can't convince are the male chauvinists in hold-out capitals, those courtly gentlemen who can't abide the idea that some "little woman" might have to support herself or (fate worse than death!) pay alimony . . . fight in a foxhole . . . or share a public bathroom.

All this proves is that the boys haven't done their homework. The only thing ERA guarantees is that "equality of rights under the law shall not be abridged or denied by the United States, or any state, on account of sex."

What this means (and I'd be willing to bet the legislators know it full well) is that women get an equal crack at any job they're qualified to do.

There's nothing in there about husbands not having to support their wives . . . or women being drafted for combat duty.

Actually, there's nothing new about that, either. Women have been paying alimony for years. And as for serving in combat zones, nurses have been doing that since Florence Nightingale learned to twirl a tourniquet.

As for that unisex bathroom bit, that's the pet pink herring peddled by Phyllis Schlafly and her militant moms. Although why that should scare anybody is a mystery, too. People have been using joint johns on airliners for almost 50 years and it doesn't seem to have damaged their psyches to any noticeable degree.

Mrs. Schlafly (call her "Ms." at your peril) is, of course, the chief gadfly behind the "Stop ERA" campaign. She's against it, she says, because it would take away her cherished right to make her husband pay her bills.

"That's the most basic and precious legal right every wife now enjoys," she argues. "Under ERA, not only would a husband no longer be obliged to support his wife, she would have to provide half the family income."

Wrong again. Family support would be based on things like current resources of husband and wife, including each one's earnings and the nonmonetary contribution each makes to the family.

If one of the couple earns all the money and the other works in the home, the wage-earner — male or female — would be required to support the other spouse.

Now I don't know about Mrs. Schlafly, but I do know many women who would gleefully turn their kitchen-and-car-pool chores over to their husbands for a chance at an exciting career (with or without three-martini lunches). And not worry for a minute about losing their "precious legal right" to be supported.

Legislators probably know this as well as anybody. It could be one reason they pay more attention to the lies about ERA than they do to the wishes of their constituents.

Unemployment is already uncomfortably high, due in great part to the flooding of housewives into the labor market. And if there's anything that makes a lawmaker squirm it's a bunch of uppity females who won't stay home where they belong snatching jobs that, by rights, should go to men.

The truth is, a lot of those women work because, if they don't, their families won't eat. And even when they do, their wages don't stretch to steak very often. Median earnings for women working full-time in 1974 were only 57 per cent of men's wages.

In a new book, "Pink Collar Workers," Louise Kapp Howe reports that the "vast majority of women still work at jobs where the pay is usually nil or low in comparison to what men of the same, or lower, educational levels are making."

In 1973, women's median earnings were $6,500, compared to $11,500 for men — a gap of $5,000. In 1957, the gap was $1,750.

They're not having much luck crashing the unions, either. The proportion of women in union jobs has fallen from 17 per cent in 1950 to 12.5 per cent now.

Mrs. Schlafly is welcome to use these statistics next time she hits the trail to shoot down ERA.

Ann Landers

Wrong slant on profession

Dear Ann Landers, Friends and Relatives: I am a female flight attendant. (Formerly known as a stewardess or air hostess.)

For six and a half years I have worked for one of the major airlines. I cannot describe my feelings when I turned on the TV recently and heard a popular female comedienne answer the question, "What is your definition of a flight attendant?" She replied, "A tramp."

This "tramp" spent eight weeks in intensive training to earn her wings. I can serve cocktails and a complete meal (from soup to nuts) in one hour and fifteen minutes. Three flight attendants can take care of 114 passengers.

I am trained to treat medical problems ranging from scratches and burns to broken limbs and heart attacks. I can handle any emergency, including artificial respiration.

I've been given instructions on how to evacuate a plane in a matter of seconds. Our major concern is for the safety of the passengers. Some of my co-workers have lost their lives in an effort to save yours.

I am a babysitter. I have changed diapers, warmed bottles and fed infants so a tired mother could rest or take care of a second child.

I have cajoled, counseled and humored passengers who are frightened, lonesome, intoxicated and just plain obnoxious.

I have listened patiently to people who need to tell a stranger their troubles — sort of a "sky-based Ann Landers," you might say.

I work very hard — harder than most people realize — both mentally and physically. Please print this letter so your readers will understand what the life of a flight attendant is really like. I'm — Proud Of Me

Dear Proud: You have a right to be. I've seen you and your winged sisters work feverishly to get everyone fed, tray tables removed and passengers strapped in before landing. Sometimes you make it by a matter of seconds. It's extraordinary!

Let's hear it for the dedicated, hard-working flight attendants who keep a smile on their faces after a grueling day that may have begun at 5:00 a.m., for all we know.

Dear Ann Landers: Do I have a problem or is it my mother who has one? I am a girl, age 14.

It seems that whenever I am dressing or undressing, my mother walks in on me. I have to grab the nearest thing to cover myself. Then she goes into a rage and screams, "What is the matter with you? Why do you get upset when I come in and see you naked? After all, I'm your mother!"

All I can say is I feel embarrassed to have ANYONE see me naked. Please don't suggest a lock on the door. I already have and Mother won't hear of it. I told her I was writing to you and she said, "Fine. I'd like to hear what Ann Landers has to say on the subject." So here I am, Ann. What's your message? — No Stripper In G.C.

Dear N.S.: Some 14-year-old girls don't mind if their mothers see them naked. Since you obviously DO mind, I feel your mother should respect your right to privacy — just as you would respect hers. A knock on a closed door before entering is nothing more than good manners.

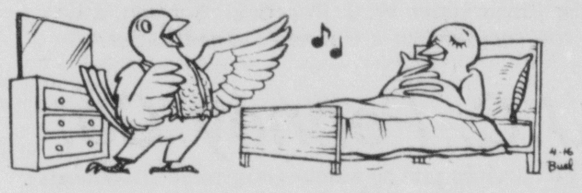
"HE WAS JUST RELEASED BY THE DOG CATCHER!"

Dr. Miller

Waiting for his canaries to mate



DEAR DR. MILLER: I purchased this vigorous male canary only a week ago and already he's singing his little heart out. Goldie Feathers, my famale canary, seems appropirately interested. They have a pleasant suite with a boudoir, nesting box and everything else I could think of. I have big plans for these two as far as a family is concerned. What more can I do besides stand by discreetly and wait? — E.K.

DEAR E.K.: Depends on what you have already thought of. If they've both had good care in the last few months, including adequate nutrition, if their current environment is indeed ideal, including a proper, hence persuasive, photoperiod (from the gradually lengthening day to stimulate the hormone system, hypothalamus in particular, to prepare for ovulatory activity), and if both are of adequate, but not excessive, age, (ital) then (unital) an affair leading to a feathered family is not unreasonable expectation.

DEAR DR. MILLER: If dogs can carry the swine influenza virus, and I read they can, doesn't that mean they can carry other viruses to people, too? — M.R.

DEAR M.R.: Yes, there are many (primarily respiratory) viruses which may cause similar symptoms in both pets and people.

DEAR DR. MILLER: My birds get some cracked corn, but I just read where oats is better because it has more protein and vitamin C? This is interesting information which I've never heard before. Should I believe it? — L.J.

DEAR L.J.: You can believe that oats contain considerably more protein (and less carbohydrate) than corn. Neither cereal grain contains vitamin C unless the grain has sprouted. Then they both do.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Mother never liked my hamster because she screamed a lot. I mean my hamster screamed a lot. My mother didn't as often. I'd like to get a gerbil now but mother wants to be sure they don't scream first. Please tell her they don't, if they don't, and I don't think they do, do they? — F.K.

DEAR F.K.: While hamsters haven't the reputation for being noisy, one may occasionally encounter an excitable screamer. Gerbils generally are less excitable than hamsters to begin with and, secondly, you're not likely to encounter a screaming gerbil, since they (almost) never do.

Difference a few years makes

It's funny what a difference a few years will make in your attitude toward children.

There was a time when I took a piece of cardboard from my husband's shirts, ran a string through it, and hung it around my son's neck. It read, "PLEASE DO NOT FEED."

He was like a disposer in Keds . . . going up and down the street with his mouth open. He made garbage trucks an endangered species in our neighborhood.

What I wouldn't give to have anyone feed him today . . . cookies, candies, ice cream . . . anything to take the edge off his appetite and ruin his meals.

And remember, "Talk to me?"

I couldn't wait until the kid began to talk. I'd sit in front of him and be so anxious to have anything come out of his mouth, I was interpreting the bubbles.

Through adolescence and the teenage years I was always pleading, "Talk to me. I'm your mother." You know when he began to talk? When he moved to LA and the daytime rates were 48 cents for the first minute and 33 cents for each additional minute plus tax. We spent $4.53 last week just to hear him relate how his white sweater shrunk in the soak cycle.

I could bite my tongue when I think back on it, but there actually was a period in my life when I told my daughter, "Get out of those good clothes before you ruin them and get into something grubby to play."

What I wouldn't give today to see if she still has legs.

It's painful to remember, but there was a period of years when I lived by the slogan, "You can drive a child to water . . . but you can't make him wash." I wish I had a nickel for every time I personally turned on the shower, filled the tub, measured out the shampoo and physically threatened to do harm to their bodies if they did not avail themselves of soap and water.

That was before the Herbal Connection. Today, bathing among teenagers is a religion. The hot water tank is a shrine and fat hair is the ultimate.

Possibly the greatest discrepancy you note is the attitude of grandparents. When the children are babies they stand in line to sit with them. This tapers off at about 18 months when it is discovered they have openings in every part of their body that needs attention.

I heard a grandmother say the other day, "I wouldn't supervise my teenage grandchildren for anything in the world. Who am I kidding? The National Guard wouldn't sit with them."

Entertaining in m'lady's bath

Wasn't until Queen Victoria took the throne in England that the act of taking a bath became a personal and very private matter. Previously, the bathtub was such a status symbol that some well-to-do men had their portraits painted while in the tub. And women of means frequently invited their men friends right into their bathrooms while they soaked. Entertaining a social conversation while in the bathtub was not so much a sensational sexy thing to do as a tender sentimental thing, like throwing coins in fountain together, or sitting side by side in a swing, or trading locks of hair. Much earlier, of course, the families worldwide who bathed at all bathed together. And in old Rome, whole neighborhoods did that.

BUSKERS

Q. "What's a 'busker'?"

A. A street entertainer — musician, comedian, dancer — who performs outside theaters before showtime to the people lined up for tickets. Buskers are popular in England, but I've never heard of them in this country.

Q. "At what age does a child's eyes reach full size?"

A. Age 8 maybe 9.

Our Name Game man is compiling a list of monikers he believes to be unique. Like that of Mr. Dawerance Horace Skatzes, mayor of Old Washington, Ohio, for instance. And that of the late Mr. Union George, Cambridge, Ohio, for another instance. Any others?

Credit Coco Chanel, too, with saying: "Children are fine until they grow up to become your judges."

GOD MADE MAN

Recently reported that I could not remember the author of this verse: "God made Man . . . Frail as a bubble . . . God made Love. . . Love made Trouble . . . God made the Vine . . . Was it a Sin . . . That Man made Wine . . . To drown Trouble in?" A Seattle man now sends a brief clipping, which he says he has had pasted in his lunchbox for many years, from an old column of mine. It identifies the versifier as Oliver Herford. Am getting old. Wear. Memory's slipping. Sigh. Time for a nap.

If you're able to predict with some accuracy devastating catastrophies like floods, fires and famines, please feel free to hang out a shingle that identifies you as an "apocalyptician."

Can you think of any other word in English, besides "bookkeeping," that has three consecutive sets of double letters? Neither can I.

Gallstones will not go away

DEAR DR. LAMB — After some painful attacks I went to the hospital for some tests and gallstones were found. My doctor told me to eat lean meats and no fried foods. He also advised surgery because the stones will continue to cause me pain and discomfort.

I am 57 years old and had a hysterectomy two years ago, and I don't want another operation if I can help it. Therefore can you advise me whether or not this ailment can be controlled by diet or medication? If so, what foods should I avoid in my daily diet and what medication?

DEAR READER — Your gallstones will not go away on their own or as the result of any modification of your diet. There is a national evaluation program on the effectiveness of new medicines in dissolving stones. These medicines are not available to physicians except those participating in the national study group. When the effectiveness is known, and the dangers if any established, then it may be approved for use.

Since you have already had attacks of pain — presumably because you have had a stone pass into the bile duct — you may not be a candidate for the national study.

I realize your natural desire to avoid surgery but you are a young woman with many years ahead of you. If you were past 70 or in poor health otherwise it might be advisable to avoid surgery but since that is not the case you should have the surgery while you are young and healthy. If you wait you may require emergency surgery when you are old or ill, making surgery more difficult and dangerous.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-9, Gallstones and Gall Bladder Disease. It will give you information on the risks of surgery and the risks if you do not have surgery. I have explained how stones are formed and how the new medicines work in that issue. You will note that cancer of the gall bladder is more common in patients with gallstones. The big controversy about the need for surgery is really in patients who have silent stones with no symptoms. In a young person like yourself who has already had painful attacks, surgery is the accepted form of treatment.

Avoiding fried and fatty foods is about all that you can do with your diet that might help relieve symptoms but that will not enable you to avoid a stone slipping into the bile duct and causing severe pain. Look at the diagram in the issue I am sending you, and you can see how the gall bladder is connected to your liver and small intestine and where the bile ducts are. Others who want this information on gallstones and gall bladder disease can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Just write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you kindly advise if it is true that plucking one's eyebrows gradually weakens the eyes? I pluck my eyebrows daily but recently I was told that this can be dangerous.

DEAR READER — Utter nonsense! The only danger is if you are very careless and jab yourself in the eye with whatever you are using to pluck with — so if that is your bag pluck away.

Counseling Corner

By R. CLIFF WATERS
Marriage and family counselor

"I'm going to make you love me," says a popular song, reflecting the common belief that you can actually make someone love you. Just do the right things, use the right words, look and dress right, use the right toothpaste, wear the right perfume, act sexy, kiss right — and he'll love you.

And if he doesn't at first, then obviously you're doing something wrong. After all, if you have the power to make someone love you, it must be your fault when he doesn't. Maybe something is wrong with you and you're really not loveable, but you can hide it if only you just find the right combination . . . So, try a new perfume, get your hair styled funky, change your image, act more submissive, or change your technique. If you come on strong, jump in bed sooner, have plastic surgery and lose 40 pounds, perhaps then he will love you.

Well now, a good thing has just happened. He has said he loves you. What a relief. Maybe nothing is wrong with you after all. On the other hand, maybe it's the way you dress and act that won him. Better not change the image, better just try to perfect your act and not let him know the real you.

Good. Now you are going to get married. It will be harder to keep the act up, but you can do it. By now you know exactly what he wants, and you have your act down pat. Funny you don't feel loved for who you really are — but, this is better than not having anyone, not being loved at all. Isn't it?

Now you're married. Have you noticed that you don't really know very much about your husband, what he feels and thinks? Has it occurred to you that he entered this relationship the same way you did? He thinks he made you love him by virtue of the image he created. And just as you think the real you is not loveable, he thinks that you couldn't love him if you knew who he really is on the inside.

Very interesting how you two live together. If you keep it up very long, your marriage is going to be on the rocks.

But it doesn't have to end in ruin if you can establish a genuine relationship with each other. The way to do this is to first realize that there is no way you can make your mate, or anyone, love you. If he loves you it is because he chooses to. The next step is to learn to accept his love as something freely given. Hard to do, but you can do it. Risk yourself with him. Let him know your feelings. You may discover he still loves you. Scary, because perhaps he won't love the real you — but that's no worse than the alternative.

The question is: How do you want to live — hidden inside your artificial image, or free to be your own self?

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be alert today for signs of a new financial venture that could be rewarding. Plant the seeds now, but don't expect an early harvest.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You will have the chance today to disengage yourself from an unproductive situation. Let it go without regrets.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A better insight into something you viewed only on an intellectual level can be gained by a more compassionate approach, which you're likely to adopt today.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If there's a project you've been putting off, get cracking on it today. Further delay is foolish.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Begin now to set loftier goals than heretofore. Even if you fall short, which isn't likely, you'll still come out better.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Overlook no opportunities to gain knowledge at this time. You'll find a way to turn it into something profitable.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Listen very carefully to any propositions today. There's a good possibility you can gain through a joint venture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Something you've been negotiating may be close to agreement today. It's been a long process, but there's a good chance you'll come to terms.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Inaugurate that diet or health program today. The odds are better than usual you'll stick with it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) There's something you've wanted to take more of a hand in. It appears that you can now have greater management if you move today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Changes affecting you and your family can be made today. Even if others aren't quite ready, they'll go along if you start the ball rolling.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Begin to get your plans more concisely in order today. Concentrate on what you want to accomplish over the next few weeks.

Your Birthday, April 18, 1977

There's considerable change in your goals and perspective this coming year. You've learned from experience and now will aim for more productive fields.

What people say

"For sure, Sam Peckinpah's love scenes would be very different from mine. I want the fat lady to love my movie. I want the audience to have a warm feeling about the film, which is what young love is all about. If some of the scenes are considered offensive, then people won't have that kind of feeling."

Slam bid reached by luck

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

John Saunders of Millville, N.J., sent us today's most interesting hand with the comment: "The hour was late. My partner had never bid and made a grand slam before. This is my only excuse for the bidding."

Mr. Saunders adds that his partner frowned as he studied the dummy. Then his face relaxed into a smile. He won the first trick with the ace of diamonds, ruffed a diamond with dummy's ace of trumps, drew trumps while discarding two of North's clubs and claimed the grand slam. The hand will only produce 12 tricks at either spades or notrump. The 13th trick with hearts as trump is made possible by the use of one of North's three trumps to ruff a diamond.

We must say there is considerable luck in getting to seven hearts. To start with, South might well have elected to respond either two clubs or two notrump in which case hearts would probably never have been bid. Then, Mr. Saunders wanted to give his partner a chance to play a grand slam which definitely influenced his selection of the final contract.

Ask the Jacobys

Mr. Saunders asked modestly if this result was due to "Dumb Luck."

The answer is that it was due to some luck, but all smart luck. Any experts we know would be proud of the bidding.

25 YEARS AGO

James Cash Penney, right, founder of the J. C. Penney Co., spent two days in Pomona in March of 1952. In this photograph, he is shown discussing with Pomona store manager Gordon Scriven his book entitled "Fifty Years With the Golden Rule." Penney spent hours in the store, greeting customers and talking with employes. He called his first store the "Golden Rule," made his store managers partners and called employes associates. While in Pomona, Penney spoke at a luncheon for area service clubs, hosted by the Optimist Club, on "Responsibility: The American Way."

75TH ANNIVERSARY

To mark the 75th anniversary of the founding of the J. C. Penney Co., Gordon Scriven, manager of the Pomona store from 1943 to 1961, standing left, visited the manager of the Montclair Plaza store, W. J. Paprocki. Scriven, a La Verne resident, is a Penney's stockholder.

Two "partners" of James Cash Penney, retired Pomona store manager Gordon Scriven and Montclair Plaza store manager W. J. Paprocki, observed the 75th anniversary of the company's founding with a brief reunion.

"As a stockholder in this company, seeing a store like this one makes me very happy," he said.

Paprocki said the 75th Anniversary Sale — which started Wednesday and will last two weeks — "will be unique."

For one thing, he said, "management offices were dark Friday and Saturday. Management employes were out on the floors, serving customers.

"We wanted to lead by example, providing what built Penneys, customer service," Paprocki explained.

Scriven commented that "it makes me very proud to see a store run like this."

In addition to maintaining his interest in the J. C. Penney Co., Scriven said he watches over some investments he has in real estate, and enjoys his four grandchildren.

Scriven was born in Ogen, Utah, and worked briefly in railroading before going into the mercantile business in Green River, Wyo.

He joined the J. C. Penney Co. in April of 1925 in Laramie, Wyo. He worked at stores in Laramie, Bakersfield and San Fernando before being named manager of the store in Corcoran. A short while later he managed the store in Lancaster.

Subsequently he was named manager of the J. C. Penney store in El Centro and remained at that post 10 years before coming to Pomona as manager in 1943.

In Pomona, he succeeded E. W. Rickenberg, who has opened the store in 1922.

Scriven retired from the company in 1961 and that year joined George Streit Realty in Pomona.

Many valley residents remember Scriven for his service to the community of Pomona and the area. As a volunteer, he worked with the Community Chest, the YMCA and drives to expand the Pomona Valley Community Hospital.

He was a leader in the Pomona Chamber of Commerce.

75 years of service to American consumers

J.C. PENNEY: journey from Wyoming to 20th century

As America begins its third century, the J.C. Penney Co. will celebrate 75 years of service to the American consumer.

Founded as a small dry goods store in a Western frontier town, the company has grown into one of the retailing giants of the 20th Century with more than 2,000 stores in the United States, Puerto Rico, and Europe. In 1976, the firm opened 75 new stores and did $8.3 billion worth of business.

In 1902, James Cash Penney opened a cash-and-carry store in a small frame building in the coal mining town of Kemmerer, Wyo. He invested his entire savings of $500 plus $1,500 he borrowed to buy one-third interest in the 25-by-40 foot store.

Mr. Penney called his store the "Golden Rule," and his idea was to apply the Golden Rule philosophy to business. Mr. Penney died Feb. 12, 1971, after seeing his idea evolve into the unique business that J.C. Penney Co. is today.

Although the company serves customers principally through its nation-wide chain of J.C. Penney department stores and its rapidly expanding catalog service, it is also the trusted druggist of millions through its Thrift Drug subsidiary; insuror of hundreds of thousands of others through its J.C. Penney life, health and casualty insurance companies, and operators of 37 The Treasury discount stores and a chain of supermarkets.

In addition, Penney has extensive retail operations in Belgium and Italy under the names of Sarma and J.C. Penney.

When Mr. Penney named his first stores the "Golden Rule," he knew it meant pioneering a new merchandising idea, radical in the cut-throat competition of the early 1900s.

He determined to sell merchandise at prices as low as possible and introduced the then novel idea of one price to all with no haggling. Many sales at small profits, he reasoned, were better than a few sales at large profits. Quick turnover of merchandise gave him a continuous flow of working capital.

Mr. Penney's first customers soon learned they benefited from his idea — values at the "Golden Rule" were better, prices lower. In the first year in that little store, homemakers bought $28,898.11 worth of merchandise, a remarkable amount for a store of that size at that time.

From the beginning, Mr. Penney hoped to spread his storekeeping ideas to other small communities. He wanted to build a small group of Penney stores operating under partner-ownership. He hoped eventually to build "not a chain of stores, but a chain of men held together by an idea."

A key to the company's growth has been its adherence to basic policies and operating methods. The Penney company uses its know-how to pack the customer's dollar full of value, quality and satisfaction; ask a fair profit and not all that the traffic will bear.

The company continues to reward its men and women — who are called "associates" rather than employes — through participation in the profits of the business.

While each store adapts itself to the needs of the community it serves, the central office in the J.C. Penney building on New York's Avenue of the Americas is organized to provide whatever a Penney store needs to do business.

The J.C. Penney buying offices and the company's merchandise testing center as well as consumer affairs, customer relations, and quality assurance divisions, keep tabs on new developments. As fast as desirable new products are developed, they are tested and checked — and offered to Penney stores.

In this way, individual store management is relieved of the searching and researching required in the operation of an up-to-date department store. In recent years the firm has added a product design department, which has greatly influenced the outward appearance of the company and its merchandise. The company hopes to be recognized for its youthfulness, fashion awareness and good taste, as well as innovation.

Adhering to its founder's urging to give customers their full dollar's worth of quality, Penney's has increased the selection of merchandise carrying the J.C. Penney private label through the addition of new lines.

In the early 1960s Penney introduced kitchen and laundry appliances in a limited number of stores. In addition to exclusive design and excellent value, the company now offers an assortment of ranges, washers, dryers, dishwashers, television sets, radios and phonographs.

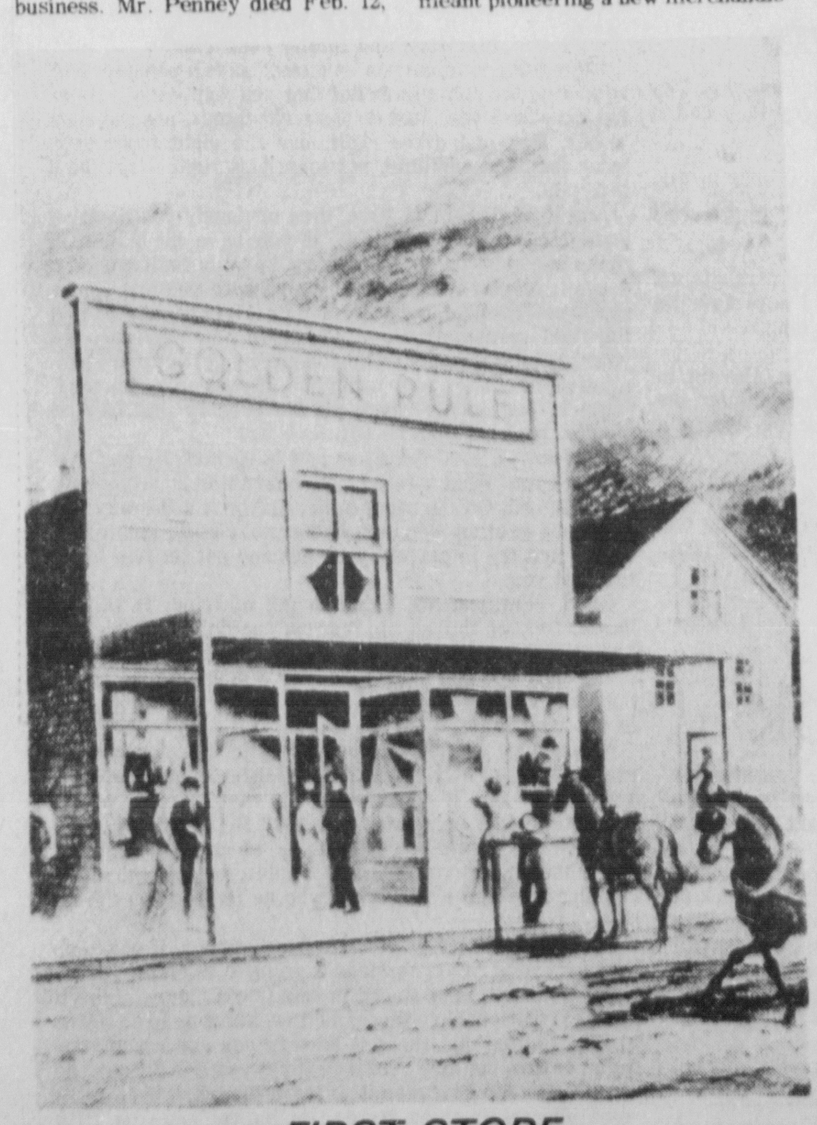
Adding still more to its traditional soft lines, J.C. Penney entered the tire, battery and automotive accessory business and now operates more than 440 auto centers. The company has been credited with developing many outstanding merchandise items including the maintenance-free J.C. Penney battery, the Aramid-belted radial tire, and the sales and service of C.B. equipment.

Penney's has also developed other new lines of merchandise in leisure and sporting goods, home improvement and home furnishing products.

As the company introduced and expanded its lines of hard goods, it also improved its traditionally strong lines of soft goods, broadening assortments and emphasizing fashion.

New methods of distribution, including use of computers, are bringing about greater efficiency in maintaining proper inventory levels of basic merchandise lines. The firm operates catalog distribution centers in Columbus, Ohio; Atlanta, Ga.; and Milwaukee, Wis. These units serve the Eastern two-thirds of the United States, and plans call for catalog service to be nationwide by the early 1980s.

The progress will go on — encompassing more and more American families — because the Penney company believes there are no limits for a business whose aim is to help raise the living standards of the people it serves.



FIRST STORE

This is a drawing of the first J. C. Penney Co. store, called the "Golden Rule," which James Cash Penney opened on April 14, 1902 in Kemmerer, Wyo. The store had sales of $466.59 the first day. Acceptance was so strong, Penney moved into larger quarters in 1904.

HEADQUARTERS TODAY

Today, J. C. Penney Co. includes more than 2,000 retail units in the U.S., Puerto Rico and Europe. The company is headquartered in this 45-story building in New York City, N.Y. More than 180,000 associates work for the company in stores and other facilities.

75 years ago this week James Cash Penney opened his first store in Kemmerer, Wyoming.

Today everything has changed except what's important.

On April 14, 1902, James Cash Penney unlocked the door of his new store and started the business. He was 27. He'd been in dry goods since he was nineteen.

"I went to work in Hale's store (J.M. Hale & Brother, Hamilton, Missouri) at the age of nineteen. The sum of $2.27 a month was certainly modest pay. But I felt strangely contented. I knew if I could get into something connected with dry goods, I could sell. At least I'd found my work in life."

Penney had to leave Hale's store and Hamilton because of his health. A doctor sent him off to Colorado (which must have been good advice; he lived to be 95).

He got a job in Longmont, near Denver, with a retail chain of several stores.

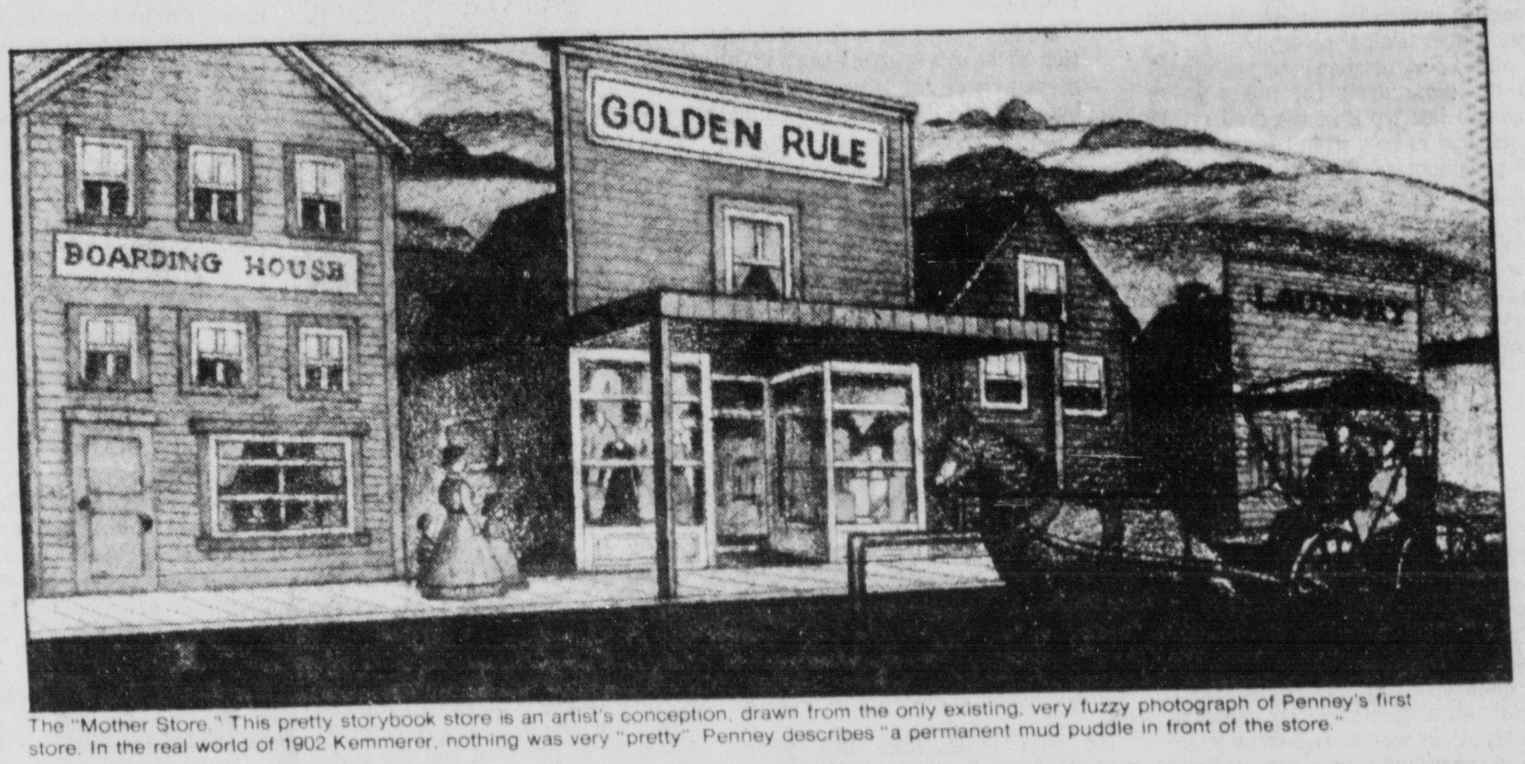
"I wasn't interested so much in the wages I would get or bothered by long hours. I was looking for opportunity."

He found it. The firm sent him to work in their Evanston, Wyoming store, then gave him a shot at his own store, in Kemmerer. Opening day was April 14, 1902. At dawn.

"When we locked the store at midnight and went upstairs to our attic room after the first day's business to figure out how we stood, there was an astonishing—to us—wealth in pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters, and half dollars. Our first day's sales amounted to $466.59."

The "we" and "our" in Mr. Penney's quotes refer to Mrs. Penney.

Second Kemmerer store. In 1904, Penney moved his store to a "better location" but he took the mud puddle with him.



The "Mother Store." This pretty storybook store is an artist's conception, drawn from the only existing, very fuzzy photograph of Penney's first store. In the real world of 1902 Kemmerer, nothing was very "pretty". Penney describes "a permanent mud puddle in front of the store."

Fashion. From an early Penney newspaper ad.

"My wife worked in the store side by side with me as much of the time as she could, wrapping the baby in a blanket and putting him down for naps under the counter while she waited on customers."

Opening day was no fluke. The store continued to do well.

"We were soon so busy that we had to hire help. Whereas the company stores of the mining company treated their customers rather callously, in our store the people were quick to notice a different atmosphere, which made them feel welcome and appreciated. They realized that we sold goods at just one price and gave good values.

"These were people who took the saving of so much as a penny seriously. To save pennies for them we had to save them for ourselves. We threw away no wrapping paper, no short ends of string, no empty boxes, no nails, even though they were bent, because we could straighten them out and use them over again."

Fashion. From a current Penney ad.

At the end of the first year, the store had done $29,000 worth of business. By 1907, Mr. Penney had saved enough to buy out his partners and the company took off. In 1913, 36 Golden Rule stores were incorporated as the J.C. Penney Company. This was the year "The Penney Idea" (at right) was adopted.

In 1924 the company acquired its 500th store, J.M. Hale & Brother in Hamilton, Missouri. Remember? In 1941, the company opened store number 1600.

The number of stores was no longer a meaningful measure of company growth. Bigger stores replaced smaller stores. The company moved into more types of merchandise, went into the catalog business, acquired other businesses.

In 1971, James Cash Penney died. The only ambition he had that he didn't achieve was to live to be a hundred. He only missed by 5 years. The company he founded is 75 years old this week.

Generally we look ahead and focus on the changes in the Penney Company. There've been plenty of them. But on a birthday—and a 75th birthday to boot—it seems appropriate to talk about the things that never change, because they're grounded in the basic needs and wants and expectations of human beings.

There are things you expect from your Penney store that haven't changed at all—like getting good value for your money, like being treated as the welcome guest you are, like getting complete satisfaction if ever anything goes wrong.

All these things are as important to us and to you today as they were to James Cash Penney and his customers on that famous opening day of April 14, 1902.

Thank you for reading all these words. We probably won't run another ad like this till April, 2002. Watch for it.

THE PENNEY IDEA

Adopted 1913

1. To serve the public, as nearly as we can, to its complete satisfaction.

2. To expect for the service we render a fair remuneration and not all the profit the traffic will bear.

3. To do all in our power to pack the customer's dollar full of value, quality and satisfaction.

4. To continue to train ourselves and our associates so that the service we give will be more and more intelligently performed.

5. To improve constantly the human factor in our business.

6. To reward men and women in our organization through participation in what the business produces.

7. To test our every policy, method and act in this wise: "Does it square with what is right and just?"

In the year 1913 the Penney partners approved this code of principles to guide them. "The Penney Idea" became, and is today, a moral as well as business basis for decision-making.

Pomona showdown looming--

Selby has been director of the city's concert band for 30 years and has been active in many civic, social and fraternal organizations over the years.

It is his first venture into the local political waters, however, although he appears to have gained the support of the city's conservative political establishment.

Selby, 56, has not offered any specific proposals for changing the city's operation if elected.

Mrs. Speiginer has been prominent in the community for many years through her work in the civil rights field. She is now in her fourth term as president of the Pomona Valley Chapter of National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

With a soft voice that belies her strength of purpose, Mrs. Speiginer has campaigned for increased social services for the young and elderly in Pomona.

She has called for the use of federal funds to create jobs for youths, and for better facilities and programs for senior citizens.

Mrs. Speiginer and her husband, Louis, reside at 2243 Larchmont St.

The third candidate, John Stanley, was virtually unknown in the community when he announced his candidacy for the office, but he has run a highly visible campaign emphasizing fiscal conservatism.

He has called for a possible reduction of the city's utility tax and other measures or incentives to promote business and industrial growth in the community.

Stanley, 42, is employed as a pension and profit sharing manager for Aetna Life Insurance Co. in Los Angeles.

Irish by birth, Stanley became a United States citizen in 1961 and resides at 495 E. Jefferson Ave., with his wife, Marie, and five children.

Welfare statistics aired--

They said the WRO has been quite effective in dealing with grievances over the past several years.

The group is not only interested in protecting clients, but also in raising the quality of welfare. It has asked, so far unsuccessfully, for washing machines as well as two-week vacation a year with pay for welfare recipients.

Director Comrie said not only has there been a reduction on the welfare rolls: a concerted effort by his office and the District Attorney to make working fathers pay a share of the welfare costs apparently is paying off.

He said collections last year amounted to about $20 million. The money is being returned to the department to offset its enormous budget.

The Department of Public Social Services spends about $1 billion a year in Los Angeles County. Of that total the county's taxpayers finance 21 per cent, the federal government subsidizes 47 per cent and the state pays 32 per cent.

Virus: playing havoc with your health

Smallest terrorist takes toll

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It's the smallest terrorist of them all, and a half-million laid end to end would barely make a line as long as its five letter name (virus.)

You get acquainted with it each time you catch a cold and you'd meet it in a far more dangerous guise if you were unlucky enough to catch Lassa fever.

The virus stands on the edge of life, and mankind would gladly shove it across, for it's responsible for an imposing catalogue of ailments.

Medical sleuths around the world are busily tracking this ancient elusive villain and countless millions of dollars are spent on viral work — basic applied clinical. There isn't even an estimate of the damage — in misery, death, and economic loss — that viruses cause.

Viruses are suspected by many scientists to be involved in human cancers (some or all) although there are other respected scientists who disagree. And viruses (perhaps 100 or more kinds of them) produce the common cold.

Viruses have two major qualities that account for some of their unusual effects — they can disappear and they can mutate.

The mysterious case of the Swine flu illustrates the major problem of mutation, a viral sleight of hand in which key characteristics of the virus change. If there is a major change in the virus' antigens — proteins that stimulate our body's defense mechanisms — then we will not recognize the virus; we won't produce antibodies against it, we have no built-in immunity, we are helpless against it. The Swine flu virus represented a major antigenic shift from other influenza viruses and therefore posed the threat of a pandemic or worldwide epidemic. It could still happen.

Virologists say they have no idea how much money is being spent on virus work. Dr. Morris Pollard of the University of Notre Dame notes that the tumor virus program at the National Cancer Institute alone is funded to the tune of $187 million and his own virus-free tumor studies alone employ 60 people.

At the Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory on Long Island in New York, Nobel-Prize winner James D. Watson directs research using viruses to probe the basic nature of cells, a possible road to the basic understanding of cancer. Universities throughout the world have viral research laboratories.

The most recent outbreak of a menacing viral disease occurred in the Sudan and in Zaire last autumn when a new form,

One-woman 'think tank' to tackle efficiency problems

By GEORGE MacLAREN
PB Staff Writer

A single parent with two children who questioned the government giving its citizens the runaround when it came to answering questions now finds herself in the midst of an efficiency study for the City of Claremont.

The recent reorganization of the Claremont city departments resulted in the hiring of a one-woman "think tank" in Jeanne Kennedy, successful applicant to the position of administrative analyst from an original field of 150 applicants.

The attractive woman said she stood out among the younger (18 to 21) students at Stanford University, but she also stood out (3.75 grade point average) when the final marks were handed out.

She graduated from Stanford with a B.A degree in political science and later earned a master's degree in public administration at USC.

Before coming to Claremont, Mrs. Kennedy served as an administrative intern with a New York State public employment relations board, and for the California cities of Saratoga and Glendora, the latter for former Claremont deputy city manager Grant Brimhall.

Mrs. Kennedy has been honored by the School of Public Administration at USC as a recipient of the Fletcher Bowron award for outstanding urban administration.

At Claremont she has taken on the challenge of trying to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the city's community services department.

Before Mrs. Kennedy arrived in an advisory position to department director Fred Hawkins, the five divisions — recreation, sanitation, non-green maintenance (such as street sweeping), parks, and the motor fleet — had different starting and quitting times and break times.

Now everyone starts at the same time and break times are of the same length throughout the department.

"We're trying to standardize projects so that all employes are on an equal footing, and there is coordination between divisions," she said.

She explained that there is a lack of information available about the department's input and output, and that she has been analyzing the different operations.

The latest innovation is cross-training, which enables employes to acquire skills in other jobs than the ones for which they were hired, and also becomes an asset for promotions.

"We're trying to initiate it on a voluntary basis," she said. "The more skills an employe has the more important he is to the city."

She said that some employes are apprehensive about the program, but "we hope they all will try out the new program."

Mrs. Kennedy said that she set herself a goal of government when she went to Stanford, and has thought of trying for the job of city manager, "but I'm beginning to question that. The job has a great deal of tension and stress. I will study the challenges. Do they outweigh the constraints?"

Mrs. Kennedy recalled how she became involved in community matters, and decided to go back to school although she still had two growing children.

A resident of Campbell, a city of 30,000 near San Jose, Mrs. Kennedy questioned how the city's administration related to her as a citizen.

"I wanted to learn more about government, because when I posed a question I felt we as citizens were getting the runaround. It was a buck-passing bit," she explained.

Mrs. Kennedy said that while at Stanford she discovered that older people cannot go to college part time, "so after we had done a study, we asked the university to start a pilot program allowing older people to attend school on a part-time basis. The pilot program has been successful."

Mrs. Kennedy is an officer of California Women in Government which started in the Los Angeles area and has been expanded to Northern California. The organization first accepted as members those in local government, but lately has taken in those in county and state governments.

"Our three-fold purpose is to develop contacts among women in similar positions, to develop a program for professional development, and to try to change the attitudes towards women in administration as professionals," she concluded.

But Castro's Cuba has changed all that

Havana was glittering jewel in dark setting of poverty

EDITOR'S NOTE: If American tourists should return to Cuba — and recent developments between the two countries raise the possibility — what would they find? An Associated Press newsman who recently spent 11 days in Cuba reports on life on that greatly altered island.

By CLAUDE ERBSEN
Associated Press Writer

HAVANA (AP) — Eighteen years ago, before Fidel Castro, Havana was a glittering jewel in a dark setting of poverty. Today the city is shabby and frayed, bearing signs of neglect.

"I was a cane cutter at 13," he says, showing a visitor through his sparsely-stocked store. "I'd still be cutting cane for a pittance and living in a shack if it hadn't been for the revolution."

Instead, Pena lives in a small, simple city apartment with his working wife and two children. Together they earn 338 pesos (about $405) a month, and Antonio estimates that about one-third of their income goes for such luxuries as dining out and trips to the country.

Pena also studies at night, taking a college preparatory course, and devotes 20 to 30 hours a month to "volunteer labor" as a carpenter on the Havana docks, a vegetable market inspector and in the cane fields.

In some ways, the Penas are favored over other Cubans. They live near their jobs, avoiding the long lines at bus stops, and they have an apartment to themselves in a city where privacy is a luxury.

But in most ways, the Penas seem typical of many Cubans, as dozens of interviews with ordinary citizens indicated: Proud of their escape from poverty, heavily indoctrinated after years of Communist propaganda, and with some surplus income burning holes in their pockets.

That surplus income reflects the shortages which plague the Cuban economy despite Soviet aid estimated at between $3 and $4 million a day. Food and clothing are tightly rationed. Standing in line for necessities as well as the few luxuries available — mostly appliances — is a way of life.

You'll find lines at food stores for the ration of 12 ounces of meat per person every nine days. There are lines at department stores during the two shopping days allotted each family each month.

And there are lines in front of ice cream stands and pizza shops, restaurants and night clubs, news stands and clinics. When "Jaws" opened at a half dozen Havana movie theaters — appearing mysteriously despite the U.S. embargo on trade with Cuba — thousands waited patiently for hours to buy tickets at ($1.20) a person.

While Cubans grumble at the rationing casual conversations in Havana and Santiage, Cuba's second largest city, suggests they accept it as the best way to disperse scarce goods.

"At least I know that everybody's getting the same," said Gilda Rodriguez Esteves after queing for three hours to buy thread and trimming at the notions counter of a department store.

With free medical care, free education, a virtual guarantee of lifetime employment followed by pensioned retirement, there's little incentive for Cubans to save. Basic necessities, with prices controlled at the 1960 level, take only part of the income, especially in families with more than one wage earner.

So restaurants, night clubs, and cabarets have become favorite spending grounds.

But free time often is scarcer than cash.

Education has become the nation's No. 1 industry. One of every three Cubans is in some kind of educational program.

Cubans also take part in "volunteer" work on Sundays and nights, in tasks

Greece curbing fortune tellers

By PAUL ANASTASSIADES
Associated Press Writer

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — When Jupiter aligns with Mars and the moon blends with the stars, when the images in the crystal ball begin to fade, gray-uniformed men with arrest warrants on tax-evasion or fraud charges will be knocking on the doors of Greece's charlatan soothsayers.

The privileged members of fortune-tellers anonymous, an evasive clan of fortune makers selling prophesy for cash, failed to make one vital prediction: the Greek government has decided to clamp down on the country's estimated 15,000 professional and part-time pseudoprophets.

A meeting presided over recently by public order minister George Stamatis and top police officials ruled that the people involved in the trade — the modern Greek descendants of the ancient Delphic oracle — are amassing tax-free fortunes at the expense of tens of thousands of gullible Greeks.

At the meeting, several more of which are shortly to follow, it was decided to draw up an official report on the situation and submit it to the government for legislative action. Tax-evasion and fraud were ruled the most serious offenses.

A police spokesman involved in the investigation said the number of persons occupied with fortune-telling for a living was growing. It includes astrologists, palm and crystal ball readers, coffee cup and playing card readers, mediums and hypnotists. He said they were estimated to make between 1,000 and 5,000 drachmas — from $27 to $135 — daily tax free, possible because of the complete lack of legislation on their profession.

"There's some kind of fortune-teller almost in every block now," the police official said. "Yet probably less than 100 of the estimated 15,000 have some proper psychoanalytic qualification." He said the quantity of false professionals was "undoubtedly" the highest in Europe.

Many of the Greek fortunetellers graduate from the two so-called "schools of psychoanalysis" operating in Athens. The police official, however, said mediums themselves have admitted to the existence of about 30 organizations which provide diplomas and necessary pseudo-scientific cover for up to 50,000 drachmas — $1,350.

A spokesman for the ministry of social services, also involved in drawing up the legislation, put the overwhelming blame on the Greek clients themselves.

"Tens of thousands of Greeks believe in and resort to such persons, and as long as they continue to do so the business will thrive," the spokesman said, adding, "No amount of police action can stamp it out if the clients persist, as it is often conducted in secret."

Meanwhile, many Greek mediums continue to openly advertise their qualities in newspapers, professional directories, or with signs outside their apartment blocks alongside those of doctors and lawyers.

Most mediums spoken to claimed they welcomed government action because it would eliminate the unprofessionals and restore the credibility of the trade.

SIGN OF CHANGE — A modern high-rise building in Havana bears a huge patriotic mural, one of the signs of changed times after 18 years of Castro regime.

Most Cubans also participate in the activities of their committees to defend the revolution.

Originally established as a block by block network of informers against subversives and political unreliables, the committees today deal mainly with community tasks: They monitor school attendance, run vaccination programs, conduct clean-up projects and sponsor political study groups. At the same time, they haven't lost sight of their original political function and still are a powerful deterrent against dissent.

In fact dissent appears to be non-existent, on the surface at least. But diplomats stationed here estimate there are at least 20,000 persons in jail for "counter-revolutionary activities" — opposition to the Castro regime.

Government officials won't discuss prisoners however, and the subject is taboo in casual conversations with ordinary Cubans.

In Cuba as in the Soviet Union, the Communist Party remains the keystone of the political system. And while the party has only 200,000 members — a self imposed limitation through a tough selection process — the party, in practice, is everywhere.

It controls the levers of government, coordinates national volunteer efforts and pervades the schools, where children are taught to aspire to party membership. Most Cuban children belong to the Young Pioneers, the first level in the Communist edifice.

Despite nearly 18 years of virulent anti-American propaganda, Cubans seem to have remained basically friendly to Americans as individuals, and resumption of normal relations with the United States after a long breach holds obvious attractions for the country.

It would permit reunion of families split when more than 600,000 Cubans fled after Castro's victory, and it would enable Cuba to buy badly needed American spare parts and supplies. It would provide new markets for Cuban sugar, cigars and nickel. And it would allow a resumption of American tourism.

Particularly for marathon money hunts

Entertainment

By WILLIAM GLOVER
AP Drama Writer

There's no show business quite like regional theater on marathon money hunts.

Fund raising ranges from "pressure cooker" promobion to angelic hosts to deep schemes for ongoing endowment.

"The endless problem," one managing director says "is that expenses grow every year but you can't raise box office prices forever."

On Broadway a $20 ticket is no longer a novelty, but most regional companies cling to a top of about $8.

Such scale means earned income fluctuates widely. It may cover as much as 84 per cent of a $1 million operating budget in Louisville, Ky., or only 50 per cent of the modest $450,000 needed by one of the smaller troupes in Washington, D.C.

Declining foundation grants and far-from-lavis government support of the arts have entensified the need for alternate aids to solvency. But what works well in one place may not work in another.

A recent tour of six East Coast companies that attract a total audience of 800,000 annually pointed to the contrasts.

The most widely used income booster is increasing the number of season subscribers. But that doesn't work for one of the oldest and most acclaimed organizations, Washington's Arena Stage because of the capital's high population turnover.

The company manages to enlist about 17,000 subscribers annually — enough to fill about half the seats during a production run in its main auditorium and two-thirds of a smaller playhouse. Thomas C. Fichhandler executive director estimates that about 6,000 new subscribers have to be recruited each year.

Single ticket buyers swell Arena Stage's 31 week attendance to 250,000 — about 88 per cent of capacity — "but in the last couple of years it has been harder to sell out without ruperb word of mouth," Fichhandler says.

He also finds that getting help from benevolent foundations and corporations for his $2 million budget is harder because the gigantic Kennedy Center goes after the same sponsors.

A more casual ttitude about the big performing arts center is voiced by Louis Scheeder, director of the small but artistically dynamic Foler Shakespeare Library across town.

"The Kennedy hasn't lived up to what it could be — it's just a real estate operation that plugs in on what sells," he says. "They buy things, they don't create. We do eclectic things and have found an audience that regularly supports our purpose."

In four years the Folger Group has increased subscribers from 600 to 5,850 and performs to 95 per cent average attendance. The boxoffice accounts for half of the operating expenses. The remaining $225,000 is sought from general contributions.

The Virginia Museum Theater in Richmond also has built strong subscriber support, up from 3,800 in 1969 to 10,000. That represents both 80 per cent of capacity and 80 per cent of the $400,000 budget.

The Actors Theater at Louisville has taken big strides toward subscriber solidarity with what John Jory, producing director calls "pressure-cooker" merchandising — making tickets as scarce as possible for walk-up customers interested in seeing an occasional show.

"The only way to sell subscriptions is to sell shortage," Jory says. In 1969 only 1,900 se$son tickets were sold. Each year the number has grown until now there are 19,200 prepaid spectators in the company's two theaters, or 90 per cent of capacity.

In Atlanta however, the eight year old Alliance Theater has been unable to attain such box office Nirvana. Its 3,500 subscribers account for only one third of the seats during a seven play 21 week season. Earned income covers 51 per cent of a $422,000 budget.

"It's difficult to sell in advance for Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday," says David Bishop, managing director. "When a show gets particularly good notices, people come and find tickets available—so there's no compulsion to sign up ahead."

Florida's state theater, the Asolo at Sarasota suffers a different kind of subscriber handicap but has developed other kinds of funding that makes it one of the nation's most unusual drama operations.

Asolo, one of the three companies to operate on a true rotating repertory system—the others are San Francisco's American Conservatory Theater and the Guthrie in Minneapolis—puts on nine shows, with runs varying from 33 to 16 performances.

There are just 320 seats in the charming 18th century Italian Renaissance structure a severe limit on season ticket sales.

"There's a total of 3,840 seats for one of the shorser bookings" says Howard J. Millman managing director, 'and we have 3,800 subscribers."

The theater has skirted that built in limit on up front revenue by creating a separate corporation for building community support. It now has 4,000 members fondly known as Asolo Angels, who ante from $15 to $1,000 to belong. This year about $150,000 is being raised.

Subscribers are not necessarily angels, and only the latter got tickets at a discount. Which may help explain why earned income accounts for 62 per cent of the $1 million operating budget. Attendance averages 95 per cent of capacity. All this in an area with a total population of 200,000.

Besides efforts to strengthen and stabilize finances another important development is apparent in regional theaters.

"The quality of business management in arts organizations is improving considerably", Jory says. "Managers often used to be either a failed tenor or a dancer who had pulled muscles. Five years ago you couldn't find anyone who wanted to be an administrative assistant.

"A good many people used to regard regional theater as a stepping stone to other things. Now I don't know of anything I'd want to trade it for."

CAST OF ANGELS — There's a full house for an Asolo State Theater Company performance in their 18th century theater in Sarasota, Fla. But there are only 320 seats in that house, which means only limited subscription sales. So the company has organized other means of financial support which makes it one of the most unusual operations in the country.

'Grass roots' relations

Friendship is 'message' of cultural exchange

NEW YORK (AP) — Harry Morgan is a man who likes to make things grow. Starting with an idea about international friendship and a lot of energy, he has built a cultural exchange program that has helped sponsor 10,000 young American dancers, singers and musicians on performing tours abroad.

In the last five years Friendship Ambassadors, Morgan's latest experiment in grass roots international relations, have performed in Poland, Romania, Yugoslavia, India, Russia and Czechoslovakia, where it all started.

On a trip to that country he noticed that many people were fascinated by Western music. "They couldn't speak the language but they could sing Simon and Garfunkel," he said. "I realized that music is a powerful, if not the most powerful, means of communication."

Thousands of young Americans travel every summer and Morgan, who has always felt that travel should have a purpose, decided to put that wanderlust to use. In 1971 he got permission to give free concerts in Czechoslovakia, and the program took off from there. In 1974 Friendship Ambassadors started bringing foreign performing arts groups to the United States.

"We spend a great deal of time getting across the idea that this is not just a concert tour — this is an experience, a learning experience," said Morgan, who feels that music helps break down cultural barriers.

"It's only human at the end of a concert to go up and shake hands and say thanks," he said, "and that starts the dialogue."

"There is something that is magical about the peforming situation," added his wife, Cappy, who works with him on the project.

The couple remembers that when they first took American groups to Romania in 1972, the only thing most Romanians knew about the United States was from three television programs shown there — "The Flintstones," "Colombo" and "The Untouchables."

"When we first went to a Romanian village to perform, the village priest had to beg people to take us in," said Mrs. Morgan. "Most families didn't want Americans in their homes. They thought we'd come with guns and knives."

But, she said, word that American kids were okay spread rapidly and "now we're really welcome in these villages."

Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu has invited the Morgans to send their Friendship Ambassadors groups to help celebrate Romania's centennial on May 9 this year.

Although the ambassadors program is relatively new, Morgan has been in the people to-people business for more than 20 years. As a young man just out of high school he hitchhiked across country from his home in Salinas, Calif., and flew to the Netherlands to join relief workers after floods had inundated that country in 1953.

Afterward, he decided to raise money to bring a young man and young woman he had met while in their country to the United States to see what America and Americans were really like.

This program, which he called Ambassadors for Friendship, grew into home-stay-oriented summer tours of the United States for foreign students attending American universities.

With the help of Reader's Digest founder DeWitt Wallace, whom Morgan refers to as "a mentor, a friend," Morgan moved his growing organization to Macalester College in St. Paul, Minn., and there in 1961 founded the World Press Institute.

Virus: the smallest terrorist—

It proved extremely contagious, killed a high proportion of the patients — as well as medical personnel and nurses sent to the area. The outbreak led to the dispatch of a World Health Organization team to gather blood samples.

These and other outbreaks, including the usually lethal Lassa fever from Nigeria, are examples of "new and striking disease entities" that have appeared in the past decade, according to Dr. Jordi Casals of Yale University.

Why do strange variants of virus crop up in Africa so often?

"For some — Lassa and certainly Ebola — man-to-man transmission required close contact, crowded conditions and the sort of hygiene you find only in very primitive societies," Dr. Casals says. And "in the hot climate, there's more of possibility of virus development and mutation because the climate makes all life develop faster."

Although such outbreaks have been largely confinded to remote African areas, Dr. Casals notes that with modern travel it's always possible for someone exposed to an exotic virus in Africa to reach London, New York, or Tokyo before the illness is detected and the patient can be isolated.

Also in recent years, baffling slow viruses with strange properties have been recognized as one cause of two fatal brain diseases, kuru and Creutzfeldt-Jakob syndrome. Dr. D Carlton Gajdusek of the National Institute of Neurological and Communicative Disorders and Stroke won a Nobel Prize last year for his discovery that a slow virus was the cause of kuru among a primitive tribe in New Guinea.

The word kuru in the tribal language means "shiver," and the brain disease produced uncontrollable tremors that led to death. The tribe was cannibalistic, with the virus transmitted by eating infective brain tissue. Gajdusek proved this in animals, and kuru in the Fore tribesmen declined when they gave up cannibalism.

The virus is a molecule of nucleic acid within a coat of protein. Nucleic acids (DNA and RNA) are the basic chemicals of life. The virus comes in many varieties — rod-like, spherical, filamentous, spermlike or a solid with several plane surfaces, all of them ranging from 10 to 300 millimicrons in size. A micron is 1-25,000th of an inch.

This small parasite cannot multiply without the help of living cells. The virus invades the cell itself and forces the cell to manufacture new viruses, exact copies of the invader. The target cell usually will burst and die, releasing the newly manufactured viruses to attack other cells. Bacteria, on the other hand, are larger and free living and cause illness and death by the poisons they produce.

Because the virus works or hides inside the cell, traditional medicines such as antibiotics are ineffective. The antibiotics work against bacteria because the bacteria are moving targets in the blood or body fluids. However, a few new drugs are being investigated that may act within the cells without harming them, or act to block the entry of the virus,

'A lot of it is just luck'

Playing the pinballs— it's all 'psychological'

CHICAGO (AP) — The success of a hot pinball machine is making the player feel he's on an ego trip, an industry designer says.

"It's all psychological. You've got to build up a player's ego, give him enough skill shots so he feels he's a real pinball wizard even it he's not," says Jim Patla of Bally Manufacturing Corp., considered the world's top seller of slot games and pinball machines.

"The fact is a lot of it is just luck," Patla says. "But you don't want the player to know that. For them, the bells, the flashing lights, the real high scores — it's all a big ego trip."

Another Bally designer, Greg Kmiec, says the industry is gearing up to switch from mechanical to electronic machines because such models are cheaper to manufacture and easier to maintain.

"I'm not saying it won't work out, but I've always loved the feel, the thump of the game, and you just don't get that with electronics," says Kmiec.

A true pinball player won't be drawn into playing any old game because of some flashing lights or nifty artwork, Kmiec says. He looks at the machine for a fair number of skill shots requiring deft use of the flippers and a steady ball-plunger hand, he says.

"A good game is self-explanatory," says Kmiec. "If players have to pore over the instruction card, it's not good. I like to give them immediate gratification in my games. If I turn on a light and the player hits it, he gets something for it right away. And if I see a player get mad at a game and give it a whack, I know it's good."

Kmiec, 27, designed the playfields for the two hottest-selling games ever, The Wizard and Captain Fantastic.

"Maybe one in 10 designs will be a real dog," he says. "I got the idea for a game we call the Night Rider when I was driving along and came to an expressway underpass. I was dazzled by the sight of all the stoplights turning amber in sequence."

Norm Clark, Bally's chief design engineer, says, "We design about 10 new flipper games a year. And once among the players, a new design is anybody's game. Competitors watch each other very closely."

Clark says manufacturers get weekly dollar reports from arcade owners about how much each game takes in. If one company's machine is getting especially good play, it's not unusual for a competing firm to send someone out to spy on it.

Recently, Clark flew to San Jose, Calif., to hang around a hot machine reported there. He said he watched the players, talked to the manager and tried to determine what was so great about the machine.

"Most of the time people know they like a particular game, but they don't know why," says Clark. "The sound of the play is very important and flashing lights have some effect.

"But the most important thing is to design a game that is just tough enough so the plyers can get close to making the specials, but not so close they feel they can beat it."

The star of Bally's art department is Dave Christensen, 37, who is responsible for some spectacular new machines. "You might say I've taken the business from a 'G' rating to an 'X.'" says Christensen, who is known for his vivid imagination.

He once drew a vision of the end of humanity, with Earth being blown to atomic smithereens and a muscular superhero escaping to heaven with an enormously sexy woman in his arms. It didn't leave the shop.

In a box, garage . . .

Artist 'stores' life's fantasies

KENT, Ohio (AP) — Behind a house like any other house, down a street like any other street on Kent's west side, there is a garage like any other garage, filled with garage type rakes and old records and worn furniture.

Also in that garage is a box, one not quite like any other.

Robert W. Culley, associate professor of art at Kent State University, has been filling that box with his "universe" for nearly 10 years. He hasn't finished.

Formally called the Temple of the Silver hare, the box is about the size of a child's playhouse, just large enough for an adult to sit inside and look around.

There is a lot to see—as many doors, shadow boxes and secret places as you please.

It also has a crystal mushroom, beans, broken glass, stoppered bottles, a photograph of the lunar landscape, three Buddhas, drapes of siok, compasses and a mirror.

Neighborhood children love it as a playhouse. Yet with its oddments and its seeming magic, the temple-box-theater is a time capsule of the universe that hints at, but doesn't tell, its tales.

Take the name: Temple of the Silver Hare. "There says there "thermal box with stones and a wooden cake of soap. Wash hands with the wooden soap and then rinse with a handful of stones: think water."

The box-token "is a way of focusing the attention beyond the objects to the essence that all matter is becoming other matter," Culley says enigmatically.

He sees himself as seriously at work reaching back to himself as a child, now recreating his childhood fantasies as an artist.

"While I was in graduate school at Carnegie Institute of Technology," Cully recalled, "I showed a painting I had just finished to my adviser.

"He said the work showed the composition of Andrew Wyeth, the brush strokes of Andrew Wyeth, the ideas of Andrew Wyeth and the presentation of Andrew Wyeth.

"Then the professor asked, "Where is Bob Culley?' "

In Culley's box, on the mirror, there is written: "In this mirror, I am enclosed living and true as one imagines angels, not as reflections are."

DONNA ENO

Autumn wedding planned

Mr. and Mrs. Harold R. Eno of Claremont announce the engagement of their daughter, Donna Rae, to Thomas Dale Walker of Reseda.

The bride-to-be is a 1970 graduate of Claremont High School and a 1972 graduate of Pomona Valley Community Hospital School of Radiologic Technology. She is a senior radiologic technologist at UCLA Medical Center.

Mr. Walker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ovil Walker of Anaheim, is a 1964 graduate of Western High School and attended Los Angeles City College. He is a 1973 graduate of UCLA's radiologic electronics program and is employed as a radiologic electronics specialist.

Food can appeal to children

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — If getting children to eat vegetables is a problem, try letting them help in the preparation, advise Michigan State University food and nutrition specialists.

Husking corn, shelling peas, snapping beans, washing squash or even helping to pick the produce at the market may provide the incentive to eat the vegetables, they point out.

Other suggestions:

When the child is beginning to eat the same foods as the rest of the family, give him small amounts of vegetables at the beginning of the meal, when he is hungriest.

Introduce new vegetables along with familiar, well-liked foods. If your child likes casseroles and other combination dishes, include vegetables in them.

Be enthusiastic in presenting new vegetables. Parents' and siblings' attitudes can influence a child to like or dislike something even before he tastes it.

Cook vegetables so they are tender but still crisp. Or serve raw vegetables with meals or as snacks. Children often prefer the crispy crunch of raw carrot strips, celery, bits of cauliflower or turnip strips to the softer texture of cooked vegetables.

If a child rejects new vegetables the first time or two he sees them, offer them again. It sometimes takes time to develop a taste for new foods.

But don't make vegetables the focus of a parent-child power struggle or mealtime a battle of wills. This can affect the child's attitude toward food.

Club events

Past matrons set meeting

Past matrons of Pomona Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, will meet for lunch, Thursday, in the home of Mrs. Clinton Wahlberg, 2755 Arrow Highway, La Verne.

Valley writers meet

Persons interested in creative writing are invited to attend the Tuesday meeting of Pomona Valley Writers Club at Ontario City Library in the Garden Room. The meeting will begin at 7:15 p.m.

Category for the March meeting was juvenile manuscripts. First-place winner was Edna Cash of Ontario. Second-place winners were Elizabeth Doidge of Cucamonga and Florence Lovgren of Ontario. A three-way tie carried third place. Winners were Florence Swanson of Chino, Dorcas Nigh of Upland and Herbert Weber of Ontario.

Presbyterian group

The Women's Association of Claremont Presbyterian Church has scheduled a meeting Tuesday at 11:30 a.m. at the church.

David Myers, AFS student, will show slides from his summer in Turkey and will relate some of his experiences.

Lunch will be served at noon by members of Circle 6. Mrs. Kenneth Rogers is in charge of luncheon plans.

The program following the lunch will be an Easter play, "Light in the Shadow," which was written by Mrs. Betty Jackson, an elder of the church.

There will be a special dedication of layettes which will be sent to the San Luis Valley Christian Community Services, Presbytery of Pueblo, Colo.

Legal Secretaries meet

The Pomona Valley-Citrus Secretaries Association will meet April 21 at Michael's Restaurant in Glendora. The social hour will begin at 6:30 and be followed by dinner at 7:30 p.m. Reservations are $5.50 per person and should be made with Joanne Warner at (213) 967-5652 after 6 p.m.

The speaker will be Olaf W. Olson, California State Inheritance Tax Referee. He will speak on the new inheritance tax laws.

Officers named

California TOPS 861 recently installed officers. Leader is Mrs. Julia Jayes and coleader is Mrs. La Vera Cline. Other officers are: Mrs. Anna Hawthorne, secretary; Mrs. Jean Moore, treasurer; Mrs. Evelyn McLean, weight recorder; Mrs. Esther Schroeder and Mrs. May Munford, assistant recorders.

The club meets at 6:30 p.m. every Wednesday at the Church of the Brethren, 875 W. Orange Grove Ave., Pomona.

Election planned

Delegates to the department convention to be held June 7 in Oakland and delegates to the national convention to be held in July in Las Vegas will also be named at the 7:30 p.m. meeting.

PEO Chapter CS

Mrs. W. S. Ward will open her home at 798 Via Santa Catarina in Claremont for the Tuesday meeting of Chapter CS, PEO Sisterhood, at 7:30 p.m.

Hope Chapter meets

Pomona International Chapter of the City of Hope for Lilly Moritz will meet at 7:30 p.m., Monday, in the home of Mrs. George Morgan, 1436 Vesta, Ontario.

The chapter holds a meeting each month on the third Monday. Plans will be made for the unit's first fund-raising activity of the season.

Embroiderers' Guild

Inland Empire Chapter, Embroiderers' Guild of America, will meet at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday at the Lighthouse for the Blind, 762 N. Sierra Way, San Bernardino.

There will be a workshop on crewel embroidery which will be conducted by Janet Smith. Further information may be obtained by writing to P. O. Box 3524, San Bernardino, Calif. 92413.

McKinley Auxiliary fashion show slated

San Gabriel Valley Auxiliary to McKinley Home for Boys will stage its annual fashion show, "A Shower of Fashions," Thursday at Orlando's Restaurant, 1700 W. Holt Ave., Pomona.

The latest spring and summer fashions from the Dutch Door in Glendora will be modeled by members of the auxiliary. Mrs. Sharon Merritt will be the commentator against a background of music provided by Mrs. Ruth Fiske. Mrs. Peggy Keith will greet the guests.

Miss Thelma Wright, ways and means chairman, is in charge of arrangements and will be assisted by Mrs. Mella Saltsman. In charge of decorations and programs will be Mrs. Vicki Manson, Mrs. Mayfair Brown and Mrs. Nina Ludlow.

Models will be Mmes. Virginia Buffum, Mildred Montgomery, Berta Haley, Nina Ludlow, Grace Mitchell, Alta Montes, Marian Pando and Norma Swain. Hostesses for the noon luncheon will be Mmes. Pauline Handy, Shirley Plummer, Alice Southwood and Sybil Terrell. Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. Dorothy Weeks, 626-5356, or Mrs. Eva Taylor, 626-5952, today.

ENTERING CONTEST

Silver service evolution told

Because tea was expensive, the first silver tea pots were very small. Accessorizing the tea pots were silver cups without handles, saucers, and when the English finally realized their tea pots were burning their tea tables, silver tea stands.

The silver sugar bowl was a late arrival at tea time. When first introduced, it was almost as large as the tea pot because the sugar it held was unrefined. It was not designed to match the pot.

Silver creamers were introduced even later than sugar bowls because the English at first drank their tea the Chinese way, which is why, too, none of the cups had handles. The first creamers had little round feet and eccentric shapes: one creamer was made to look like a cow. The creamer was not made to match the tea pot either.

In the early 18th century, silver tea kettles were added. The kettles had silver stands and in the center of these stands were lamps which heated the kettles. Tea could then be made right at table and less tea used. The cost was still a bother.

It was only after all the items used in the making and serving of tea had been introduced individually as unmatched pieces that the first matching silver tea service appeared. In the last part of George III's reign, the coffee pot was made a part of the tea service. The standard service, as we know it, consists of six pieces, including the kettle and waste bowl.

YW group meets Wednesday at YWCA

Los Companeras, sponsored by the YWCA of Greater Pomona Valley is multicultural group of women who meet every week.

Wednesday, the members will meet at the YWCA, 1787 N. Garey Ave., Pomona, at 9:30 a.m., to work on a quilt for a fund-raising project. On April 27, a Social Security Office speaker will present current information on regulations affecting benefits for women. The meeting will be at 9:30 a.m.

Interested women are invited to join the group. Information may be obtained by calling 622-1269 or 629-5471.

Sweet Adelines to attend meet

Mrs. Lois Whitney, director of Pomona Valley Chapter of Sweet Adelines, is preparing the chorus for regional competition to be held later this week in Phoenix, Ariz.

The chorus has grown from 30 members in 1967, when Mrs. Whitney became director, to over 70 members this year. Pomona Valley took fifth place at competition last year and is a promising contender for the contest this year. There will be over 2,000 singers competing from throughout the southwest.

Nine members of the Pomona Valley chapter will also be competing in regional quartet competition. These singers belong to three of the 16 competing quartets. Members of the "Sound Painters" are Glenda and Sue Lee of Chino, Luan Dieterich of Chino and Joyce Waters of Claremont. Three members of the "Western Union" are Dee DeFrank of Upland, Doreen Keepers of Pomona and Charlotte Nelson of Claremont. The "Norse Winds" duo are Chris Peurifoy of West Covina and Lois Whitney of Glendora.

Gretchen Ross of Upland, council member, and Sheila Schoonmaker of Claremont, junior council member, will represent Pomona Valley at the regional council session when new officers will be installed.

Joyce Brothers

Assertiveness asset

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: My daughter says I need to take a course in assertiveness. What could she mean by this? It's really been bothering me. I'm happy and angry, aggressive women just make me sick. Is that what my daughter expects for a mother? I don't feel I've any need for this. — Z.J.

DEAR Z.J.: You tell me very little about you and your daughter but I can't help wondering why you haven't asked your daughter what she meant. Your inability to be direct may be what she's referring to when she suggests assertiveness training.

In my opinion, being assertive means having the confidence to honestly express what you feel and what you need. It means being able to be open enough to ask for opinions. By doing this, much stress and anxiety are avoided. For instance, it seems to me from your letter that you've been building up unnecessary tension and perhaps even anger, over your daughter's remark. Frankness and assertiveness could serve to reduce the distress you feel. It might also create a deeper understanding between you and your daughter.

You don't have to be angry or agressive to be assertive. Both men and women are learning that they don't have to be non-assertive to be liked.

I would interpret your daughter's remark as a sign that she respects and loves you enough to want you to keep in touch with yourself and your true feelings.

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: For 14 of my 15 years of marriage I've wanted desperately to divorce my husband. He pays the rent and that's honestly all I can say for him. I don't know what he does when he's out but I pray he'll stay away forever each time he leaves, for when he's home he mistreats me and my children. They're terrified of him and hide when they know he's coming. The only reason I've stayed is that my church says it's wrong to go, wrong for me and for my children. I told the minister I fear for my physical safety but he still says the marriage vows are sacred. — A.H.

DEAR A.H.: If this kind of physical mistreatment has been going on for this long, then there's no question that you should leave, regardless of what your minister says. Men and women of the church can have almost as many different opinions as doctors, lawyers, or other professionals have. The real decision in this matter rests with you. Your children cannot make the decision and it is really your responsibility to protect them and to give them as good a home as possible.

There used to be a feeling that divorce should be avoided at all costs because children suffered from a broken home. While divorce can be traumatic for children of any age, it often isn't as traumatic or as emotionally damaging as living in a home without love or respect.

Nuptials planned in May

Miss Linda M. Silva of Chino and Duane A. Beyenhof of Ontario will be married May 21 in Our Lady of the Assumption Catholic Church in Claremont.

The future bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Silva of Chino, graduated in 1974 from Pomona Catholic High School, Pomona.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Beyenhof of Ontario, the groom-to-be is a 1971 graduate of Chaffey High School in Ontario. He is employed by Alpha Beta in West Covina.

DANCER REHEARSES

Kathy Blackwell of San Dimas, a member of the Dance Arts Studio Ballet Group that will perform in three ballet numbers in Verdi's opera, "Aida," poses on the spacious ground at the Philo Biano home in Alta Loma as two members of West End Opera Guild watch. They are Mrs. Peter Bulza and Mrs. Roy Muelchi of Alta Loma.

Affirmative action meet scheduled

A conference on affirmative action law for women and minority groups will be held in San Francisco from April 29 through May 1.

Items to be covered include federal and state compliance agencies and how to go to an employer with affirmative action demands.

The conference is being presented by Women Organized for Employment (WOE), 127 Montgomery St., San Francisco, 94105.

At Biane rancho

Aperitivo plans told

The Philo de Rancho, home of Mr. and Mrs. Philo Biane in Alta Loma, will be the setting for the West End Opera Guild Aperitivo to be held as a precelebration of the presentation of the opera, "Aida," at Gardiner Spring Auditorium in Ontario.

Wine will be served by Lisa Biane between 1 and 1:30 p.m. at the event Wednesday from the privately labeled flor sherry of the Biane winery. A tour of the home and winery will take place before the preview of the opera.

By special request Edward White, Ph. D., of the Claremont Colleges, will return as guest speaker. His reviews are erudite, informative and humorous. Mrs. Albert Kermer will introduce the speaker.

Information concerning the event or reservations may be obtained by calling Mrs. Maurice Wilkins, 985-3416, or Mrs. Clifford Kleist, 987-2459.

Maestro Mario Cajati will again conduct the West End Professional Opera Symphony. Donald Brinegar, choral director of Claremont High School, is the choral director for the four-act opera that calls for a very large chorus.

High in the foothills of Alta Loma, the Biane home, setting for the Aperitivo, has every advantage of contemporary architecture while retaining an atmosphere reminiscent of Old World Italy and early California.

The spacious house, completed in 1975, was designed by the Bianes, who sought to combine favorite aspects of their previous homes. An interior blending of earth tones, heavy wood beams and slumpstone walls gives the feeling of an early California adobe, an atmosphere that extends outside with the extensive use of painted tiles throughout the patios and grounds.

NANCY PETERSON

Peterson, Duhamel troth told

Miss Nancy Suzanne Peterson and Oliver William Duhamel of Ontario are engaged.

The bride-elect daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin E. Peterson of Ontario, graduated from Montclair High School in 1976. Miss Peterson is employed at and attends Chaffey College.

The future bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Duhamel of Ontario, graduated from Chaffey High School in 1974. He is attending Lumbleau School of Real Estate and is employed at Freightliner in Chino.

Cosmetology contest set at college

More than 150 cosmetology students at Citrus College will present a spring hairstyling contest from 6 until 10 p.m., Monday, in Citrus College auditorium.

The public is invited to watch the contestants at any time during the evening to watch the contestants as they cut and style hair. Each contestant will furnish models. The students will compete in five categories and there will be trophies awarded in each category.

Music and other entertainment will be provided during the evening. William Collett, cosmetology instructor at Citrus College, will serve as master of ceremonies and Joyce Bencini will act as mistress of ceremonies.

Group says to grab phone, not the cake

MERIDEN, Conn. (AP) — "Don't take a friend to dinner tonight" might well be the motto of Overeaters Anonymous.

Most compulsive eaters can't hope to win the fight against fat without outside help, the group preaches.

"Any time during the day, if you feel like eating a cupcake, call any of us," the leader of the local chapter tells new members. "Just say, 'Talk to me awhile, I'm having trouble. I want to eat.' By the time you're done talking, you don't feel hungry any more."

If the message sounds like advice from an Alcoholics Anonymous meeting, it's no coincidence. The nationwide eaters group uses the same 12 steps that AA has found so successful in repulsing demon rum.

Abstinence, religious faith and anonymity play important roles in the program, says Miss A., a nurse who doesn't want her name publicized.

The crucial trial for each novice is going 21 days without between-meal snacks except diet soda, tea or coffee.

"The first 21 days are the worst," said Miss A. "But once you abstain for 21 days, you're not hungry in between meals any more."

The group also suggests alternative dieting plans, low and no carbohydrate menus. A physician's plan may be substituted.

It worked for Miss A. Two years ago she weighed 300 pounds. She lost a total of 75 pounds during three separate stints with another reducing group, but kept putting on pounds when she quit.

Since July with Overeaters Anonymous, she has discarded 40 more pounds and now weighs 185, she says. "I went from a size 48 dress to a size 18. I think it's fantastic."

The Los Angeles-based group has chapters in two dozen Connecticut communities including Hartford, Waterbury, New Haven, Stamford, Danbury, New Britain and New London.

The problems underlying overeating were obvious from the comments of some of the 20 persons at a recent afternoon meeting.

"When I was depressed, I used to go cook a whole meal for myself, then sit down and eat it."

"I don't sleep well and get up three or four times a night. I'm at the refrigerator before I'm even awake."

"I know now there are some foods I can't eat, like ketchup, sugar and bread. If I start eating them, I can't stop."

Freedom from fatness is the main goal of any reducing program, but the most gratifying reward sometimes is a surprise.

Almost half the adult women in the United States are in the labor force now, as opposed to less than a third in 1947.

Zontians schedule dinner

"Responsibilities of a Water Consumer" will be the program to be presented by Mrs. Miki Bratt when she addresses members of Zonta Club of Pomona Valley at a dinner meeting at 7 p.m., Wednesday, in the cafetorium of Pomona Valley Community Hospital. A social hour is scheduled at 6:30 p.m. in the home of Mrs. Helen Boughton.

Mrs. Bratt is water consultant to the Claremont League of Women Voters. She will discuss the problems and prospects of the Southern California water situation. She has been an active member of the LWV since 1964.

NICKLAUS BLAST

Jack Nicklaus blasts out of the sand trap on the fifth hole at La Costa Saturday. Nicklaus saved his par on the hole with a long putt and went on to claim a share of the Tourney of Champions lead going into today's final round.

Kirkwood rescues Halos

By BILL LANGLEY
PB Sports Editor

ANAHEIM — Relief pitcher Don Kirkwood saved more than the Angels' win Saturday night.

He may have also saved his body from serious injury.

The Angels' relief pitcher picked up the club's first save of the season by holding off the pesky Seattle Mariners in the ninth to finish a 6-4 victory.

Seattle had the bases loaded with one run in and no outs when Kirkwood faced lead-off hitter Larry Milbourne.

A shot came off Milbourne's bat towards Kirkwood. Somehow, the Angel pitcher was able to get his glove on the ball even though the force of the impact seemed to knock him over. Kirkwood was then able to throw to third baseman Dave Chalk to double up Bob Stinson, who was on his way home with the Mariners' fifth run.

All of a sudden, the Angels had two outs and Kirkwood completed the job by getting Dave Collins on a fly.

"You have to get it some way," Kirkwood said about his catch which turned the game around. If Milbourne's drive had been inches either way, Seattle would have at least a tie.

The powerful new Angels again delighted a crowd of 19,690 with another display of home runs.

Behind early 3-1, the Angels quickly caught up in the third inning when Bobby Bonds and Don Baylor hit back-to-back home runs for their third of the season.

It was the first time since last May 7 that the Angels enjoyed the thrill of back-to-back homers.

After tying it, the Halos moved ahead by scoring single runs in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings thanks to a pair of doubles by Jerry Remy.

Remy gave the Angels the lead in the fourth when his two-bagger scored Chalk, who had singled and stole second. Singles by Dan Briggs, Bruce Bochte and Chalk added another run in the fifth while Remy's double and Bonds' single added the final score in the sixth.

The jury is still out on Angel starter Paul Hartzell, who was making his first start of the season after suffering a shoulder injury this spring.

Hartzell worked 6 2/3, innings, allowing seven hits and two walks. Only one of Seattle's three runs against him was earned.

Chalk's error in the first inning led to a pair of Mariner runs and a third scored in the third on an infield single by Milbourne, two ground outs and Braun's perfect bunt single.

Hartzell, who was helped by three Angel double plays, came off after allowing a two-out double to Carlos Lopez in the seventh inning.

Dick Drago came in until the ninth when Kirkwood was brought in after Dan Meyer singled and Stinson drew a walk. But Kirkwood allowed a run-producing single to Lopez and a bunt hit to Craig Reynolds before luck arrived on Milbourne's smash.

Hooton blanks San Francisco

SAN FRAÑCISCO (AP) — Right-hander Burt Hooton pitched a five-hitter and Reggie Smith belted his third home run in two days, helping the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 5-0 victory over the San Francisco Giants Saturday.

Hooton, 1-1, helped his cause with a successful squeeze bunt as the Dodgers scored twice in the fourth inning for a 3-0 lead off loser Lynn McGlothen, 0-2.

Smith, who hit two homers Friday, connected with two outs in the first inning for a 1-0 lead. Dusty Baker's one-out single, Steve Yeager's run-scoring double and Hooton's squeeze added the two runs in the fourth.

The Dodgers, beating the Giants for the seventh straight time in Candlestick Park, added a run in the eighth on Yeager's second double, Hooton's sacrifice, Davey Lopes' fielders choice bunt, Lopes stolen base and Bill Russell's single. In the ninth, the Dodgers scored their fifth run on Rick Monday's RBI double.

Hooton retired the first 10 Giants before yielding a triple to Rob Andrews with one out in the fourth. The Giants had two runners on base in the fifth and eighth inninngs, but the Dodgers' starter worked out of trouble.

The Giants' first hit was tainted. After Hooton retired 10 in a row, Andrews hit a long liner to right-center. Both Smith and Monday had a chance for the ball, but hesitated and it fell between them and rolled to the ence.

Hooton, who had not won a day game since last May, worked out of the inning by striking out Bill Madlock and retiring Darrell Evans on a grounder.

The Giants' biggest threat came in the fifth when Willie McCovey led off with a single and went to second on Terry Whitfield's bloop hit to center. John LeMaster then popped to second and Marc Hill grounded into an inning-ending double play.

The hot-hitting Dodgers kept several individual streaks intact. Baker and Russell each have hit in all eight games, while Yeager now has a seven-game string.

Cey reached base five straight times with a first-inning single and four walks, but his RBI string came to an end after he had at least one in each of the first seven games.

Pair hold T of C lead

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Tom Purtzer, 25, one of that endless line of youngsters who have claimed the pro tour for their very own this year, was properly respectful — at least for a while — of Jack Nicklaus, the man he tied for the third round lead Saturday in golf's $225,000 Tournament of Champions.

"He's right there," said Purtzer, who then looked ahead to today's final round. "You have to be conscious of him. He's the greatest there is, maybe the greatest there's ever been."

Then he added:

"But I can't worry about Jack. I've just got to play my own game."

Nicklaus, at 37 one of the few men able to withstand the tide of youth that has swept the tour this season, then fell victim to some questions that he quickly turned into a joke.

It started with a convoluted query involving the younger players and the older players — the latter obviously a reference to Nicklaus.

"I'm not going to answer that," he said.

Then the questions came in bunches:

"How long do you think you can continue to play?"

"Is the equipment as good now as it was in your day?"

"What is this?" Nicklaus asked. "Even my wife is starting to call me an old veteran. Somebody give me my cane and I'll get out of here."

He didn't need a cane, but a couple of fortunate drops off cart paths and the collapse of second-round leader Bob Wynn helped immeasurably.

Nicklaus, seeking a fifth title in this elite tournament that brings together only the winners of regular tour events from the last 12 months, scrambled to an erratic 70 and a 210 total, six under par on the windswept, 6,855 yard La Costa Country Club course.

Purtzer, one of a record 12 men making their first appearance in the event sponsored by Mutual of New York, came out of a closely bunched pack with a 68 that gave him a share of the lead.

One shot back was Mark Hayes, the Oklahoma quiet man who also shared the lead until three-putting the final hole for a bogey. He had a 69 and a 211 total.

"I'm within striking distance and I have to be happy about that," said Hayes, who won the Tournament Players Championship earlier this season.

At 212, only two shots back, were Tom Kite and Butch Baird. Kite had a 70, Baird a 69.

At 213 and very much in the chase for the $45,000 first prize were Australian David Graham and Joe Inman. Graham shot a 70 in the mild, sunny, windy weather and Inman had a 71.

Wynn, who had a three-stroke lead at the end of two rounds, lost most of it with a tee shot that hooked out of bounds and led to a double bogey seven on the second hole. He also made double bogey five on the 14th and finished with 78 and a 215 total. Johnny Miller, so disgusted with his play that he dropped his driver on his backswing on the final hole, had a 73-214.

Tom Watson, who beat Nicklaus last week in their head-to-head confrontation for the Masters crown, rallied with a 69 but, at 216, appeared out of title contention. Lee Trevino, again trying to return to competition after major back surgery, had a 74-220 and Ben Crenshaw shot 75-222.

Girls' teams hit the road

San Antonio League champion Upland downed Workman Friday and will visit Monte Vista Tuesday. Ontario Christian, by virtue of downing Rosamond 52-50 will travel to Elsinore. All games start at 8 p.m.

Yankees deny Jackson feud

MILWAUKEE (AP) — New York Yankee Manager Billy Martin and Reggie Jackson, the team's millionaire slugging outfielder, Saturday denied they are feuding because Jackson did not play in the Yankees' 7-4 defeat by the Milwaukee Brewers Friday night.

"There is no problem—none," said the temperamental Jackson, in a cheerful, bantering mood as the Yankees took batting practice prior to Saturday's game.

"I didn't play last night because I have a sore elbow," he said. "I think I could have hit, but that's the manager's decision. I'm paid to play, not to make those decisions. I do what I'm told. As far as I'm concerned, it was just a day off. It was as simple as that."

Martin, who had loudly chastised a New York writer after Friday's game, said Saturday, "Some of the press is trying to make something out of nothing. Reggie has a sore elbow and he had trouble swinging the bat."

Twins promote Willie Norwood

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — Outfielder Willie Norwood, a La Verne College product, is expected to join the Minnesota Twins today to replace Glenn Adams on the club's roster.

U.S. sweeps past S. Africa netters

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The United States swept South Africa in their zone Davis Cup competition Saturday, with the doubles team of Bob Lutz and Stan Smith victorious 7-5, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3 in a match that was interrupted when two protesters threw oil on the court.

The victory gave the United States a 3-0 sweep in the best of five competition.

The United States had won the first two singles matches of the international competiton on Friday, and the victory in doubles left meaningless the two remaining singles matches scheduled for today.

The 6-foot-5 Smith proved the bulwark in doubles, with an assortment of shots ranging from smashes to soft lobs that sailed over the South Africans' heads.

Bob Hewitt, South Africa's star player, chose not to play in the Davis Cup competition, leaving his country with a team of veteran Frew McMillan and 24-year-old Byron Bertram.

It was Bertram who proved shaky throughout the warm and sunny afternoon.

A picket line of about 700 persons marched outside the Newport Tennis Club, protesting U.S. involvement with South Africa which practices racial apartheid.

The picketing was peacecful outside the gate. But after the first two sets had been won by the United States and South Africa led the third by two games to one, two black men dashed down an aisle and onto the court, one of them dumping motor oil onto the court from a plastic bottle.

The United States' nonplaying captain Tony Trabert assailed one of the men with a tennis racket before they were taken into custody by Newport Beach police.

Police Lt. Arb Campbell identified the two men as Alvin Leonard Dortch, 29, and Stanley Deacon Alexander, 30, both of Los Angeles.

Leaders of the pickets denied that the two, both of whom had tickets to the match, were involved with their organizations. However, efforts were begun immediately to raise the $500 each for the pair's release.

The match was delayed for 35 minutes while the cement court was cleaned. In the final set, Bertram fell down but he was away from the area where oil had been spilled.

Injury shelves Brian Bethke

Bethke, a transfer from Mt. San Antonio Junior College in California, was vying for the job with Mark Vicendese before suffering the injury Friday.

Vicendese, a sophomore, quarterbacked three Kansas games last season, including an upset win over Missouri.

Investigation looming for U.S. Boxing Championships

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC-TV dropped the United States Boxing Championship Saturday pending an a full-scale investigation of the various allegations concerning false records, rankings and kickbacks.

The ABC Sports action of suspending telecasts of the tournament had the affect of suspending the tournament. ABC has put up the $1.5 total purse money for the tournament promoted by Don King.

ABC's announcement came about three hours before the scheduled 4:30 p.m., EST, start of three tournament semifinal bouts in Miami.

However, the network did telecast two three-round exhibitions by heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali. The tournament fights, including a heavyweight bout between Larry Holmes and Stan Ward, were replaced by three other 10rounders.

ABC Sports said in a statement that it has agreed with its legal counsel, Hawkins, Delafield and Wood and "that it is imperative that the law firm appoint a totally independent special investigator with impeccable law enforcement credentials to head up the investigation. The appointment of such a person will be announced shortly."

An investigation of charges has been in the hands of the U.S. Boxing Championship committee, headed by James A. Farley Jr., chairman of the New York State Atheltic Commission. A federal grand jury in Baltimore also has been investigating charges.

King said at a news conference in Miami after the ABC action was announced that he "has agreed with ABC-TV Sports to the suspension of telecasts of these thrilling contests as quickly as the investigation is concluded (and) as soon as a more adequate structure of rating boxers properly is in effect."

The promoter felt the investigation would take two to four weeks.

Ali told King at the news conference, "I don't know the mathematics of the problem, but I know your hands are clean and from what I see of the people here today, I believe and they believe that you're all right. We wouldn't be here unless you were."

Former heavyweight champion Joe Louis and lightweight champion Roberto Duran and Esteban deJesus also attended the conference.

"There is only one thing wrong (with the tournament)," Ali told King who is black. "They got a spook running it. We live in a white society and we've been brainwashed and the whites have been brainwashed to believing that white is right."

"Since the early stakes of the tournament, ABC has been investigating various allegations of improprieties and has subsequently turned over to the U.S. attorney for Maryland evidence that it has uncovered concerning such impropieties," ABC Sports said.

A federal grand jury investigation in Baltimore began after heavyweight Scott LeDoux charged following a contreversial loss to Johnny Boudreaux at the U.S. Naval Academy Feb. 13 that the tournament favored fighers connected with Paddy Flood and Al Braverman, who work with King. There also have been charges of kickbacks being made by fighters to secure tournament berths and accusations that the basis of the tournament, records and U.S. rating compiled by The Ring magazine, was faulty.

ABC sports said that on April 8 it obtained and turned over to the U.S. attorney an affidavit "from a fighter stating that he had been contacted by a wouldbe manager who told him he could get him rated in Ring magazine's top 10 U.S. rankings, although he had not fought in a year and had never been ranked before."

ABC said the fighter stated his basis for his being ranked third by The Ring was two fights which never occurred.

The network also announced April 12 that further evidence indicated several fighters in the tournament appeared to have inaccurate records, "which had been compiled by Ring magazine and used to determine the rankings of fighters entered in the tournament."

ABC said Saturday it has determed that "the record of numerous fighters in the tournament as listed in the 1977 Ring Record Book are, in fact, inaccurate and contain many fights which apparently never took place."

This led the network to believe "that the very basis of the tournament has been severely compromised."

Evert makes net finals

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Martina Navratilova broke Sue Barker's service in the seesaw eighth game of the third set to go on to a 6-4, 3-6, 6-3 World Series of Women's Tennis semi-finals victory Saturday.

In the final of the $100,000 tournament today, Miss Navratilova will meet Chris Evert, who bested Virginia Wade 6-3, 6-4 in earlier play.

Miss Navratilova lost five consecutive games at the end of the second set and beginning of the third.

"I wasn't hitting well at all at the end of the second set and beginning of the third. Then I started hitting my forehand," she said after the match. "I was trying to go to the net more often and trying to get my first serve in."

The second-seeded Miss Navratilova had five service aces to Miss Barker's one, and each player double-faulted three times.

MSAC nipped by Fullerton

By PAUL CLICK
PB Correspondent

Mt. San Antonio College took a 5-1 lead into the eighth frame of Saturday's contest with Fullerton but the Hornets scored five times in their final two at bats to take the game, 6-5.

In other junior college baseball action, Chaffey downed Palomar 4-1 while Citrus bested San Diego City College 7-2 in a pair of Mission Conference contests.

Fullerton scored two runs in the ninth off of Kevin Chapman, in relief of starter Bill Morrissey. The Hornets put together two doubles and a walk for the winning tallies.

The key play in the South Coast Conference contest occurred in the eighth. Tim Painton hit a line drive to MSAC centerfielder Joe Koval, but as he raced in to flag the drive, the ball took off and sailed over his head to the fence in deep right-center.

Before the misjudged line drive, Morrissey had pitched a strong game. He had the Fullerton batters popping the ball up before he was knocked out in the eighth.

MSAC racked up a 5-1 lead in the first five innings of the contest. However, the Mounties had chances in both the third and sixth frames to add several runs to their cushion, but could not come up with a timely hit when they needed it.

Bob Costello led off the fifth with a booming home run over the left-centerfield fence as MSAC scored three times to take a 5-1 lead. Vince Teresi scored from first on a Larry Marsh double into the leftfield corner, and Marsh scored moments later on the Mounties' third hit of the stanza.

Costello went 2-for-4 to pace MSAC's 10-hit attack. Brian Menasco also contributed two hits as the Mounties' SCC record dropped to 4-6. MSAC is now 16-10 on the year.

Chaffey upped its Mission Conference mark to 9-5 and its season log to 17-9 with the win over Palomar. Don Pierce fired a seven-hitter for the Panthers to register his eighth mound win of the year vs. a single loss.

Howard Garcia, Marc Ludwin and Rick Fellhauer all had RBIs for Chaffey, Fellhauer's double being the only extra-base hit of the game.

Citrus' Hank Ritchey held SDCC to only nine hits as the Owls won their fourth M.C. game vs. 10 losses. Citrus is now 12-14 on the year.

Bobby Alexander led the Owl attack with three hits and two RBIs, while Jeff Snyder and Whit Gill also had two RBIs for Citrus.

Dinner to honor local prep athletes

Three local prep athletes will be among 11 honored Thursday night for their high grade point averages at the 8th annual Scholar/Athlete awards dinner at the Brookside Golf Club in Pasadena.

Cocktails will be served at 5 :30 p.m. with dinner at 6:30 for the event sponsored by the pasadena-Greater San Gabriel Valley Chapter, National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame.

Guest speakers for the dinner include former USC star Ricky Bell, the NFL's Tampa Bay coach John McKay and Ram linebacker Rich Kay. Former Alhambra High and UCLA star Dick Wallen will be the emcee.

Dinner tickets are $12.50 apiece and can be reserved by writing to Ron Okum at 180 S. Los Robles, Suite 470, Pasadena 91101 or by phone at (213) 577-0900.

Upland sponsors safety classes

A course in "Hunter Safety Education," sponsored by the National Rifle Association and the California Department of Fish and Game, will be given at the Recreation Annex in Upland April 21 and 22.

The purpose of the course is to lessen the possibility of injury or death resulting from misuse of firearms, to stress conservation and sportsmenship and to strengthen relations between hunters and landowners.

A safety course is required for all first-time buyers of a California hunting license.

Students will receive, in addition to a certificate of completion, an identification card, a certificate of attendance of a NRA rifle/pistol/shotgun/home firearms class and brassards for jacket wear.

The course will be held April 21 and 22 (both sessions are necessary for completion) from 6 to 10:30 p.m. at the Upland Recreation Annex, 404 N. 2nd St. in Upland.

Registration fee is $4 for adults and $3 for students under 18 with an age minimum of 8 years. Fees will be used for training materials and course expense. All instructors are NRA and state-certified volunteers.

Registration may be made by calling 987-0811 before 11 a.m. or after 6 p.m.

Leos dismantle Whittier

By DON BRADLEY
PB Staff Writer

La Verne College is truly the scourage of the SCIAC.

Ben Hines' wrecking crew dismantled Whittier twice Saturday, 14-6 and 18-8 and knocked the Poets back to third place.

That gives the Leopards a perfect 14-0 slate in the conference and a 20-7 mark overall. The Leos can clinch at least a tie for the championship with a win at Whittier Tuesday.

They pounded Poet pitchers for 37 hits in an awesome display of hitting Saturday. Included were 10 doubles, a triple and eight home runs.

Tim Burzette and Paul Contreras each batted in eight runs. Contreras, the number two catcher, was the designated hitter in the first game and played right field in the nightcap.

The transfer from USD belted four home runs, three in the second game. Burzette had a single and double in the opener and a pair of doubles in the nightcap.

But they were only two of a torrid group that had Whittier pitchers wincing every time they swung a bat.

Brian Embery, who played first base in place of Dave Cash in the second game, had a homer, triple, two doubles and a single in a perfect 5-for-5 performance. Nash had a double and single in the first game.

Dave Chavez, from Chaffey JC, played left field and cracked a home run in each game.

Bob Waldusky sat out the first game, but played center field in the second and took over the team home run lead with a roundtripper in the Leos' seven-run , sixth inning to give him nine for the season.

La Verne came up with a seven-run sixth inning in each game to send the shell-shocked Poets away mumbling to themselves.

"We hit the ball pretty good," agreed Hines. "But the ball was going out of here pretty good, too. Contreras did a great job for us today. It's going to be hard to keep him out of there."

The two teams garnered a total of 56 hits in the twinbill, 25 for extra bases including 11 home runs, a triple and 13 doubles.

They jumped on starter Steve Madrigal for six runs in the first two innings of the opener.

The Poets came back with six themselves in the second and third innings knocking Steve Goggans out in the process. Doug Thomson allowed four hits the rest of the way and picked up the win as Contreras' first homer of the day put the Leos in front to stay, 7-6, in the fifth inning.

In the second contest, La Verne led, 3-0, 3-2 and 4-2 before the Poets went ahead, 5-4 on John Sanford's three-run homer in the top of the fourth.

But the Leopards reclaimed the lead for good with a pair of runs in their half of the inning

La Verne will send Brent Jetton (5-0) against Whittier Tuesday and Thomson (4-3) against Cal State Fullerton at Boysen Park, Fullerton Tuesday night. The next home night game is Wednesday when the Leos take on Chapman at 7 p.m.

Shavers KOs foe

Shavers, 31, ran his record to 55-5-1 as he overpowered the 30-year-old Smith before more than 1,500 people at the Aladdin Hotel Theater for the Performing Arts.

Shavers, at 209 pounds, assaulted Smith, 202, with rights and lefts, battering him into the ropes. He kept slugging mercilessly until referee Richard Green pushed Shavers away and gave Smith a standing eight count.

ASL Sunshine to play at CC

The Sunshine, headquartered in Orange County, will play Cities United at the Chaffey football stadium in an exhibition contest slated to start at 3 p.m.

The Sunshine, slated to play their home games at Santa Ana Bowl during the regular season, is coached by Derek Lawther.

Cities United, the Sunshine's foe today, is a local team consisting of young college players and other amateurs. It is coached by Frits Rosenveldt, Chaffey College's soccer coach.

Preciding the Sunshine-Cities United game will be a match between the San Bernardino County All-Stars and the San Gabriel Soccer League All-Stars. That game is set to start at 1 p.m.

An admission of 50 cents for childern 12 and under and $2 for persons 13 and over will be charged at the game.

NBA stats nix home court edge

NEW YORK (AP) — Remember all the talk about how the home-court advantage was playing a bigger role than ever in National Basketball Association games?

Well, the regular season is over and the results are in, and it turns out to have been just that—talk.

Home teams won 618 games and lost 284 this past season, a winning percentage of .685. That's only a slight increase over last year's mark of .659 and well below the 74 per cent pace being set earlier this year.

"The further into the season you get, the more teams begin to play to their level," observed Philadelphia Coach Gene Shue, explaining why the home-court advantage dipped as the season progressed.

"Late in the year, you find the good teams are able to win on the road as well as at home. When the playoffs approach and games begin to mean more, the good teams begin to dominate."

Leading the way was Los Angeles, which broke an NBA record by compiling a record of 37-4 at the Forum. Denver was right behind at 35-6, equalling the previous league record. Portland was next at 35-6 and Houston one game further back at 34-7.

"How important is the homecourt advantage?" asked Lakers Coach Jerry West. "We won 37 games at home, so I'll say it's important. I just hope it holds up in the playoffs."

On the road the Lakers were 16-25, enough to give them the best over-all record in the league, 53-29, and the homecourt advantage in every round of the playoffs. And in the Lakers' case, the home-court advantage is indeed a big one.

Not a single team was able to post a winning record on the road. Philadelphia came closest at 18-23, with Golden State next at 17-24. Boston and Washington tied Los Angeles' 16-25.

By contrast, only two clubs had losing records at home. Atlanta was 19-22 and the hapless New York Nets were a woeful 10-31.

The worst road record belonged to Milwaukee, 6-35.

HOPES TO STICK — Roger Freed, the former Mt. San Antonio College star, hopes to stick this year with the St. Louis Cardinals after 11 season of professional ball.

Ex-Mountie hopes to stay

NEW YORK (AP) — After 11 seasons as a professional baseball player, only 2½ of them in the luxury of the major leagues, Roger Freed hopes the days of long minor league bus rides and less-than-plush accommodations are a thing of the past.

"It hasn't been easy, but I'm not knocking it," says the 30-year-old pinch hitter-outfielder-sub first baseman and third-string catcher of the St. Louis Cardinals. "I've wanted to be in baseball ever since I can remember."

But Freed didn't dream he would follow the minor league trail through Aberdeen, S.D., Stockton, Calif., Aberdeen again, Stockton one more time, Dallas-Fort Worth, Rochester, Oklahoma City, Indianapolis, Monterrey—that's Mexico, not California—and Denver.

Along the way, he stopped in for cups of coffee with Baltimore in 1970, Philadelphia in 1971-2, Cincinnati in 1974 and Montreal a year ago. Most of the time was spent winning a couple of minor league Player of the Year awards and hitting 216 home runs in the bushes—but only 13 in the majors.

"I feel that 1971 was my only really tough year in baseball," Freed says. "It was my first full year in the majors, I was in and out of the line-up a lot and I was just trying to get adapted to everything.

"I hit over .300 the last six weeks and in '72 I hit well for the first three-quarters of the season. It was really discouraging when the Phillies sent me back to Triple A.

Last year was Freed's best. Playing with Denver of the American Association he batted .309 with 42 homers and 102 RBI in just 398 official at-bats. He also hit a home run during the playoffs and 20 more in Puerto Rico's Winter League.

"I've played in so many winter leagues, I didn't want to play my summer ball there, too," he said, referring to his 1975 season in the Mexican League.

Fortunately, Vern Rapp was his manager at Denver. Rapp was hired as the Cardinals' new manager this year and Freed came along, too.

Aztecs open home season

The game will be broadcast live on KGIL Radio (1260) and KFOX Radio (1280) with Gil Stratton calling the action. Game time is 2 p.m.

Aztecs coach Terry Fisher was very pleased with his team's initial performance in the 3-0 victory over the San Jose Earthquakes. Said Fisher, "I think our forwards (Steve David, Des Backos and Bob McAlinden) showed that they'll be scoring plenty of goals this season, and our defense held together very nicely being it's the very first game."

It was David's two-goal effort in San Jose which gave him the honor of being named NASL Offensive Player of the Week, and putting him alone on top of the league scoring list.

The four points also moved him up to 15th place in the NASL's all-time scorers standings. David still shares a league record for having scored five goals in a single game, and was the NASL's leading scorer and MVP in 1975.

The three-goal victory gives the Aztecs nine points in the standings, putting them on top of the Southern Division just ahead of Dallas. It was also the biggest margin of victory recorded in the NASL's opening weekend.

Team Hawaii will be coming into the Coliseum with its own season-opening victory, a 1-0 shootout decision over Seattle. Hawaii coach Hubert Vogelsinger is facing the task of rebuilding a team which was moved from San Antonio during the off-season, and which has numerous new faces on the roster.

Today's home opener will also be T-Shirt Day, with the first 2,000 youngsters entering the stadium with a paid admission receiving an official Aztecs T-Shirt.

Self-defense class offered

The Pomona Park and Recreation Department will offer a class on Women's Self Defense beginning Monday evening in Simon Junior High gymnasium.

Instructor Jack Hodge will hold session Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7 until 9 p.m.

The first meeting will be an introductory and demonstration session. Official classes begin on Wednesday evening. Registration fee for the 12 lessons is $36 payable at the first session.

Tee to Cup

The pro looks at Mt. Meadows

By PHIL ROCHE
PB Staff Writer

When Dave Cink gazes over the rolling hills of his Mountain Meadows course these days, he imagines the championship layout that he knows it will be in a few years. "We've got the makings of a real championship course here," says Cink, who's been head pro since it opened in September.

"The three aspects of the course that I like so much are the greens, the three definite tee areas on every hole, and the strategy required to play the course," says Cink. "In a couple of years we'll be turning people away because we'll have too much play. The other courses in the area will have to take the players who can't get on here."

Cink believes the bunkers with their fine, light sand have been excellently placed. "When you get a long hitter on the back tees, he's got to place his ball perfectly or he may wind up in a big bunker, Cink says. "This course requires a golfer to think, you can't just go out and hit the ball." The new Mountain Meadows plays 6,146 yards from the regular tees, but stretches out to 6,480 yards from the blue tees. "We think golfers will find our greens to be excellent," says the pro. "They're very large and putt very true. The grass on the greens is ununbievably lush."

Cink considers the 205-yard 13th hole to be the best on the course. "This is an outstanding hole," says the 34-year-old Cink who has played on most of the great courses in the West. "It's a solid 3 or 4-wood over the canyon, and the shot must be hit right on line."

Cink likes the 380-yard 18th as a closer primarily because "it's a very good driving hole." He praises the opening hole extensively. "It's a par 5, 535 yards long, and it can't be reached in two from the blue tees," says the pro. "You just keep the ball as far right as possible and you'll generally be all right."

Cink, who began his golf career when he was 13 at Sepulveda Golf Course, began working around the course driving range when he was 15. He played golf at Raceda High School "mainly because I was the biggest kid and could hit the the ball farther than anyone else." When he was 21, Cink turned pro becoming head professional at Van Nuys Golf Course in 1968. Several years later he moved to the head pro job at Paso Robles Golf Course until 1974 when he accepted the position as Lynx sales representative.

When Mountain Meadows opened again in September he was named head professional. He is assisted by two young pros, Doug Colliflower and Paul Hahn.

Cink has played in many of the PGA tournaments in the West and is noted for his length off the tees. He played in the Bob Hope Classic several times and finished high in the Hawaiian Open in 1972. "I'm really looking forward to tournament golf again," says Cink who has four area tournaments scheduled in April. He annually plays in the Southern California PGA and in 1972 was runnerup to Tommy Jacobs.

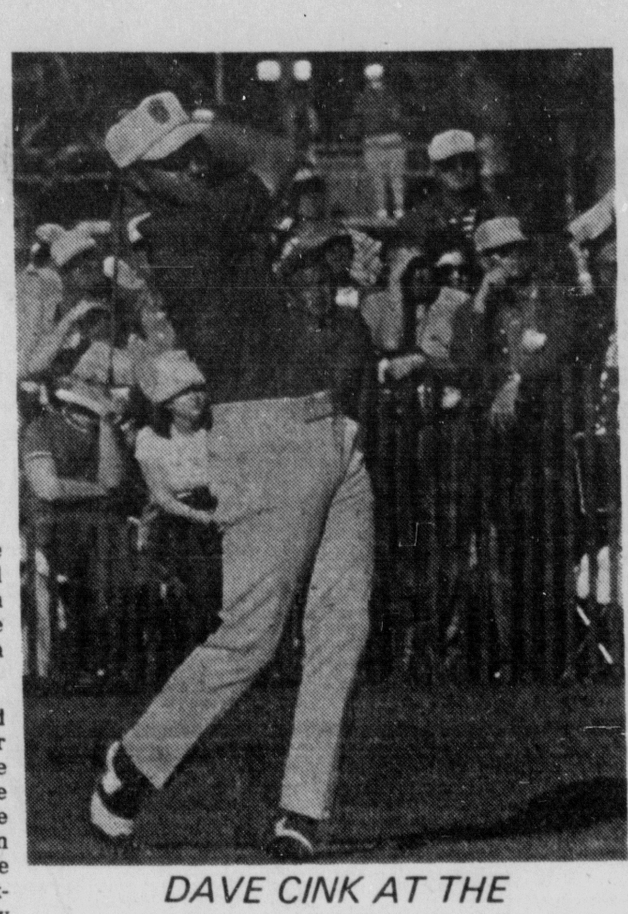
The ideal club pro then is personable, handsome, able to compete with the touring pros, runs an attractive pro shop, and can teach the game "like nobody's business."

Cink appears to fit the description perfectly.

While I was hanging around the pro shop, one fellow kidded Cink about his teaching. "Listen, I didn't do so hot out today and after all those lessons from you."

"What'd you shoot," I asked.

"I had 40-38."



DAVE CINK AT THE BOB HOPE CLASSIC

"Man, that's a 78," I quickly figured. "What's your handicap?"

"18," he replied.

Enough said.

A near record turnout of 104 players participated in the 7th annual 90/10 La Verne-San Dimas tournament held recently at San Dimas Canyon. And when all the putts were dropped, there was San Dimas with the mayor's trophy symbolic of that community's win over neighbor La Verne.

Dave Anton fired a 78 to win low gross honors with Guy Friedland right behind with 79. Max Posik's 66 won low net, and the Callaway division was won by Joe Moreheiser of San Dimas (67) with Dale Flora of La Verne (74) second.

Addie Berner of San Dimas won women's low net with a 75. Don Spafford and Berry Brenner, both of San Dimas, won closest to the pin honors. Straightest drive on No. 18 was hit by Mike Dutton of San Dimas.

San Dimas walked off with the 90/10 when its 9 representative players fired an average of 97.3 to La Verne's 103. Co-chairmen for the popular event are Bryce Bailey and Ray Kaldenbach.

Boys and girls between the ages of 8 and 17 are invited to join the El Prado junior golf club. Bob Bickford, pro at the El Prado golf courses in Chino will supervise the instruction of juniors each Saturday at no charge to the player.

Tournaments and inter-club matches will be held. Juniors will also be eligible for reduced greens fee. The classes will be held at 1 p.m. For more information contact this number: 597-1753.

Hollywood Derby has big field

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Habitony, a stretch-runner in the mold of Silky Sullivan, tries to prove today that he's the class of 3-year-olds in California when he goes in the final leg of the California Golden Triple, the $227,500 Hollywood Derby at Hollywood Park.

Habitony won the second of the West Coast triple, the Santa Anita Derby, and will try to add the Hollywood Derby crown to his accomplishments in the final and richest of the three races.

The Hollywood Derby, which offers $140,000 to the winner, is the final West Coast stepping stone to the Kentucky Derby.

Regular rider Bill Shoemaker will be aboard Habitony in the 1⅛-mile event, with all 10 entries carrying 122 pounds.

For the Moment, a Leroy Jolley-trained brother of Honest Pleasure, is expected to be among the top contenders in the Hollywood Derby. For the Moment, to be ridden by Angel Cordero, finished second to Habitony in the Santa Anita Derby.

Cuzwuzwrong, who finished a fading 10th in the Santa Anita Derby following an upset victory in the opening race of the triple, the California Derby, will be ridden by Raul Ramirez.

Tommy Doyle, Habitony's trainer, said after the draw that he didn't really care that his horse was starting from the No. 3 post spot.

"What difference does it make where he draws?" Doyle said. "He's going to be last during the first part of it anyway."

Although Habitony normally stays back in the pack early, Doyle said Shoemaker will try to keep him relatively close to the pace in the Hollywood Derby since a couple of horses in the race can carry their speed almost the full distance.

Fernando Toro will be aboard J. George, who drew the inside position for the 1⅛-mile event. Sonny Collins, to be ridden by Don Pierce, will start from the No. 2 post position, and the rest of the field is Affiliate, Laffit Pincay; Nordic Prince, Sandy Hawley; Tale of Power, Chuck Baltzar; Steve's Friend, Ruben Hernandez, and Highland Light, Darrel McHargue.

Message carried to Asian nations

Carter endorses World Trade Week '77 campaign

LOS ANGELES (BW) — World Trade Week 1977 has been officially endorsed by President Jimmy Carter, who said that "trade generates forces of friendship and understanding, which in turn bring us closer to the kind of world we want."

Carrying President Carter's words to the nations of Asia is Joan Zimmerman of the Los Angeles-headquartered Flying Tiger Line. She was named Miss World Trade by the civic and commercial sponsors of the 51st celebration of World Trade Week, May 22-29.

Zimmerman, an account executive with the airfreight airline, is currently traveling through Asia to deliver President Carter's proclamation and official greetings from the mayors of Los Angeles and Long Beach, Calif., to civic officials in Japan, Korea, Taiwan, Hong Kong, the Philippines and Singapore. A special visit will be made to Nagoya, Japan, which is a sister city of Los Angeles.

"We live in a world where all of us must depend on each other — a world divided by nationality and philosophy, but drawn together by common problems and common hopes.

"We share with all people a concern about unemployment, inequality, poverty, inflation, and the danger of war. And we share with all people the hope of a life free of hunger, disease, and repression, and a determination to overcome international differences with mutual trust, respect and cooperation.

"Our desire for justice, stability, and peace finds practical expression in world trade. Trade generates forces of friendship and understanding, which in turn bring us closer to the kind of world we want.

"The United States is the unsurpassed leader in international commerce. Because our total trade is greater than that of any other nation, we can, by increasing our trade activities, make an enormous contribution to the health of the international economy, to the job market at home and abroad, to progressive relationships between rich and poor nations and, finally, to the cause of peace on our globe.

"Now, therefore, I, Jimmy Carter, president of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim the week beginning May 22, 1977, as World Trade Week.

"I urge business, labor, agricultural, educational, professional and civic groups, the communications media, and all concerned Americans, to observe World Trade Week with meetings, discussions, exhibits, ceremonies, and other appropriate activities that promote continuing awareness of the importance of World Trade to our nation and to our relations with other nations.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand this eighth day of April in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred seventy-seven, and of the independence of the United States of America the two hundred and first." — JIMMY CARTER

Industrial production gets boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aided by a sharp rise in auto production, the nation's industrial output got its largest boost in 19 months during March, the Federal Reserve Board says.

The index of industrial production increased by 1.4 per cent, compared with a 1 per cent climb in February and an eight-tenths of 1 per cent drop in January, the Federal Reserve reported Thursday.

The higher output implied expanding job opportunities in the near future, since the industrial sector accounts for about one-third of the jobs in the economy.

The industrial sector includes the nation's mines, factories and utilities.

The March increase moved the index to 135.1 per cent of its 1967 average. It was the biggest gain since a 2.2 per cent increase in August 1975. The index now is 5.5 per cent ahead of the same month a year ago and 2.5 per cent higher than the pre-recession peak in June 1974.

'Construction' set for newest resort

PHOENIX, Ariz. — (BW) — Robert H. Johnson, president and chief executive officer, Dell E. Webb Corp., said that construction will start immediately on the firm's newest resort hotel, Sahara Reno.

The announcement culminated more than two years of extensive market research and planning in the Reno area.

In the tradition of its sister properties, Sahara Vegas and Sahara Tahoe, the Sahara Reno will be a luxury hotel and casino situated in downtown Reno, Nev. Construction will be by the Webb firm's contracting group.

The Sahara Reno hotel complex will cost in excess of $37 million. When operational, it will bring Webb's annaul expenditures of its Nevada properties to approximately $190 million. The new hotel will provide employment for at least 1,000, bringing Webb's daily hotel employment in Nevada to approximately 7,000.

The Valley Bank of Nevada has arranged necessary funds for the project. The architectural firm of David Jacobsen Associates planned and coordinated design of the new hotel.

Initial construction will include a subterranean three-level parking garage to accommodate 650 cars.

The hotel will be 16 stories high with more than 400 guest rooms and suites. The top floor will feature a skyroom gourmet restaurant and lounge.

Casino facilities will occupy 36,000-square feet on the ground floor. Amenities will include a show lounge and bar as well as a snack bar and other lounges.

The second floor will have an 1,150-seat theatre restaurant to feature name entertainers, a 200-seat coffee shop, 29-seat buffet area, a 140-seat speciality restaurant and sundries shops.

Convention facilities on the third floor will consist of 10,000-square feet divisible into separate meeting rooms, capable of seating up to 800.

The new $37 million expenditure for the Sahara Reno hotel is in addition to the $22 million Webb has spent on improvement programs at its Nevada properties over the past two and a half years.

The hotel is scheduled to open the summer of 1978 and will be fully completed in the fall of 1978.

Existing Del Webb hotel properties in Nevada include the Sahara and Mint Hotels in Las Vegas, the Sahara Tahoe at Lake Tahoe and the Primadonna Casino in Reno. Hotels outside Nevada include Mountain Shadows Resort in Scottsdale and the TowneHouse in Phoenix, Ariz.; and the Newporter Inn, in Newport Beach, Calif.

Slang term

"Clink" is a slang term for prison or jail. It derived from the famous London gaol, the Clink of Southwark, which was destroyed by riots in 1780.

Strong rallies linked to tax rebate scuttling

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street applauded President Carter's scuttling of his plans for a $50-a-person tax rebate with strong rallies in both the stock and bond markets this past week.

The stock market chalked up its best weekly showing in more than a year.

There had been intense opposition to the rebate plan in the financial community, with its inflation fears and its traditionally conservative viewpoint on economic matters.

Numerous analysts argued that it was the wrong action to take and the wrong time to take it.

As William H. Gassett, vice president and economist at Eaton & Howard Inc., a Boston firm which operates a large group of mutual funds, put it:

"Perhaps there was some reason for considering a stimulus of this sort very early in the year when there was the possibility that business would not sufficiently recover, but business is improving and consumer spending and personal incomes have recently showed renewed strength."

So no one was surprised when stock and bond prices jumped ahead Thursday on word that Carter had abandoned the idea.

The Dow gained 8.82 on Thursday and 28.88 for the week — its biggest weekly gain since it rose 29.44 Feb. 17-20 of last year.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index climbed 2.69 to 101.04, and the New York Stock Exchange composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks gained 1.48 to 54.94.

Big Board volume averaged 24.78 shares a day, up from 17.11 the week before.

The President's decision on the rebate settled one political question of importance to investors. The spotlight shifts to another touchy issue in the coming week when Carter unveils his energy plan.

Drug chain announces expansion

Longs Drug Store, a retail drug chain, has announced its expansion into Arizona. The firm signed a lease with the Del Webb Corp. for a 25,000 square foot super retail drug store site in Sun City, which is northwest of Phoenix. It is anticipated this store will open next year.

President R.M. Long said "Longs is anxious to be of service to the people of Sun City and is grateful to the Del Webb Corp for this unique opportunity. The store will stock drugs, health and beauty aids, cosmetics, photo equipment, as well as a large selection of sundry merchandise. Longs will work hard to adapt to the wants and needs of Sun City residents."

Longs currently operates 101 drug stores in the states of California (including Pomona) and Hawaii. The 102nd store, the first store in Alaska, opened recently in Anchorage.

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures

Bread Is Rising again.

Bread, a soft rock quartet with a string hit singles, suddenly disbanded in 1973. Bread got back together in 1976, made an album, released a single and in March of this year went out on the road for the first time in four years as a loaf instead of single slices.

One of the group's two lead singers, David Gates, says it's almost like they never had been away. He says he was optimistic that Bread could once again be a taste-pleasing group but he thought they'd have some building to do to get to the point where they left off in 1973. Instead, they draw about the same size crowds already and both their single and LP zoomed up the best-selling charts.

In an interview, Gates speaks with good-humored deliberation and patience. The other lead singer, James Griffin, is more restless. After the interview, which has followed a Bread concert in New York' Avery Fischer Hall, the girl fans waiting outside the stage door aim their cameras and their squeals at Griffin.

One interesting fact about Bread cited by Gates is that none of its members was ever seriously part of any other group before Bread's formation or during the time of its breakup.

After Bread crumbled, both Gates and Griffin performed as solo artist, Gates making two solo albums for Elektra and Griffin making two for Polydor. They aren't going to pursue solo careers on the side, now, they say. If you do it right, membership in a group is a full-time occupation.

Keyboard player Larry Knechtel and drummer Mike Botts spent most of the time from 1973 to '76 as studio musicians, with Botts also playing in Linda Ronstad's backup band.

They're not back in Bread, both Gates and Griffin say, because they weren't setting the world on fire as solo artists or because they can make more money in the group.

Both say they're happy that Bread is back together and they stress that Bread's first emphasis is providing a good show for the audience. The first words Gates say after the concert are, "I don't like to tune on stage. But either you do that or you play out of tune."

For the 18 dates Bread played in March, guitarist Dean Parks was with them on stage. When Griffin sings, part of the time he doesn't play his guitar. He says when he concentrates on singing, he sings better. Also, since Bread overdubs itself on records, a fifth person playing on stage gives a sound more like the records.

Bread will do a little recording in April, play 10 dates in May, write and take vacations in the summer and in September "really get cracking on a new album," Gates says.

Griffin says, "We never let ourselves work too long at a time. In 1969 we did one tour of three weeks." Gates adds, "Physically you get tired and it shows in your playing. People get cheated."

Griffin goes on, "The money is really on the road. Playing like some groups that tour just about all the time, you can make a lot of money, but it really takes it out of your head. No wonder some musicians are shooting up." Gates says that since a ticket to one of their concerts costs more than a Bread album or a movie, they're conscious at all times of giving the audience its money's worth.

He says, "Bread is more relaxed, more comfortable now. Dean is helpful because he makes our job easier on stage."

By leading title insurer

'Vibrant' home market predicted

Both supply and demand for single-family housing will remain relatively "strong and vibrant" over the long term, contrary to many "criers of doom," Philip B. Branson, senior vice president of Ticor Title Insurers told the Long Beach, California Board of Realtors recently.

In a speech entitled "Will the Single-Family Home Survive," Branson said the current frenzy of escalated demand in prices can be expected to moderate and again equal the normal rate of inflation, but long term demand will not diminish rapidly.

The American dream of owning a single-family home has not changed, he said, except that the home owner may have to adjust his expectations, and those in the real estate business will have to become far more adaptable.

"A basic factor in our analysis for the demand for the single-family home is one that we can't measure — desire. No matter what the government planners tell us we should want, it is my firm belief that the average American of this generation wants and will make sacrifices for a single-family home," Branson stated.

"When home buyers can't stretch their incomes any further, when they can't devote a higher percentage of their income to shelter, we're going to see a limitation of the overall price increases of residential resale. Eventually there will be a limit to the amount of income that can be devoted to ownership . . . and we will see the cessation of the rapidly escalating prices of housing but not an end to the demand," he stated.

"The home owner knows that investment in real property is his best hedge against inflation, now and in the future," Branson opined.

He cited the explosion in the singles market as an example. "People in the home buying market are getting married later . . . and divorced earlier. They are not satisfied with apartment living and our tax structure makes it imperative for them to get into a home ownership position."

Another factor which he said has to be watched is the tremendous expansion in dollars being spent for additions and alterations to existing homes. "This is definitely going to impact the velocity of residential resale turnover once we get past the current frenzy," he said.

"Over the long term, however, we have a relatively steady supply of resale homes available for sale. There are short term functions at play here . . . but generally speaking I think we can consider the supply of homes up for resale constant," he added.

Addressing the issue of providing affordable housing for low income families now virtually excluded from the housing market, Branson said, "The American public at all income levels wants to own single-family housing and I believe the government will be forced to assist lower income families in some form. "One of the key elements in the future of the single-family home is the fact that right now, today, government agencies and financial institutions have on the drawing boards a multitude of new methods of financing so that tomorrow's home owner can afford the monthly cost of shelter. The graduated payment in variable rate mortgage, the reverse annuity and deferred interest are some examples. What is important is we will be seeing new and different types of financing."

THE HIGHLANDS — ETIWANDA

By Lewis Homes

Grand opening celebrated

Lewis Homes celebrates the grand opening of Phase II of its Highlands development in Etiwanda today with the showing of five furnished display models.

Scenically located at Rochester Avenue and Church St., the community of single-family homes is expected to draw large numbers of opening day visitors, it was predicted by Roger G. Lewis, vice-president of the building company.

He bases his prediction on the fast rate of sales recorded in the Highlands' initial unit. He noted that 35 of Phase II's 127 homes have already been spoken for by buyers visiting the site during the construction program.

Purchase price is scaled from $41,800 to $46,700, with financing offered on VA, FHA FHA, Cal-Vet and conventional terms.

The furnished models on display are representative of the various floor plan from which buyers may choose, each plan designed in a variety of exterior motifs.

The Highlands displays two, three and four-bedroom floor plans, all but one model having two bathrooms, featuring a stall shower in one and a tub bath in the other. All plans have two, three and four-bedroom floor plans, all but one model having two bathrooms, featuring a stall shower in one and a tub bath in the other. All plans have two-car garages.

Living rooms, dining room areas, hallways and master bedrooms are carpeted from wall to wall. Kitchens come equipped with dishwasher, continuous cleaning oven, range and waste disposal units. Window drapes are also supplied by the builder.

The Highlands' location commands closeup views of the San Gabriel Mountains. The surrounding Etiwanda area is known for its vineyards.

The development is reached from the San Bernardino Freeway by exiting at Haven Ave. at the Ontario Motor Speedway. From there, the route is north on Haven to Foothill Boulevard, east (right) 1¾ miles to Rochester Ave., then north (left) to Church St.

Models are open from 10 a.m. to dusk daily.

Palmview Village to offer VA financing

Palmview Village, a new community of single family homes now selling in the Rialto area, is offering no down 8 per cent VA financing and moderate sales prices as low as $37,950, according to Emery Nadasdy, of E.R.N. & Associates, the developer.

"We're finding that buyers, particularly young couples and families, are coming out of the San Gabriel Valley and Orange County, to buy at Palmview Village because of the affordable sales prices and the outstanding financing," Nadasdy reported.

Nadasdy noted that in addition to the VA financing program available to qualified buyers, excellent FHA and conventional financing are also offered.

Quality features include a fireplace with gas loglighter (some plans), vaulted ceiling in the living room and family room (some plans), large wardrobes and an abundance of storage, built-in bookshelves (one plan), two-car garage and concrete dirveways and walks. Rear yard fencing and front yard landscaping is also included in the price.

Palmview Village is conveniently located near schools at all grade levels, shopping and recreation facilities including Frisbie Park and the El Rancho Verde Country Club.

The new residential community can be reached by taking San Bernardino Freeway (I-10) east to the Pepper Avenue exit. Drive north on Pepper approximately three miles to Foothill Boulevard, turn left on Eucalyptus one block then right to the Palmview Village sales office. For additional sales information call (714) 874-1700.

Anti-discrimination

Far-reaching rules adopted

Business and Transportation Secretary Alan Rothenberg and Real Estate Commissioner David H. Fox jointly announced recently (April 6) adoption of "far-reaching anti-discrimination regulations aimed at complementing current Administration efforts to curb redlining practices."

The regulations, authored by the State Department of Real Estate, will curtail certain trade practices which limit the choice of properties shown to various types of housing consumers, and represents another in a series of anti-redlining actions designed to curtail discrimination in housing based on race, sex, age or the geographical location of the property to be purchased.

"This new regulatory approach — combined with other administrative actions to eliminate redlining among mortgage lenders — will broaden housing choices available to Californians regardless of their race, sex, age or the geographical housing preference," Rothenberg explained in a statement released in Sacramento.

Commissioner Fox outlined the major points of the newly adopted regulations which will affect over 260,000 real estate licensees statewide. The regulations provide the basis for revoking or suspending the license of any real estate licensee who engaged in any of the following acts or omissions:

—Refused to render real estate services or rendered substandard services to a person because of that person's race, color, sex, religion, ancestry, or national origin.

—Engaged in steering a customer to or away from properties within particular neighborhoods or areas on the basis of the race, color, sex, etc., of the customer in relation to the racial, ethnic or religious makeup of the neighborhood or area.

—Used advertising materials and practices which were designed to create or perpetuate discrimination on the basis of race, color, sex, etc.

—Refusal to cooperate with another real estate licensee on account of the race, color, sex, etc., of the client of the other licensee.

—Attempted to intimidate a person or to otherwise interfere with the person's exercise of rights granted or protected by fair housing laws.

—Attempted to discourage a customer from purchasing or renting a property or from obtaining a loan secured by real property by quoting costs which are different from costs quoted to persons of a different race, color, sex, etc.

—Aiding or encouraging other real estate licensees or other persons to discriminate in real property transactions because of the race, color, sex, etc., of the person seeking services.

—Engaged in conduct designed to induce panic selling on the part of residents of a neighborhood by creating fear or apprehension concerning the entry into the neighborhood of persons of another race, color, sex, religion, ancestry, or national origin.

Tahoe seminar speakers set

Realtors, attorneys and a former Real Estate Commissioner will be among the featured speakers at a seminar entitled, "A Case Study: Apartment Syndication," held at South Lake Tahoe, Nevada.

The two-day seminar will examine the legal, financial and management aspects of apartment syndication. It is being sponsored by the 100,000-member California Association of Realtors, and will be held May 9-10, at the Hyatt Lake Tahor. The hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and the registration fee of $75 for non-members, and $65 for members covers the seminar, lunches and coffee.

Speakers and topics will include Ron Fenolio, San Francisco attorney, speaking on "Legal Implications;" Gary Aminoff, Certified Public Accountant and Realtor, on "Acquisition;" Edward F. Paul, CAR Real Estate Syndication Chairman, on "Compensation;" Willima Schoeffler, Certified Public Accountant and Realtor, on "Property and Partnership Management;" Burton Smith, past CAR president and former Real Estate Commissioner, on "The Commissioner's Role;" and again, Gary Aminoff, who will close the seminar with "Winding Up The Partnership."

Applications for reservations must be submitted by April 25. Interested persons should send checks to Syndication Division, California Association of Relators, 505 Shatto Place, Los Angeles, California 90020.

JOHN A.
STANLEY for Council

Is it worthwhile?

What does it really mean to 'refinance?'

What does it really mean to refinance your home — and is it worthwhile?

These are questions a prospective homebuyer often raises during times when interest rates rise (and many banks have just increased their prime rate one-quarter per cent to 9¼ per cent).

The president of the 4,000-member Los Angeles Board of Realtors (LABR), however, believes that in considering the purchase of a home, a person should look beyond high interest rates to a time when he or she could obtain a lower mortgage rate by refinancing a home.

"In other words," Norman Jacobson, LABR president, said, "obtaining a new loan which pays off the balance of the old loan.

"First of all," he said, "is it worthwhile?

"That largely depends on the particular situation, but there are some rules of thumb for prospective homebuyers — and present homeowners — to consider," he added.

The mortgagor, or homeowner, must plan to stay in the house for a "reasonable" length of time if refinancing is to be advantageous, Jacobson said. "Reasonable" means three to four years to some people, longer to others.

The mortgagor has the option to go to either the old lender or a new one to obtain a new loan. Most authorities believe a person should try the original lender first.

"Some lenders are usually willing — though perhaps reluctant — to renegotiate a home loan," Jacobson said, "and, further may want a variable rate, so that if market levels climb again, they'll be protected. There are certain benefits to having a variable interest rate loan, and consultation with the lender will clarify these benefits.

"It is incumbent upon the borrower to become familiar with his lenders' policies by determining these policies before making a decision."

Refinancing either through your present lender or a new lender requires the borrower to incur certain costs, such as a new title policy loan, escrow fees and other miscellaneous costs, such as a new title policy loan, escrow fees and other miscellaneous costs which would include a loan fee if the financing is done through a different lender, Jacobson said.

"Refinancing may not be necessarily advantageous to all people," the LABR president said. "Not everyone has the necessary cash today — settlement costs and money to reduce the mortgage balance — to obtain a lower interest. Even if cash is available, it may be put to better use in an investment that could be earning interest. Is the approximate value of the refinancing proceeds greater than the total costs of such refinancing?"

Jacobson concluded that there are many factors to consider before deciding to refinance.

"It is best not to make a decision on your own," he suggested. "Instead, individuals desiring to refinance their home should consult a Realtor and with Private Property Week approaching (April 17-23), there's no better time to meet that Realtor than now."

Record first quarter

Net income for the first quarter increased 90 per cent to $9,461,000 as compared to last year's $4,992,000. Net income per share increased 83 per cent to 66 cents a share from last year's 33 cents.

Revenues in the first quarter increased 16 per cent to $89,888,000 as compared with last year's $77,391,000.

In the first quarter of last year's operations, the company's two hotels in Las Vegas were adversely affected by a 17-day strike in March which closed most of the city's large hotels.

In the first quarter Hilton's occupancy rate was 66 per cent compared with 60 per cent in the first quarter of last year. The occupancy rate for the month of March was 72 per cent as against 63 per cent for the same month last year.

The foregoing occupancy figures include hotels in which Hilton has an interest of 50 per cent or more, excluding the company's Las Vegas hotel/casinos.

Occupancy for Hilton's Las Vegas hotel/casinos was 85 per cent in the first quarter compared with last year's 75 per cent (excluding the 17-day strike period). The occupancy rate in March was 90 per cent compared to 78 per cent for March 1976 (excluding the 17-day strike period).

The year has started out on a very positive note and we are especially pleased with the substantial improvement in occupancy rates both in our hotel system and out Las Vegas hotel/casinos, Hilton said.

As a result of these occupancy increases, earnings in our hotel division increased 48 per cent in the quarter. Our Las Vegas hotel/casinos' earnings increased 158 per cent over last year as a result of both occupancy increases and the adverse effect on 1976 earnings of the 17-day strike which closed our two properties in Las Vegas.

Our Las Vegas operations contributed 41 per cent of Hilton's earnings before interest and dividend income, interest expense, and income taxes this year vs. 28 per cent last year.

We are encouraged by the outstanding results of the first quarter and expect another year of record earnings in 1977 although we cannot anticipate continuing the rate of growth experienced in the first quarter, he said.

Dutch flood control planned

By STEVE COFFEY

AMSTERDAM (AP) — The Dutch are busy filling the last gaps in their dikes and predict that within ten years they will finally have won their centuries-old battle with the sea.

They are in the final phase of a 30-year plan aimed at freeing the Netherlands from the threat of grave flooding. In the past 20 years, over half the 1,000 miles of dikes around the coastline have been reinforced, rebuilt or extended. The program has cost $3 billion.

The impressive Dutch effort dates back to the night of Feb. 1, 1953, when a violent North Sea storm crashed over the low dikes around the islands in the southwest of the country. The storm precipitated the worst flooding in Dutch history, leaving 1,800 dead, 70,000 homeless and a billion dollars in damage.

The main disaster area is now protected by an elaborate system of sea defenses thrown across the Rhine delta. Here giant dams have sealed off large areas of the southwest from the strong tidal currents of the North Sea.

On a number of occasions in recent years when the water level gushed higher than in 1953, nobody needed to raise the alarm and the islanders remainded safe behind the delta walls.

"We would have had more disasters had we not started work promptly on rebuilding the dikes," asserted an official at the Transport and Waterways Ministry.

The memory of the 1953 flooding still lingers in the Netherlands, where over half the 13.7 million inhabitants live on land below sea level.

In areas where the dikes are yet to be raised people frequently demand that the authorities speed up construction programs. But officials claim these areas are the least vulnerable along the coastline and danger is minimal.

In the southwest of the country, a flow-through dike with giant doors that can be opened or closed is to be thrown across the Eastern Scheldt, the last open estuary of the Rhine River complex.

Kavasch wins Realtor award

According to the board, there are more than 325 active realtors in the Pomona Valley area.

Realtors set sales award

Eleanor Goritz associated with Schwartz Realty, Gallery of Homes, Claremont has been presented the sales award for the month of February by the Pomona Valley Board of Realtors, for having had the Largest Single Listing Sold.

Eleanor has been in the Real Estate profession for (3) three years.

Blue collar needs touted by builders

While generally endorsing the Administration's housing strategy for low income families, the National Association of Home Builders (NAHB) says equal attention must be given to the housing needs of blue collar workers and other average income families who have been priced out of the market in recent years.

Vondal Gravlee, a home builder from Birmingham, Alabama, and vice president-treasurer of the NAHB, testified today before House hearings on HUD's budget request for fiscal 1978, which begins Oct. 1.

"The housing situation has become complicated in recent years by inflation pushing up mortgage interest rates and construction costs, along with real estate and other taxes and utility costs, beyond a corresponding increase in family income," Gravlee said. "Thus, the problem of providing housing affordable to millions of low and moderate income families, has escalated into a complex question of providing housing to a whole range of middle-income families."

Gravlee expressed disappointment that HUD was not seeking release of $5 billion under the Brooke-Cranston mortgage purchase mprogram, which provides 7½ per cent interest rates for middle income buyers. This money would help prevent another collapse in housing production in the event of a mortgage money squeeze or sudden rise in interest rates which "may well occur in 1978," he said.

Gravlee cited the Section 235 home ownership program as one of the best laws on the books to cope with this affordability crises of moderate and low income families. Under this program, the government subsidizes interest rates as low as 5 per cent.

But Gravlee noted that only a handful of Section 235 units have been started since the program was reactivated in October, 1975. Production could be stimulated under this program, he said.

Save 10% on Allstate insurance for your new home.

If your house is 5 years old or less, you may qualify for Allstate's "New House 10% Discount."

We've found it costs less to insure newer homes, and we're passing this savings on to you. If your house qualifies, we'll keep deducting 10% from your basic homeowners premium, until your house becomes 5 years old.

If you already have an Allstate Homeowners policy, you'll see the savings reflected with your next renewal—automatically.

If you live in a new house, but don't have an Allstate Homeowners policy, better give us a call. Might as well get in on the savings!

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — For recipes cut out of the newspaper I use the white cardboard inserts from panty hose packages. They are cut (about three from one) out to be the size of index cards and then the recipes are glued on. — KAREN.

© 1977 by NEA, Inc.

DEAR POLLY — I find it important to keep all the booklets that come with any appliances I buy. They certainly come in handy when things break and need repair. On each, I record information to make it easier to check as to whether the warranty is still good at the time repair is needed. — MRS. A.E.N.

Send your helpful hints to Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — Remove the ball from a deodorant bottle you want to use for something else by prying up the plastic lid that holds the ball with a kitchen knife. Watch those fingers! — RENEE.

DEAR POLLY — Cutting up fruit for fruit cakes always seemed such a chore until I started doing this with the scissors rather than a knife. I no longer mind using dried fruits in a recipe. — ELENORA.

DEAR POLLY — The framework to my clothespin bag was still good so I recovered it with pieces of calico left from some cushions I had made, and it is good as new. — CATHERINE.

DEAR POLLY — When giving a gift to someone who sews, use a scrap of pretty material as the wrapping — and even trim can be used to tie the package. This is almost like two gifts for one as it is always a thrill to a seamstress to have extra material to use in creating aprons, pot holders and so on. — BETTY.

DEAR POLLY — Ordinary iodine is great for touching up scratches on dark wood furniture. Apply with a toothpick or tiny pointed brush, let dry and wipe with furniture polish. If the iodine looks a bit darker than the furniture, dilute it with alcohol. — DONNA.

DEAR POLLY — If you find mold or moisture in your terrarium it is too wet, so roll a piece of paper towel tightly around a pencil, push the pencil into the earth in the terrarium, remove when the paper is damp and then repeat if necessary. — EMILY.

DEAR POLLY — I use commercial diaper liners for baby and rinse, soak and launder them with the regular diapers. They are left to dry flat and then I sew a pack of 4-to-6 liners together to make a thicker liner or pad for baby. I get several months use out of these. Sewing them together keeps them from tearing apart in the washing machine. — SUE.

Lou Rawls' first network television special, "The Lou Rawls Show," airs on ABC, Thursday at 11:30PM, with special guests Lola Falana, comedian Kip Addotta, singer Crystal Gayle and The Emotions. The program's executive producer is Dick Clark. And thereby hangs a tale: As a youngster, Rawls sang in a gospel choir with the late Sam Cooke. When Cooke made the transition from gospel to pop music in the 50s, Rawls decided to also to make the break.

Then, as luck would have it, Rawls was in Los Angeles one day when Clark was looking for a singer to replace one who had cancelled from a Hollywood Bowl concert Clark was producing that night. Clark tracked down Rawls, and on short notice, Rawls went onstage that night for Clark. He scored with such impact that a ten-year recording contract materialized within one week.

Segue to 1977 and the Dick Clark-produced "American Music Awards" where Rawls was one of the show's hosts. Among the viewers were ABC top executives who—before the night was over—had come to a quick decision: Lou Rawls should star in his own special...and the program's producer should be Dick Clark.

It takes the multiple talents of a sculptor, an artist and an actor to arrive at the consummate makeup expert. Emmy Award-winner Stan Winston has all three qualities. A former artist and actor, Winston devised the makeup for the 90-minute special "Pinocchio," repeating Monday from 8:30 to 10PM on CBS. Danny Kaye stars as Gepetto, the wood-carver, in this musical adaptation of Carlo Collodi's classic fable, and Sandy Duncan plays the title role of the boy-like puppet.

It took Winston six weeks to prepare the facial molds for "Pinocchio," and it took about two and a half hours to get Wilson, Ms. Torres and Ms. Duncan ready for the camera. Winston also had to prepare extra facial features—noses in particular—in case problems arose during filming. But, according to Winston, the experience was a satisfying one. The show involved "a lot of preparation, a lot of work and a lot of fun."

CLOSE-UP

THE PHILOSOPHICAL FRANCISCUS

At this stage of his life, actor James Franciscus seems easy-going and self-assured. He has experienced successes and disappointments in a career that goes back more than two decades, and he has learned to accept both the good and the bad philosophically.

"I'm a survivor," he says with a grin. "I don't waste my time worrying because I've discovered over the years that, come what may, I'll emerge in good shape in the end if I just hang in there and wait it out."

But Franciscus remembers what he was like in other times. When he was a youngster studying drama at Yale, for instance.

The open-faced blond actor's latest venture is Hunter, the hour-long espionage series on CBS, Fridays at 10PM. Franciscus stars in it as James Hunter, an elite U.S. secret agent engaged in perilous counter-espionage and anti-terrorist operations. Even as does Hunter, the early-day Franciscus frequently knew inner torment.

"When I was at Yale, I had a lot of demons inside me—creative demons," Franciscus recalls. "While I was studying all phases of the theatre, I was drawn powerfully to writing, and I was possessed by the tragic sense of life as described by Shakespeare and Arthur Miller. I was consumed by the 'whys' and 'wherefores' of life. To this day I haven't found answers to the questions, but by questioning I've gotten a lot closer to what life is all about."

Franciscus wrote plays at Yale and was told he had a promising future as a writer. Today he writes not at all.

"Writing would have been creatively satisfyiing for me," he says, "but it's a lonely existence. Writing is a jealous mistress. All your time must go to it. It nags at you even when you're out for an evening. When you do it it's the hardest work in the world.

"And when you don't do it, do you feel relief?

"No. You feel guilt.

"Today, I'm not sorry that I chose to concentrate on acting rather than writing. Acting has been good to me, and I feel that as an actor I have scored concrete accomplishments. I've been happy as an actor. I'm not sure I would have been a happy writer—even a happy successful writer. And yet, even after all these years, I have to admit that I still wonder at times what might have happened if...

"Maybe it's that guilt I mentioned."

Although he has put writing aside, Franciscus has also tried his hand at television producing, forming Omnibus Productions with Fred Brogger. They produced the film specials "Heidi," with Maximillian Schell and Jean Simmons, "David Copperfield," with Sir Laurence Olivier and Sir Ralph Richardson, "Jane Eyre," with George C. Scott and Susannah York, "Kidnapped," with Michael Caine, and "The Red Pony."

James Franciscus and Linda Evans co-star as secret agents in Hunter.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR JACLYN SMITH, star of ABC-TV's Charlie's Angels

What do you love doing most of all? — Tom Dunker, Madison, Wis.

● Working with children. When I get a bit more spare time, I plan to get involved with a project involving young kids — and animals. (By the way, the French poodle in my show is Albert. He's all mine.) Outdoors, I enjoy water-skiing, swimming, horseback-riding and tennis. Indoors, it's reading and classical music. I also keep up with what's new in home-decorating; I did my Beverly Hills house all by myself, in Southern antique style.

FOR PRESIDENT JIMMY CARTER

What changes have you made in the Oval Office? — N.S., Albany, N.Y.

● The biggest change was to bring back the desk used by President Kennedy and many other Presidents before him. (It's made from the timbers of Her Majesty's Ship Resolute. Queen Victoria sent the desk to President Rutherford B. Hayes.) A smaller change reflects my background as a graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy: The U.S. Naval History Museum loaned me a model of a Revolutionary War privateer that sits on a table behind my desk.

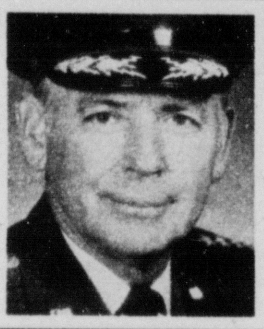
Is Russia really ahead of us in strategic weapons? — A. K., Brooklyn, N.Y.

● My answer is no, but the trend is against us unless either or both of two things happen: First, the Soviets agree to stop the current thrust of their major strategic weapons systems and make verifiable reductions in their expanding operational deployment. And second, that we pursue vigorously the major strategic weapons improvements and modification programs recommended to Congress.



FOR DINAH SHORE

Why do you never mention your children or grandchildren? — Mrs. L. H. Watson, Danville, Ill.

● Never is the wrong word. I do talk about them, but only when the occasion arises. Although I'm in the public eye a great deal, I'm actually a very private person. As well as trying to keep my own life to myself when I'm not working, I do the same for my family — which is the way they want it.

FOR DIANE VON FURSTENBERG, author of Diane Von Furstenberg's Book of Beauty

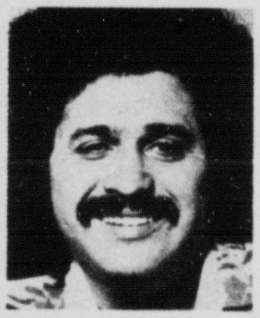
How did you get started in the dress-designing business — D.G., Lima, Ohio

● In 1969 my husband (Prince Egon Von Furstenberg) suggested I get a job. I looked around me and decided there were no simple, feminine dresses. So in 1970, with $20,000 borrowed (very nervously!) from my father, I started experimenting with clothes — cut them out on our dining-room table and sent them to a friend in Italy to be manufactured. I showed the finished dresses to a few department stores, and that was it.



FOR FREDDIE FENDER, country singer

Is it true you once worked as a migrant worker on farms? — D. D., Kingsport, Tenn.

● Yes. What I remember most about earning my living that way was the illegal immigrants I worked with. I'll never forget the time I was in the field, picking cotton, when they came running towards me. I thought they were after me, until I realized they were being chased by Immigration authorities in a helicopter. I got so confused and nervous, that I ran with them, until my brother grabbed me and yelled, "Hey, idiot. You're not supposed to be runnin'. You were born here."

FOR OLIVER REED, star of Assault on Paradise

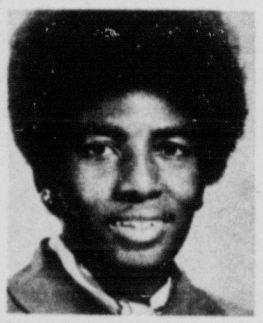
Since you're not one of the handsomest or sexiest actors around, can you explain your popularity? — J. R., San Rafael, Calif.

● Wish I could. It's as puzzling to me as it is to you. All I can think of is that villainy is fashionable these days. The young, toothpaste-smile stars of the '50's are old hat. The public is fed up with the mumbling kitchen-sink actors of the '60's. Now it's the turn of nasty-looking creeps like me.



FOR DR. GLORIA D. SCOTT, President, Girl Scouts of the U.S.A.

What are the Girl Scouts doing to combat the use of drugs by young people? — M. I., Tupelo, Miss.

● Our role is one of prevention and education. We try to provide girls with the kinds of activities that hold more excitement, appeal and challenge than drug-taking. Learning decision-making is an integral part of Girl Scouting. Adult leaders are in a good position to help girls examine accurate information about the effects of drugs and to make intelligent decisions about alternatives.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

Did Carol Burnett's parents die of alcoholism? — M. T., Asbury Park, N.J.

● Yes. When Carol was eight, her mother and father separated and went to California. Carol remained in Texas with her grandmother. She and Carol moved to Los Angeles, too, to the same house where Carol's mother lived (her father was in Santa Monica). Raised by her grandmother, Carol was very close to her parents. ("Mom was pretty and smart and always made me laugh. I visited Dad on weekends; he was sentimental, sensitive, and I adored him.") But alcoholism killed both of them.

FOR RICHARD "Digger" PHELPS, head basketball coach, Notre Dame

What rule changes would you like to see adopted to make basketball more exciting for fans and viewers? — S.S., Manchester, N.H.

● I think the game of college basketball has had enough changes in the past few years. With the "dunk" finally put back into the game, it's time to leave the rules alone and let the fans enjoy the game.

PRO AND CON

Should The Armed Forces Be Unionized?

PRO Dr. Ezra Krendel, professor of operations research, The Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania

Yes. National values have established a climate in which collective-bargaining rights enjoyed by workers could be extended to the Armed Forces. I do not, in the immediate future, expect to see labor unions recognized within the U.S. Military. I do anticipate changes in grievance procedures and working conditions similar to those which civilian labor unions have been pushing. Our National Guard [for instance] is made up of units in which 72 percent of the technicians belong to unions. The management of the Armed Forces should see collective bargaining as a positive evolutionary process.

CON William J. Rogers, Commander, The American Legion

No. Unionism would threaten the military chain of command. The American Legion is flatly, unalterably, vehemently opposed. The Supreme Court ruled more than 20 years ago that military law "is that of obedience. No question can be left open as to the right of command in the officer or the duty of obedience in the soldier." Last year, the Court held that "a military organization is not constructed along democratic lines, and military activities cannot be governed by democratic procedures." The American Legion is not anti-union. The American Legion is pro-American.

MOVING TO A NEW HOME: A BITTERSWEET OCCASION

This is the story of all that's involved when a family pulls up its roots for a new beginning 700 miles away.

By Monica Surfaro

Each year, literally tens of millions of people move throughout the U.S. Many move for business reasons, like the Kempfs, the subjects of the story below. Jim Kempf's work required a move from Michigan to the East. Here is their story.

The Kempfs are a handsome, vibrant family of four. Because their roots are deep in Michigan, their decision to move East was an intense emotional experience.

Jim, an ambitious 35-year-old sales executive, was born and raised in the small town of Attica. Sharon, 33, came from Highland Park's close-knit Polish community and fondly recalls Christmas holidays when her aunts and two sisters would join them for a traditional Polish dinner, complete with hay and pennies scattered about the floor.

Jim and Sharon met on a blind date in Pontiac and married early in 1962, soon after Jim returned from the service. Content with their way of life and their large and happy social circle, the Kempfs spent the next decade in communities adjacent to family and friends.

In 1976, after five years in a large colonial home in the lake-region city of West Bloomfield, they were comfortably settled in their neighborhood. In addition to Jamie, 11, and Nicole, six, Sharon's mother, Lillian, lived with the family in a small apartment attached to the main house. The family was happy and close.

In early 1976, however, Jim was spending a good deal of time out of town. "The family needed to be together more, and a move farther East would just be easier on all of us," said Sharon, recalling the decision. "Jim and I took Mother and the girls out to dinner and broke the news."

Although the children prodded their parents with questions about school and friends, they seemed most interested in Grandma Lillian moving, too. "With all her family still in Michigan, the decision was really difficult for Mother," said Sharon. "She thought about it overnight, and when she told us she would like to come with us, the children were overjoyed. It made the future easier to face knowing that we would still be together."

The initial months after the decision were a mix of excitement and almost artificial normalcy. Sharon spent morning coffee breaks with her close friends, Betty and Jane, preparing a checklist of priorities the new home would have to match: Nicole had started first grade and would need the benefits of a good school system, Jamie loved ice-skating and would want good recreational facilities, Lillian is a glass collector and was interested in a sound antique center, Sharon participated in a weekly Bible-study class and looked forward to continuing with a new group, Jim was a volunteer policeman and wanted to maintain his firearms hobby. "It would have to be a community which would suit each of us in our own special way," said Sharon.

So the family began an intensive search and finally zeroed in on Ridgefield, Conn., a family-minded community with a wide main street dotted with historic mansions and picturesque storefronts. "The area was countrylike, the people were friendly and everything, in terms of schools and activities, checked out," said Sharon. "It's hard to explain, but there was a certain feeling about the place that was right for us."

Then the Kempfs began their search for a new house, one with adjoining, yet separate, quarters for Lillian. "I underestimated how difficult this would be," said Sharon.

After some frustrating search sessions, they realized that building was the best solution. By June they had selected a house plan and a two-acre site just a few miles from the center of town. "We okayed this decision over a meal, too," recalled Sharon. "Everyone was starting to get excited about the move."

But excitement often tends to obscure one aspect of a family move — the expenses, which include house-hunting trips and phone calls. The Kempfs, however, were fortunate; Jim's firm had agreed to reimburse the family for all moving expenses. Nevertheless, they were responsible for many extras which mounted up: paying the broker's fee and selling their old residence, for instance. And then there were hidden aspects that one might ignore until they are compiled on paper. "We had to sell our gas stoves in order to adapt to the electric hookups available in Ridgefield," said Sharon, who also noted the personal sacrifices that became necessary before the trip. "Mother had a lot of glass that couldn't possibly be transported. Some things just had to be left behind or given away."

With the move scheduled for February 15, the arrival of 1977 added new impetus to family-planning. Sharon began a countdown on the family calendar to help involve the girls in the move, and she began to organize the packing process. "I allowed the movers to pack because they used women packers, and I felt they would be careful with my things," explained Sharon.

Tuesday was moving day. "It's amazing how what you keep putting off suddenly sneaks up and confronts you," explained Sharon. "I guess I didn't want to understand that I was leaving my home and my friends. The morning of the move I made some good-bye calls to friends and took Mother and the children to breakfast; Jim stayed to wait for the movers. When I came back from eating, the boxes were on the van, and the house was empty and cold. There was nothing to do but go on our way."

Elizabeth Gee

When the Kempfs finally arrived at their new house, what did they see but a scene of scattered building equipment, an unfinished basement and unpainted walls. The house was not ready. "We were frantic," recalled Sharon. "We had been expecting to store the furniture in the basement, but there wasn't a basement to speak of."

Aghast, Jim called his office, hoping to divert the van with their belongings. He soon learned, however, that the van had broken down and that their belongings were still in Michigan. "I guess Fate was looking after us that day," said Sharon. "If the van hadn't broken, we would have had to make hasty arrangements to store our things. As it was, we were able to keep them in Michigan in storage."

With Jim and Sharon emotionally on edge and the children cranky, the Kempfs drove to a motel to await completion of their house. "We just had to make do," said Sharon, recalling her family's two-week sojourn in a nice but crowded motel room. "I'm sure many families will empathize when I say it was an experience I won't forget."

The Kempf's gypsy existence came to an end when the builder assured them of a March 7 move-in date — 19 days extended from the original deadline. Sharon didn't build her hopes; disappointment had become too familiar. When the movers called that morning to inform the Kempfs of their expected arrival hour, Sharon was jubilant. "It's a bright and beautiful day, and at last it's going to happen!" she exclaimed happily.

By 11:00 A.M. the van was in the Kempf's driveway, and the parade of boxes had begun. Fortunately, no calamities had occurred on the road, and nothing had been broken, save for an old music stand Sharon had found in an antique shop. In the midst of the moving, the school bus dropped the girls at the corner, and Sharon watched them through her front window as they ran home.

Finally, well into the evening, it was over. The family stood in awe of their new house. It was cluttered and somewhat strange. Jim opened a box that produced a familiar painting and some kitchen utensils that Sharon promptly set into the cupboards. It was home.

PHOENIX by PONTIAC

This is the first Pontiac Phoenix. It's our new six-passenger luxury compact. And it typifies the special way we feel about cars.

We think a car's styling should be clean. Strong. Arresting. Like our new Phoenix.

We think a car should be comfortable, but not overbearing. So we gave Phoenix full-width seats with a fold-down center armrest. Really nice fabrics. Cut-pile carpet. Padded door panels. A very functional instrument panel. Even a cushioned steering wheel. They give Phoenix a quiet kind of luxury we think you'll like.

We think a car should move down the road with authority. With its standard V-6 or available V-8, Phoenix does.

We think Phoenix is a pretty special compact. The kind you've been waiting to buy or lease. That's why it's arriving at your Pontiac dealer's now.

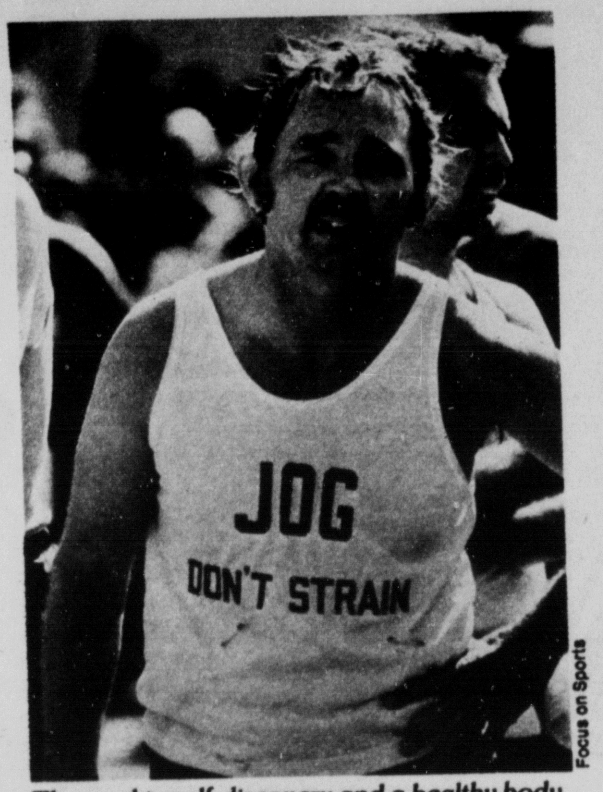
THE REWARDS OF RUNNING



Focus on Sports

The road to self-discovery and a healthy body.

According to our enthusiast, there is no loneliness in running. Indeed, it may be the most important part of his life.

By George Sheehan, M.D.

For 15 years I have been a distance runner, and I'm still trying to explain this self-renewing inner compulsion. But the more I run, the more I want to run. And the more I run, the more I live a life conditioned and influenced by my running.

In the beginning I never suspected this would happen. I began running for the usual reasons: to get into shape, to improve my appearance and to help prevent a heart attack and add some years to my life. I learned by rote the good things running could do for my cholesterol and my coronary arteries, how my blood pressure would go down and my energy increase.

So I began, as all of us should, with days of "scout pace" (50 paces jogging alternating with 50 paces walking) for only five minutes at first, and then each day a little more, all done at a speed that allowed me to talk to a companion. Then it was all running; I reached 30 minutes a day. Finally, I did an hour every other day. I had become a runner.

By now, all my original reasons for running had disappeared in my wake. I had no further use for them. Running, I now saw, was more than fitness and a trim body, more than weight loss and muscles revived. Running was a total experience. It had become part of my lifestyle.

If Francis Bacon had written on running, he would have put it this way: Running maketh the whole man. I see that whole person as being part animal, part child, part artist and part hero. Running makes me all of these.

I begin as animal. "Be first, a good animal," wrote Ralph Waldo Emerson. I am. I have that animal energy, that ease of movement, that good tight body, that sense of occupying just the right amount of space. I am pared down to bone and muscle. My skin is taut, my eyes clear. I have become my body. I occupy it with delight.

The tests prove what I feel. My biological age is that of a person 30 years younger. I have the oxygen capacity and physical work capacity of a 28-year-old instead of someone approaching 60. My pulse is slow. My blood pressure is normal. Yet I am no different from others my age who run with me. Running proves that man at any age is the greatest marvel in the world.

Next comes the child. The aim of life is to become an adult while remaining a child at heart, and running makes me a child — a child at play. While playing we do things because we want to, without thought of payment. For an hour a day I am a child finally doing what I want and enjoying it. And when I run, I realize that what happens to the body is simply a bonus.

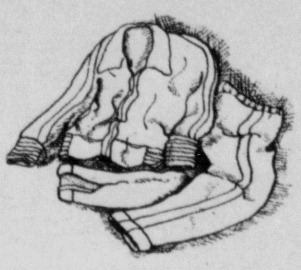
Thirdly, running has made me an artist. Being an artist is, after all, only seeing things as if for the first time. When we do, we see the real meaning of things, see the solutions to our problems. Running gives me that creativity. It provides a meditative setting and opens up unused areas in my mind.

Finally, running has given me the chance to be a hero. Like everyone, I want to be challenged. I want to discover whether I am a coward. I want to see how much effort I can exert and what I can endure. Running answers these questions. I can run the classic race, the mile, and know the terrible pain that accompanies that third quarter and the almost total oblivion of the final hundred yards of the last quarter. I also can compete with myself in the marathon, the race Roger Bannister, the first man to run a sub-four-minute mile, called the "acme of athletic heroism."

This Monday I will run my 14th Boston Marathon, the traditional Patriot's Day Race commemorating Paul Revere's ride. I will once more leave the Hopkinton Commons at noon and attempt to complete the 26 miles, 285 yards to the Prudential Center in downtown Boston. In those three hours or more I will first enjoy, then suffer and finally agonize in a supreme test of my ability as a runner. The Boston Marathon will become, as it does every year, the arena where I face my moment of truth, my chance to be a hero or a coward.



WHAT TO KNOW ABOUT RUNNING

Why Is Running The Best Exercise?

For several reasons. First, it is the easiest exercise to do and requires a minimum of equipment, no companions and no athletic ability. It can be done at almost any time and in any place. Second, it is a perfect exercise because it uses the large thigh and leg muscles in rhythmic fashion at a personally controlled rate. This is the requirement for safely developing maximum cardiopulmonary function. Lastly, it has predictably good results on the body and mind and has been proven to increase cardiopulmonary fitness, reduce weight, lower blood pressure, decrease the cholesterol and triglycerides associated with coronary disease and help psychological stability.

How Should I Start My Running Program?

Whether you are in your first day or 10th year, running should be done at a conversational pace, a speed at which you can talk to a companion. And the first 10 minutes should be even slower to allow you to reach your second wind. In the beginning, this may mean only a brisk walk or at best the old reliable scout pace. As time goes by, the effort will remain the same, but your minutes per mile will improve steadily.

Should I Regulate My Diet?

Don't eat solids for two to three hours before running. In very hot weather, 10 ounces of one of the "Ade" drinks should be taken within 10 minutes of the start and every 20 minutes thereafter. Fluids with high sugar concentration should be taken well diluted; otherwise they'll cause loss of fluid into the gut and bring on diarrhea.

What Clothes Should I Wear?

In spring and summer, cotton shirts should be worn and nylon avoided. Winter training, on the other hand, requires a base of long johns or thermal underwear. Over this, cotton turtleneck shirts are usually enough, although a light nylon rain jacket also may be needed. Avoid bulky garments. Use several light layers instead. A wool ski mask and thermal mittens or socks for the hands complete the outfit.

How Far Should I Run?

Lifetime runners should not be concerned with speed or distance. Runners deal in moderate effort over increasing periods of time. Start with five to 10 minutes every other day and work up to 30 minutes three or four times a week. This will achieve most of the results noted in question one.

What Injuries Can I Expect, And How Can I Prevent Them?

Ninety-five percent of runners' injuries (stress fracture, heel spur, runner's knee, etc.) are due to weak feet plus muscle imbalance. Running tends to shorten the calf, hamstring and low back muscles, and it also causes relative weakening of the abdominal muscles. Supports for the feet and daily exercises should give you permanent pain-free running.

"And we know our car insurance man is the best around," Bob says. "We feel fortunate to have him so close by."

Of course, whatever the Beals think about one agent, they're bound to think about the others.

Because all of them are State Farm agent, Steve Johnson. As a family insurance specialist, Steve can provide knowledgeable advice and person-to-person service on all the policies they're ever likely to need.

"If we have any question about our coverages, or a claim, we don't have to wonder who to call," says Jeanne. "We just call Steve. It's a real advantage having one agent nearby who can help us with everything."

WONDERFUL WAYS WITH COLOR— HOW TO MAKE IT WORK FOR YOU

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

Color has always been the essence of decorating. It can change the scale of a room, set a mood, reflect a personality. And there really isn't anything mysterious about selecting the right colors for your home. Inside this idea-packed section you'll learn how to apply simple color principles and what psychological effects the color of a child's room has on a child — you can even "shop" for the latest painted furniture pieces and get good tips on everything from painting walls to growing vegetables and flowering shrubs.

Dream Kitchen

A Painting Inspires

A Pattern Mix

How To Build A Color Scheme

Know yourself. Analyze which colors give you the biggest lift; if you stray too far from your personal taste, you won't feel at home. Let your wardrobe be a clue. Don't give a dominant decorating role to a color you usually wouldn't wear, though it can be enjoyed as an accent in a room.

Choose a color approach. To combine colors into a harmonious decorating scheme, it helps to refer to the traditional color wheel, which shows the primary colors — red, yellow and blue—from which all other colors come. (The secondary colors—orange, green and purple—are made from mixing equal portions of two primaries. Intermediate colors —such as red-orange or yellow-green—are made from mixing a primary with the closest secondary color.)

The three basic types of color schemes are Monochromatic (using variations of a single color, perhaps with selected small accents), Related (employing colors near each other, such as blue and green or yellow and green) and Complementary (pairing colors opposite to each other on the color wheel, like blue and orange, to create a bold effect).

A monochromatic color scheme, using subtle shades of beige or a pastel color, for example, is effective for "expanding" a small room. Because you "lose the boundaries" visually, the area seems larger. A variety of textures and a scattering of bright items will prevent monotony.

A narrow room seems to gain width by placing a horizontal line, such as a long sofa, on the shorter wall in a contrasting shade to the side walls, which usually are light-colored. To make a room "smaller," paint it a bright color that seems to jump out at you.

Within the room, you can minimize a bulky chair by having it blend with its background, or you can emphasize an object or area by using contrasting colors, such as white dishes in a white-faced cupboard lined in green.

There's a simple formula for getting the right mix in a related color scheme of three or more colors: 1) use the low-intensity color on walls and major furniture pieces; 2) employ color of medium intensity and lightness for woodwork, floor coverings, secondary seatings and trim and 3) use the most vivid shade as an accent — pillows, flowers and small occasional pieces.

If you've found an upholstery fabric in a multicolor pattern of soft green, a deeper blue and bright lemon yellow on white background, you coordinate like this: walls in green, wood trim in white, blues for the floor and other seating pieces and yellow accents in throw pillows and small accessories.

In an area such as a family room, you may want to start from the floor. A patterned vinyl floor in rich earth tones enables you to go to furniture fabrics with rough-and-ready textures in related solids of rust, orange and terra-cotta. Then walls can be pale, with match-stick blinds and natural woods. (Remember: wood tones represent colors, too.)

In heavy traffic areas, multicolored or intricately patterned carpeting or floor covering in a medium tone shows soil less quickly than a solid or very light or dark shade.

Consider colors in context. A room's location and function are major considerations in color planning. Is the room already light and airy, or will you need sunny colors to brighten it? Will it be a room of cool formality for entertaining or the hub of family activity? Blues and greens (good for rooms with southern exposure) have a cool effect, while yellows and oranges warm an interior.

Work with colors you've got. In almost any redecorating project you need to coordinate new purchases with existing pieces. This is often a special challenge in the kitchen, where you may inherit colored appliances. If you key everything to the appliance color, you could overwhelm the room. Instead, cope with avocado fixtures, for example, by choosing a vinyl floor pattern that has touches of avocado, along with russet and gold on a white background. Then the russet and gold can be played up in curtains, with walls a pale gold tint.

When working with existing elements in other rooms, use of tones traditionally associated with the period style to which you're committed is all-important.

With Early American furnishings, for example, you need strong, clear colors to stand up to the vigor of the light, gleaming woods. Conversely, French Provincial calls for delicate, dusty tones in textures or small patterns.

Remember that texture affects the color you see. A shiny, smooth surface reflects light, and the color appears clear and bright. Rough material absorbs some of the light, and the color may appear deeper and duller.

Know what's available. By the time you're ready to make an outlay, you should have a head full of preferences and impressions gained from idea-shopping in stores and publications as well as a loose-leaf notebook full of swatches, paint chips and clipped illustrations. It's a good idea to take the notebook with you, along with a tiny stapler, attaching samples as you get them. If a retailer can't supply samples, insist on seeing the material in incandescent light or daylight.

Don't make all decisions at once. It's best to have major acquisitions in place a short while, to see how they affect a room's total color scheme, before choosing accent pieces.

Do trust your instincts, and the colors you select will "wear well" in your home.

COLOR AND DECORATING TIPS FOR A CHILD'S ROOM

Children revel in rich, intense colors. In fact, among the first responses noted in infants is a reaction to bright colors, and studies show a definite link between vivid surroundings and quicker learning ability. It's no accident that many preschool centers color-key activity areas, with red or yellow (active) for the building blocks corner, green or blue (calm) for the reading area.

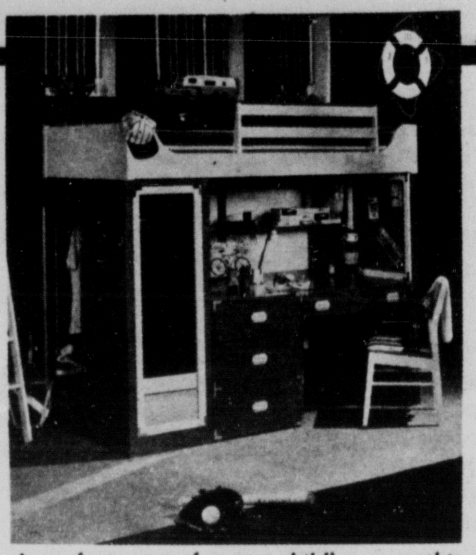
In the plan of a youngster's room, therefore, color can be the most important element. And unlike the trend in adult home furnishings toward neutral and earth tones, bright colors are best for children and can be used in several ways: whimsical wallcoverings, decorative flooring, sparkling window treatment, fun and fanciful furniture.

Color Planning

Before you plan a scheme, talk to your child about his preferences and analyze the child's personality. While it's a risk to generalize, active, outgoing children often prefer strong, contrasting colors. A reserved youngster might prefer a more neutralized color scheme. So use your own judgment. Habits also should be considered. If your child is a floor sprawler, you may want to invest in a large rug. On the other hand, if he is old enough to have a "messy" hobby—playing with a chemistry set, for instance—you may be better off with an easy-to-clean "chip-and-spatter" or confetti-patterned vinyl floor covering.

Sleeping Arrangements

Children's beds come in several configurations, from the two-tiered bunk-type to the trundle to the all-in-one bed, table and storage unit. And don't overlook those with built-in drawers or storage headboards. Since most children enjoy having a friend as an overnight guest, the versatile trundle bed is probably a better bet than a simple twin bed. If two children share a room, they can gain privacy with decorative screens, a storage divider or a do-it-yourself divider constructed of colorful and durable plexiglass.



A perfect setup for any child's room, this Uni-Bed from Schoolfield covers sleep, storage and study needs. In 52 colors.

Organizing Clutter

Young people especially enjoy rooms that have free floor space and places where treasured possessions can be displayed. They also need adequate space in which to store clothes and accessories. How do you meld these needs in the average small bedroom? Look for a storage solution that also adds to a room's décor.

Instead of the regular bulky bureau, shop the secondhand shops or flea markets for old trunks, which can be spray-painted any color and can double as tables or seats. If you find an old chest with legs, it can be cut down and refinished, adding interest to the room. Wall-hung baskets or painted wire milk cases (from your favorite dairyman) can hold dolls, stuffed toys or favorite mementos. Consider a simple store-bought rope ladder. Suspended by two hooks from the ceiling, it can hold scarves, hats, belts and even sunglasses in a picturesque array.

Extra Tips

If your goal is a "strict-budget-but-beautiful" approach, there are many ways to use color as an economical decorating tool in a child's room—particularly in the areas that usually require a major investment. Here are some idea joggers:

- Posters on the walls will cost less than wallpaper.
- Paint the floor instead of using carpeting.
- Bands of color painted around windows, along with inexpensive matching shades, eliminate the need for curtains.
- Spray-painted burlap or pressed board can make a colorful bulletin board.

PAINT YOUR WALLS LIKE A PROFESSIONAL

When the time comes to repaint the walls, first learn how the pros do the job. This will not only save you a good deal of trouble, but your paint job will also last a while longer.

Interior Preparation

Your painted wall will have a much longer life if it is first cleared of any greasy film. If the surface feels very oily or waxy, wash it with warm water and trisodium phosphate (TSP) or any household detergent. Rinse with clear water and wipe dry with a sponge. You also should inspect for holes, cracks and water damage and make necessary repairs before proceeding. In most cases, you can paint directly over an old coat of paint. Glossy surfaces, however, must be deglossed with fine sandpaper or a commercial deglosser from your paint dealer.

The first step in getting ready to paint a room is to clear out all furniture. If furniture cannot be removed, it should be systematically moved away from work areas. If you plan to do walls but not ceilings, furniture can be moved into the middle of the room. Don't forget the drop cloths or newspapers, which should be placed on the floor and on the furniture.

Although painting over wallpaper is not generally recommended, it can be done with a latex paint, but the paper must be well-fastened to the wall and washed clean. Excess water should be wiped with a sponge. (Never paint over dry-strippable paper, which is designed to be removed easily.)

You also should protect unpainted surfaces. Remove hardware, such as doorknobs, hinges and switch plates. Use an inexpensive paint shield when painting around window panes or apply masking tape, pressing firmly to prevent seepage. (Allow a small gap between the tape and frame putty; remove the tape as soon as the paint sets.)

Kinds of Paint

The best paints today for interior walls are either latex or alkyd. The former is a water-based paint with fast-drying properties, is odorless, can be applied on damp surfaces and is the easiest to apply and clean up of all paints. It's available in flat to semi-gloss finishes. The latter dries more slowly than the latex paints, but it gives good coverage, can withstand scrubbing and produces a water-resistant film that is especially good for bathroom walls and other areas where moisture collects. Finishes range from flat to gloss.

Painting Tools

Basically, you will need a wall brush or a roller for large areas and a small brush for painting along narrow surfaces and in tight corners. You also will need containers for mixing paint and for holding solvents when cleaning your painting tools. (You can use an old coffee can or a special cardboard mixing pail.)

It pays to invest in a good brush. Paintbrushes are made either from natural bristles of animal hair (good for use with oil-based paints, but because these bristles absorb water, they should not be used with water-soluble paints) or from synthetics, such as nylon, that can be used with both oil-and water-based paints. Check that brush bristles are flagged (have split ends which hold more paint and thus apply it more smoothly), tapered, full and springy and firmly held against their setting.

Sequence of Painting

Before you begin painting, use a wooden paddle to stir paint thoroughly. Pour only a bit at a time from the paint can into your bucket until the bucket is half-filled. Cover the paint can, and wipe the lip clean before sealing.

Start from the top, painting the ceiling first, then the walls. Doors, windows and woodwork are painted after the walls are finished; baseboards are painted last.

Here's the expert's way of using a paintbrush (prepared first by lightly moistening bristles in solvent then drying with an absorbent cloth): Dip the brush into the paint (not more than half the length of the bristles). Lift brush straight up, allowing excess paint to drip off. Tap bristles against inside of bucket before withdrawing brush. Then place paint on the wall in several places by gently slapping surface with flat sides of brush. Hold brush at about a 45° angle and pull brush across surface. Smooth paint with long, light strokes. To spread paint more thinly at the edges of walls, begin gradually lifting brush from surface as you get to the edges.

For large areas, paint rollers will get the job done more quickly. They're especially handy for ceilings because they are available with extension handles (usually 24 inches in length).

A new roller, like a brush, should be conditioned before use. Wash the cover in soap and water to remove dirt, then rinse. When preparing to paint, roll the paint roller in the deep part of the paint-filled pan until the roller is filled evenly. Roll the roller on the exposed slope of pan to remove excess paint. Apply the paint in four random strokes or in the shape of a W (to avoid unloading all the paint in one spot). Then roll the roller across the first strokes, spreading the paint uniformly. Repeat, making the same pattern a short distance away from the portion already finished. Blend in with horizontal strokes. Roll slowly and gently until the roller begins to dry. Dip again and continue.

It broils! It bakes!
It's the Toast 'N Broil
Toast-R-Oven® toaster from GE.

It's a 2-steak broiler.

This GE toaster oven has a separate broil setting that lets you broil steaks, hamburgers, hot dogs—easily and conveniently. And because it broils, GE's toaster oven makes more than two hundred dishes you can't make in most other toaster ovens! The high-wall broiler pan helps protect the interior from spatters—and it pops into the dishwasher for easy cleaning.

GE's toaster oven handles the dozens of small cooking jobs you'd hate to heat up your big oven for. Like top-browning sandwiches, baking casseroles, warming leftovers. And it works in tandem with your big oven when you want to cook foods that require different temperatures.

It's an automatic toaster.

It takes the place of a 4-slice toaster. It toasts odd-size breads and rolls, both sides at once, and shuts off automatically. A bell rings when toast is ready.

Features! Features!

The thermostatically controlled oven has settings from 200°F to 500°F. Automatic Top Brown setting is great for melting, crisping and browning. And a signal bell rings when food is ready. Removable rack, oven tray, broiler pan and swing-open crumb tray make cleaning easy.

Only GE gives you so many models to choose from.

See them all at your GE dealer's now. The model featured here is the T26. The T23 broils, bakes and toasts 2 slices. Non-broiling models include the Deluxe 2-slice Toast-R-

Oven toaster (T93B) as well as the King Size 4-slice Toast-R-Oven toaster (T97). There's a size for every family, a price for every budget.

DECORATIVE NEW LOOKS IN PRETTY, PAINTED FURNITURE

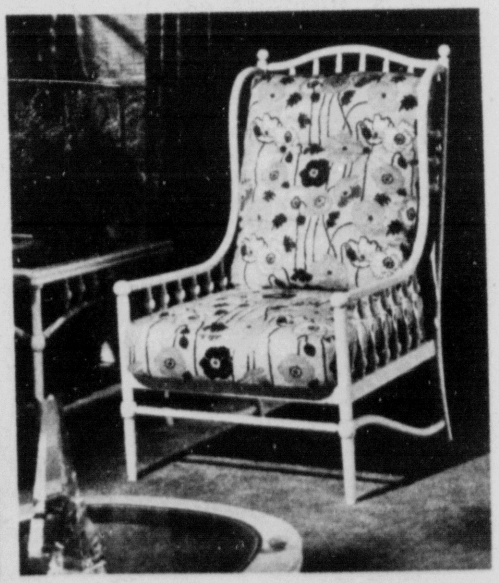
A Bit Of Old Venice

In the tradition of rare Venetian artistry is this enchanting display cabinet. It features silk-screened pastel floral motifs, hand-striping and Trompe L'Oeil ("fool-the-eye") decorated moldings and overlays. The piece, fashioned of maple solids and veneers, in an antique white parchment shade, has adjustable shelves in the open top and one other shelf behind doors. (Interestingly, our cabinet displays collectibles from a contrasting style period.) It measures 24" x 13" x 77". By Drexel. The cost is approximately $595.

Inspired Comfort

A new interpretation of the wing chair is delightfully at ease in a turn-of-the-century spool and spindle architectural motif. Its deceptively generous proportions are given a light and airy look by use of a white matte finish frame, upholstered in a gay floral. Designed by Roland Carter for Hickory Furniture Co. About $259.



A Working Member

The old-faithful trestle desk puts on a new face in this charming, lightly scaled rendition that would look attractive in almost any room. It's made in a warm brown finish in birch with a choice of painted trim in black, white or curry. It measures 40" x 24" x 37½". By Temple-Stuart. Approximate retail price is $420.

Consumer Reports thinks you should know:

Of the 35 brands and varieties of bologna tested by Consumer Reports for quality, nine were rated Poor or Very Poor for taste. The samples, bought in food stores, were either rancid or showed beginning signs of rancidity.

The start of rancidity can often be detected by a perfume-like scent. So the sweet smell of your bologna may be trying to tell you something.

Here's how bologna stacked up against the other 3 sandwich foods...(1) Highest in cost-per-ounce of protein (2) Highest in fats and calories. Not to mention the highest cost-per-sandwich at the market prices prevailing when we made our test. The bologna sandwich, in fact, was over four times as expensive as the cheapest sandwich—peanut butter.

What's more, bologna contains a potentially harmful additive called sodium nitrite. And the samples we tested were inflated an average of 8% in weight by adding plain water. (This latter ingredient won't hurt anybody, true. But we don't think you should be paying meat prices for it.)

Without help, it's hard to know about subtle product differences that can cheat your family of the nutrients they need. And maybe even cost you more in the bargain.

That's why Consumer Reports rates food and household products by testing standards just as rigorous as those we use for automobiles and expensive appliances. Equally rigorous standards are applied to our research into services—such as banking, insurance and much more.

Consumer Reports is the nonprofit, reader-supported magazine of Consumers Union—the nation's leading independent organization for testing and rating consumer products and services.

Five facts our readers learned that you could have used:

1. Pepperidge Farm Whole Wheat Bread was rated lower in nutritional quality than Wonder Enriched White Bread.

2. Pizza Hut's 10" Supreme pie gave us the most nutritional buy out of eight fast-food meals we tested... Arthur Treacher's Fish 'n Chips the least.

3. Bounty may be a "quicker picker upper" than lower-priced paper towels. But you may be able to handle most of your clean-up jobs with the cheapest towel you can find.

4. Meanwhile, that much-squeezed-on-TV bathroom tissue that touts its softness whittled 150 sheets off each roll. (Once again, it's the customer who gets squeezed.)

5. Two banks can advertise the same interest rate for your savings account. But one pays only $44.93 for the same period for which the other pays $75.30. It's how they calculate your interest that counts. (And some of the biggest banks in the country are the stingiest when it comes to paying you interest.)

START YOUR VEGETABLE GARDEN INDOORS

What's more delicious and a better money saver than a home-grown harvest of fresh vegetables? And if started now, indoors, under lights, the cost will be less than buying seedlings. You then transplant the vegetables outdoors later.

Even if you're a beginning gardener, the procedure is not difficult, so here's a step-by-step plan devised with the help of a horticultural expert.

Indoor "Sunshine"

What to Plant. Nearly all vegetables can be started from seed in an indoor light garden. Because many vegetables are sensitive to root damage when being transplanted, they should be planted in individual peat pots or pellets and then transplanted, pot and all, outdoors. Vegetables best suited for transplanting to an outdoor garden include cabbage, cucumbers, herbs, lettuce, beans, melons, peppers, squash, tomatoes and turnips. For more exotic fare, try a crop of Chinese cabbage.

Where to Plant. Start your seeds under simulated sunshine in a heated area, such as a basement, utility room or attic. If the room's temperature cannot be maintained at 65°-70° F., use a small insulated, waterproof heating cable purchased at a garden center to supply bottom heat under flats or trays.

Your Light Setup. Light for the indoor garden can be provided from two 40-watt fluorescents in a bare-bulb utility fixture. These are generally available at garden centers and hardware and department stores. There even are fluorescents especially developed to supply the full spectrum of natural sunlight, including the beneficial portion of ultraviolet. Leave the lights on about 16 hours a day. To control them, you may want to invest in an automatic timer. Such fluorescents use about 92 watts of energy. Operating the lights for 16 hours a day at an electrical rate of five cents per kilowatt hour would cost about 50 cents a week.

Growing. After you have installed your light units, set up four trays or flats, each holding about 16 plants, which would be the maximum for transplanting to an average 8- x 10-foot plot. Plastic trays (12 x 12 inches) are easiest to handle. Plant about two or three seeds in each peat pellet or pot. Be certain to follow seed-packet directions. A good rule of thumb is to plant a seed to a depth of two or three times its size.

Use sterilized growing media, not garden soil. The latter may contain disease organisms that can rot the seedlings. Place the pots or pellets in the tray and moisten thoroughly from the bottom with warm or room-temperature water. Then place the tray in a large, clear plastic bag and tie it. The plastic bag allows light to nourish the plants and keeps moisture high for germination. Remove a week or two after the seedlings appear. Cull your crop by reducing the number of plants per pot or pellet to the one or two healthiest specimens. Try to keep the tops of the growing plants about six inches below the lights.

Maintenance. After the plastic bag is removed, begin watering your seedlings. To do this, without disturbing them, place them flat in a quarter-inch of room-temperature water for a few minutes. Rewater when the soil feels dry. Most prepared growing media contain fertilizer, so there is no need to refertilize. Should plants get too large for the pot, then a soluble fertilizer may be

GROW ALL THE WAY WITH ORTHO.

A three-pronged program for better home grown vegetables.

1. A brand new, highly efficient weed killer. Comes in an easy-to-apply granular formulation for selective, pre-emergence weed control. Also great for use around shrubs, annuals, trees and on lawns.

2. A specially prepared plant food for vegetable gardens formulated for high yields and top quality vegetables. Can be used on all the vegetables in the garden. Pelleted formulation, convenient, easy-to-use carton.

3. Can be used on food crops to within one day of harvest. It's especially effective for use on tomatoes, beans, cucumbers, peppers, potatoes, melons and other listed vegetables. Avoid accidents: For safety, read the entire label including cautions. Use all chemicals only as directed.

Famed Physicist Proves That Sitting In A Pyramid Causes Unexplainable Good Things To Happen

HISTORY REVEALS SUCH BENEFITS AS LONGER LIFE, SPONTANEOUS CURING, REDUCED AGING & MIND EXPANSION

 * * Virtually, every man, woman and teenager in America owns a miniature pyramid. Remove a $1.00 bill from your wallet and flip it over: Imprinted there is a reproduction of the reverse side of The Great Seal of the U.S. — a pyramid of 13 courses, representing the original 13 colonies, watched over by the Eye of Providence.*

 * * Napoleon was fascinated by 'The Mountains of the Pharaohs.' After spending a night in The Great Pyramid at Giza, it was a pale and shaken General who refused to disclose details and ordered that the incident never be mentioned again, saying only that he had foreseen his destiny.*

Sheer size alone is enough to shatter the imagination! On the west bank of the Nile River, just outside Cairo, Egypt, stands the largest and best preserved of the gigantic stone structures called "Pyramids." Towering over 450' into the air, covering 13 square acres of land, and containing more than 2,500,000 hewn stone blocks averaging from 3 to 90 tons each, The Great Pyramid at Giza weighs in at a total close to 6,000,000 tons.

- If its stones were cut into standard size bricks and laid end-to-end, they would reach from here to the Moon!

Acclaimed as the foremost of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World, this pyramid has been the source of raging controversy and debate. Within the span of one century, 25 million tons of limestone, mortar and brick were piled up in the desert. WHY? And by whom? Historians say the pyramids were built by slaves as tombs. No written record exists, however, proving this. Others say the pyramids were built by ancient astronauts from faraway planets, or possibly a culture able to overcome the force of gravity. But for what reason? As an astronomical observatory? A temple? Some believe that they are the biblical "Granaries of Joseph" or that they were used to heal disease by atmospheric conditions; still others theorize that they are at this very moment monitoring the Earth.

Whoever is responsible for the construction of The Great Pyramid fully understood more about the science of mathematics and the exact dimensions of the Earth than modern science did up until the International Geophysical Year 1957-1958. Curiously, buried within the measurements is a key to the structure of the entire solar system:

- Dimensions, shape and weight of the Earth
- Distance from the Earth to the Sun
- Hours, minutes and seconds in a day
- Average temperature of the Earth

The Pyramid is aligned True North with error less than 5' of one degree; is level over 13 acres to within one-half inch; and is situated exactly on the meridians which divide the land masses of the Earth into quarters

The aura of mystery and intrigue remained intact for 45 centuries. Rumors of magic and mysterious forces relayed the message of this strange phenomenon from one generation to the next.

And then the living legend of the pyramid captured the attention of world-renown scientist, G. Patrick Flanagan. Dr. Flanagan's decision to probe the mysterious energy fields which pyramids contain led him to the threshold of a new technology heretofore unknown to man. Work proceeded on the assumption that where there exists a physical phenomenon, there also exists a physical answer. Pyramid Power has graduated from the realm of the mystical to that of an actual science. Through his precise, carefully controlled scientific experiments, Dr. Flanagan has proven that the force called the "Power of the Pyramid" does exist. Not only has he proven its existence, but he has actually been able to duplicate it.

Dr. Flanagan Talks About Pyramid Power

Pyramid means "fire in the middle." Quite obviously, there is no real fire, but rather "energy in the middle."

It is important to understand that pyramids have no energy source in themselves; they trap energy inside much like the glass walls of a greenhouse trap rays of sunlight. The geometric shape acts as a lens, absorbing vast amounts of the biocosmic energy which is constantly bombarding our environment and intensifying it many times its original power. If an object or a human is placed inside, he becomes the recipient of this concentrated force and is able to utilize it to benefit his daily life.

The key to Pyramid Power lies in a form of electromagnetic radiation of short wave lengths called "microwaves." Where does all this "biocosmic" power come from?

Surrounded by vast electrostatic, magnetic, light and gravitational fields, we remain for the most part totally unaware of them and the effects they have on our bodies. Do you know that the pulsating magnetic field of the earth stimulates normal brain rhythm and that when you are under emotional stress or suffering great pain your own bodily magnetic field can increase enough to approximate that of the Earth? Although the electrostatic field is not felt by us, it is one of the most important factors affecting life: Persons exposed to elimination or decrease of this field suffer negative effects contributing to fatigue, irritability and apathy. Tests conducted by NASA show that under a favorable electrostatic field, all-around performance, work capacity, disposition, metabolism function and rate of burn recovery and healing were all improved, while pain and allergic disorders can be relieved.

Our own senses remain extremely limited: We utilize less than 0.01% of the total light available. By contrast, the geometric shape of the pyramid acts as an antenna which soaks up this power, magnifies it many times over, and stores it for us to use. Not only can Dr. Flanagan duplicate Pyramid Power, but he has actually been able to photograph it by using Kirlian Photography, a process which captures on film radiations not visible to the naked eye.

Since energy tends to discharge from sharp points in any energy system, it is not at all unusual that the power which is housed inside of the pyramid would flow from its apex and from its corners.

FIRST INEXPENSIVE HOME PYRAMIDS NOW AVAILABLE TO PUBLIC. Until now, pyramids cost anywhere from $40.00 to $200.00 because of the precision required. A new corrugated board tubing pyramid which has the same required precision has just been developed and is available for under $10.00. (See story below.)

IMPORTANT NOTE! It is only necessary to have the framework of a pyramid for it to function. It is not necessary for the sides to be closed. Also, if the sides were closed, sitting inside would become very uncomfortable.

The NBC Tomorrow Show with Tom Snyder, on September 15, 1975, featured Pyramid Power. Dr. Flanagan dramatically demonstrated its capabilities showing that it is able to increase intrinsic bodily strength up to 50% when such weakness is due to a depleted energy condition. This fact is verified by doctors, Kirlian Photography, and standard energy analyzing equipment.

In the 1960's, a team of scientists lead by a Nobel Prize Winner for Physics worked with 12 United States and United Arab Republic Agencies to analyze the structure of the Pyramid of Kephren. At the conclusion of the project, a correspondent from the London "Times" asked for and received this explanation:

".....there is some force that defies the laws of science at work in the pyramid."

Using ultra-sophisticated technical equipment, Dr. Flanagan has proven that Pyramid Power:

- Helps people, animals, plants and things
- Can be obtained quickly and easily by anyone
- Can strengthen, energize and rejuvenate the body
- Can increase ESP

When you enter a pyramid, you can feel the surrounding energy. All who have sat in one report an intense feeling of heat along with a tingling sensation in the hands. Those who meditate or use biofeedback unanimously agree that when these practices are performed in a pyramid, the benefits gained are significantly increased. They feel that stress-related conditions, such as insomnia, chronic headache, fatigue, low back pain, can all be reduced; that daily tension, stress, and anxiety can be relieved; that they perform better on the job, increase self confidence, and suffer less depression — all of this to a far greater degree than if they were to meditate without the aid of pyramid power.

Animal lovers disclose that their pets are healthier, live longer, and are free from fleas and ticks. Just plain "lovers" experienced a definite improvement in their lovelife with increased virility and sexual sensitivity. Others reveal that they not only feel better, but also look younger, more attractive and appealing. One movie star sleeps with a miniature pyramid under her bed because it promotes sound sleep and makes her feel energetic.

Pyramid Power can be absorbed and stored in ordinary tap water for consumption, thus discharging natural energy directly into the system. This same water can be used to treat the problem skin and acne suffered by teenagers. Hair shampooed with it is lustrous and manageable. House plants thrive when watered with it. They grow larger faster, become healthier (sickly plants are strengthened), and look greener. Even plant pests are repelled.

And those concerned with the economics of their pocketbooks are justly rewarded: Enhance the flavor of less expensive brands; tenderize meat; mellow inexpensive wines so that they taste like vintage stock; remove the bitterness from coffee and tea; dehydrate foods for future use (meat, fruit, herbs, vegetables); freshen wilted vegetables and restore stale coffee; sharpen dull razor blades.

Hobbyists can easily preserve butterflies, insects, etc. for their collections; dry fresh flowers and foliage for bouquets and arrangements.

Pyramid Power Projected

Still in its infant stages, Pyramid Power is a scientific discovery which will ultimately prove to be equal or superior to electricity.

Before his death Dr. Harold Saxon Burr, of Yale University, worked on the "Blueprint for Immortality," a special program to measure, balance and increase the energy fields around and in the human body so that many forms of disease can be eliminated entirely, the aging process slowed down, and the life span drastically prolonged.

Pyramid Power has the potential to purify the polluted air and water of entire cities. An air freshener has already been developed for the home which makes the air 'like that of an alpine valley near a waterfall — perfect for optimum health.'

Because this powerful force will lead us away from dependence on fossil fuels by providing an understanding of the true nature of gravity (a problem which the governments of the U.S. and foreign countries are desperately trying to conquer), the energy crisis will be greatly relieved.

A huge, gleaming white pyramid-shaped office building now stands in the financial district of San Francisco. The interest of the entire construction industry was captured when a religious community in Houston, Texas erected its church in proportion to the Great Pyramid at Giza. In development stages are pyramid complexes to house whole Institutes and Centers in New York and California, as well as pyramid theaters, restaurants, homes and apartments throughout the country. Watch for them in the days to come!

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

We no longer need look only to the future for Pyramid Power. The article below will explain how you can begin immediately to put the Power of the Pyramid to work for you every day.

Dr. G. Patrick Flanagan, recognized as the world's leading Pyramid Power scientist, has unequivocally elevated Pyramid Power to the stature of a science. He has proven that Pyramid Power does exist and that it creates an energy flow capable of accomplishing countless beneficial and desirable results. These results have been thoroughly documented and verified by independent scientists and researchers the world over.

But up until the present time Pyramid Power has been available only on an extremely limited basis. But because there is yet so much vital information to be gathered, Dr. Flanagan has, for the first time ever, made it available to the general public.

Several years ago, in an effort to present the most complete picture possible, Dr. Flanagan and his staff initiated an Intensive Continuous Research Program. These scientists now wish to utilize the experiences, observations and comments of the average Home Pyramid (As shown in the picture above) user. (Dr. Flanagan is the author of "Pyramid Power", the original pyramid energy book in the USA.) He is currently in the process of collecting data for another, even more comprehensive book. Therefore, the Home Pyramid is now available to you at a special reduced rate. Additionally, if your name is chosen, you will receive an invitation to take part in this important project. Participation entails only several minutes of your time, and should you decide to do so, will automatically qualify you for special bonuses.

The Home Pyramid is a lightweight, mobile unit scaled as an exact replica of The Great Pyramid at Giza. This is absolutely necessary in order to insure success. The base measures seven feet — the height measures four and one-half feet. Constructed of high quality, corrugated board tubing, this pyramid can accommodate people, animals, plants and things. Free standing, it is roomy enough to comfortably house two adults. Those who choose to sleep under it report a heightening of all feeling: sensual, physical energy, and ESP as well as a reduction in aches and pains.

The structure itself is uncovered. One of the most fascinating discoveries yet is that Pyramid Power can be generated by an uncovered structure IF the tubular framework maintains the accurately - shaped outline and precise proportions of The Great Pyramid at Giza. The Pyramid Power from within automatically produces an energy shield which serves the same purpose as a solid covering, yet the structure remains free of the restrictions and confines of a conventional pyramid or tent. Air, sound and light are free to circulate around you. IMPORTANT NOTE! It is only necessary to have the framework of a pyramid for it to function. It is not necessary for the sides to be closed. Also, if the sides were closed, sitting inside would become very uncomfortable.

The Home Pyramid is completely versatile in its simplicity. It takes only minutes to assemble. Complete, easy-to-follow instructions and suggestions for its use are included.

Pyramids before this cost anywhere from $40.00 to $200.00 because of the precision required and the expensive material involved. However, in order to get public feedback for further research data, the Home Pyramid is being made available through this special research project for only $9.95. All Dr. Flanagan asks is that if anyone experiences exceptional benefits, would they please inform him by mail. The address will be provided with the Home Pyramid. For those who wish to take advantage of Pyramid Power, the following instructions are provided:

On a blank piece of paper, print the words HOME PYRAMID followed by your own name, address and zip code. Mail this along with $9.95 in cash, check or money order to The Pyramid research Federation, Dept. S-65 . 4626 Cleveland Ave. N., Canton, Ohio 44767. Your Home Pyramid will be mailed to you immediately. (Limit of two per household - NO EXCEPTIONS, PLEASE. If two are ordered, please enclose $19.90.)

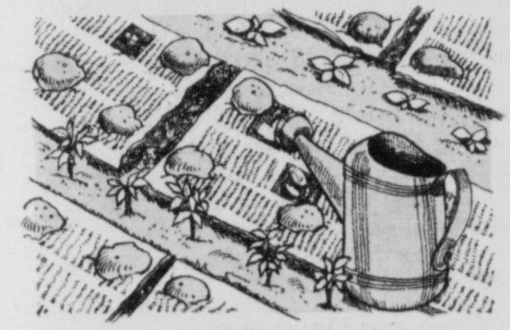
required to keep them hardy. Caution should be exercised not to overfeed plants.

Hardening Seedlings. About two weeks before the plants are to be transplanted outdoors, begin hardening them to the harsher outdoor environment by putting them out in mild weather, gradually increasing the time from an hour to a whole day.

Under Old Sol

Laying Out the Garden. If you've had a garden before, you know what size you can manage easily. If you're a beginner, mark off an 8- x 10-foot space that gets at least six hours of sun a day, is well drained and preferably is near the house for convenience. Your garden will need an inch of sprinkler water or rain each week. Dig up the soil to a depth of eight inches. Break up any big chunks and rake the surface well. Then divide the garden in half with a foot-wide path down the middle.

The application of fertilizer and lime should be based on the results of a soil test done with a do-it-yourself kit or the advice of your local agricultural extension service. Follow the directions that come with the nutrients your soil needs. When the soil is ready for planting, run a string between stakes to divide the garden into rows, each one-foot apart. If you plan a climbing crop, such as beans, extend your garden vertically by erecting a wire fence or trellis along one side. If the garden is on a hillside, run the rows across the slope, not up and down it. This helps to hold the water and reduce erosion. If garden space is really limited, make a border for your patio out of containers filled with tomato plants. Or you might plant carrots as a fernlike border for your flower beds.



Newspaper between rows retains moisture.

Transplanting. Check with your county agricultural agent or local nursery regarding the average size your vegetable plants should be before transplanting. About an hour before you plan to transplant, water the seedlings from the bottom. Remove pots or pellets from the trays and set into ground. All plants should be set at a depth so soil just covers the pots or pellets—except tomatoes, which ought to have as much of the stem buried as possible. Then pour a cup of water or transplanting solution around each plant. Finish by tapping soil down lightly. Add stakes for tomatoes at this time. Group crops by height to prevent shading.

Tools. The important ones are a spading fork to help prepare soil for planting, a spade to dig up the garden and mash large dirt lumps, a bow rake to pulverize dirt chunks, a hoe for removing weeds and aerating the soil so moisture reaches plant roots, a transplanter for digging and filling holes when transplanting. For best service, clean tools regularly and keep spades and hoes sharp.

Mulching. For easy-care gardening, add a four-inch layer of straw or commercial mulch between rows. Besides eliminating weeds, mulching helps keep moisture in the soil since water can't evaporate too rapidly under the layer. If you plan to be away for two weeks in the summer, just before you go, water your garden thoroughly. Then put layers of newspaper, at least four-sheets thick, between the rows and as close to plants as possible. Anchor the papers with stones and water lightly to seal the papers together. This layer on top of your previous mulch will help you come home to a garden of succulent juicy vegetables.

Increasing Your Yield. To maximize productivity, have some seedlings ready every time you harvest a crop. Local newspapers often give average dates for the last frost of the spring and the first in the fall. For example, if you have 180 frost-free growing days in your area, and your seed packet says cucumbers take 60 days to mature, you have time for a second, maybe even a third crop.

DO

- Avoid too many sprawling plants, such as squash or cucumber, if you're short on space. Vegetables that are space savers include turnips, lettuce, beets and spinach.
- Check plants regularly for damage from disease or pests. Consult your local garden center or favorite gardening book regarding specific remedies.
- Label each row with a waterproof marker that notes the plant, variety name and planting date.

DON'T

- Overbuy on seeds. Check packets for yield.
- Keep vegetables waiting if you plan to can or freeze them. Peak quality may be lost within a two-to-three hour period following harvesting.

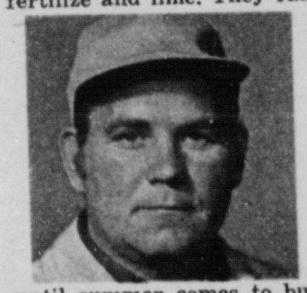
By Mike Sandin
Agronomist

Every year I see people pour more and more money into their lawns. They dig, fertilize and lime. They rake it all in. They scatter their seed and roll and water it.



Birds love it! Seeds which aren't washed away by rain give them a feast. But some seed grows, and soon it's time to weed, water and mow, mow . . . until summer comes to burn the lawn into hay, or crabgrass and diseases infest it.

That's what happens to ordinary grass, but not to Amazoy Zoysia.

"MOWED IT 2 TIMES," WRITES WOMAN

For example, Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn ". . . is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays as green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in . . . Last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds — it's just wonderful!"

And from Iowa came word that the state's largest Men's Garden Club picked a Zoysia lawn as the "top lawn — nearly perfect" in its area. Yet this lawn had been watered only once all summer up to August!

Cuts Your Work, Saves You Money

Your deep-rooted, established Amazoy lawn saves you time and money in many ways. It never needs replacement . . . ends re-seeding forever. Fertilizing and watering (water costs money, too) are rarely if ever needed. It ends the need for crabgrass killers permanently. It cuts pushing a noisy mower in the blistering sun by 2/3.

CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS

Thick rich, luxurious Amazoy grows into a carpet of grass that chokes out crabgrass and weeds all summer long. It will NOT winter kill. Goes off its green color after killing frost, regains fresh new beauty every Spring — a true perennial!

For Slopes, Play Areas, Bare Spots

Your Own Supply of Plug Transplants

NO SEED, NO SOD!

There's no seed that produces winter-hardy Meyer Zoysia. Sod of ordinary grass brings with it the problems of seed, like weeds, diseases, burning out, other ills.

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass Was Perfected by U.S. Govt.; Released In Cooperation With U.S. Golf Assoc. as a superior grass.

Order guaranteed Amazoy now, get your bonus plugs FREE. Your order will be delivered at earliest correct time for planting in your area.

We ship all orders the same day grass is taken from the soil, shipping charge collect via most economical means.

FLOWERING SHRUBS

Blooming shrubs are dear to the hearts of most enthusiastic gardeners. They are versatile and are available in all shapes and sizes as well as in countless varieties. Some are fast-growing, and others take their time, but they all perform remarkably well with little care, year after year.

Selection

If you want to introduce shrubs into your landscaping, the first step is to become familiar with the foliage plants that grow well in your area. Check with your local plant nursery or extension service.

After discovering a variety that pleases you, find out about its characteristics, including the maintenance it requires. Does the shrub shed its flowers excessively or have an overly emphatic scent? How about the branches—do they break easily, causing twig litter? Does the shrub need special protection against wind or snow? Does it require frequent pruning?

You may be willing to devote considerable time to caring for a shrub that has really caught your fancy. As a general rule, it's a good idea to limit your choices to a select few that will make a dramatic statement: like a generous bank of mountain laurel in spring bloom, keeping its attractive green leaves throughout the winter; or a cluster of viburnums, a mass of white flowers in late May, covered with berries in the fall.

Proper Planting

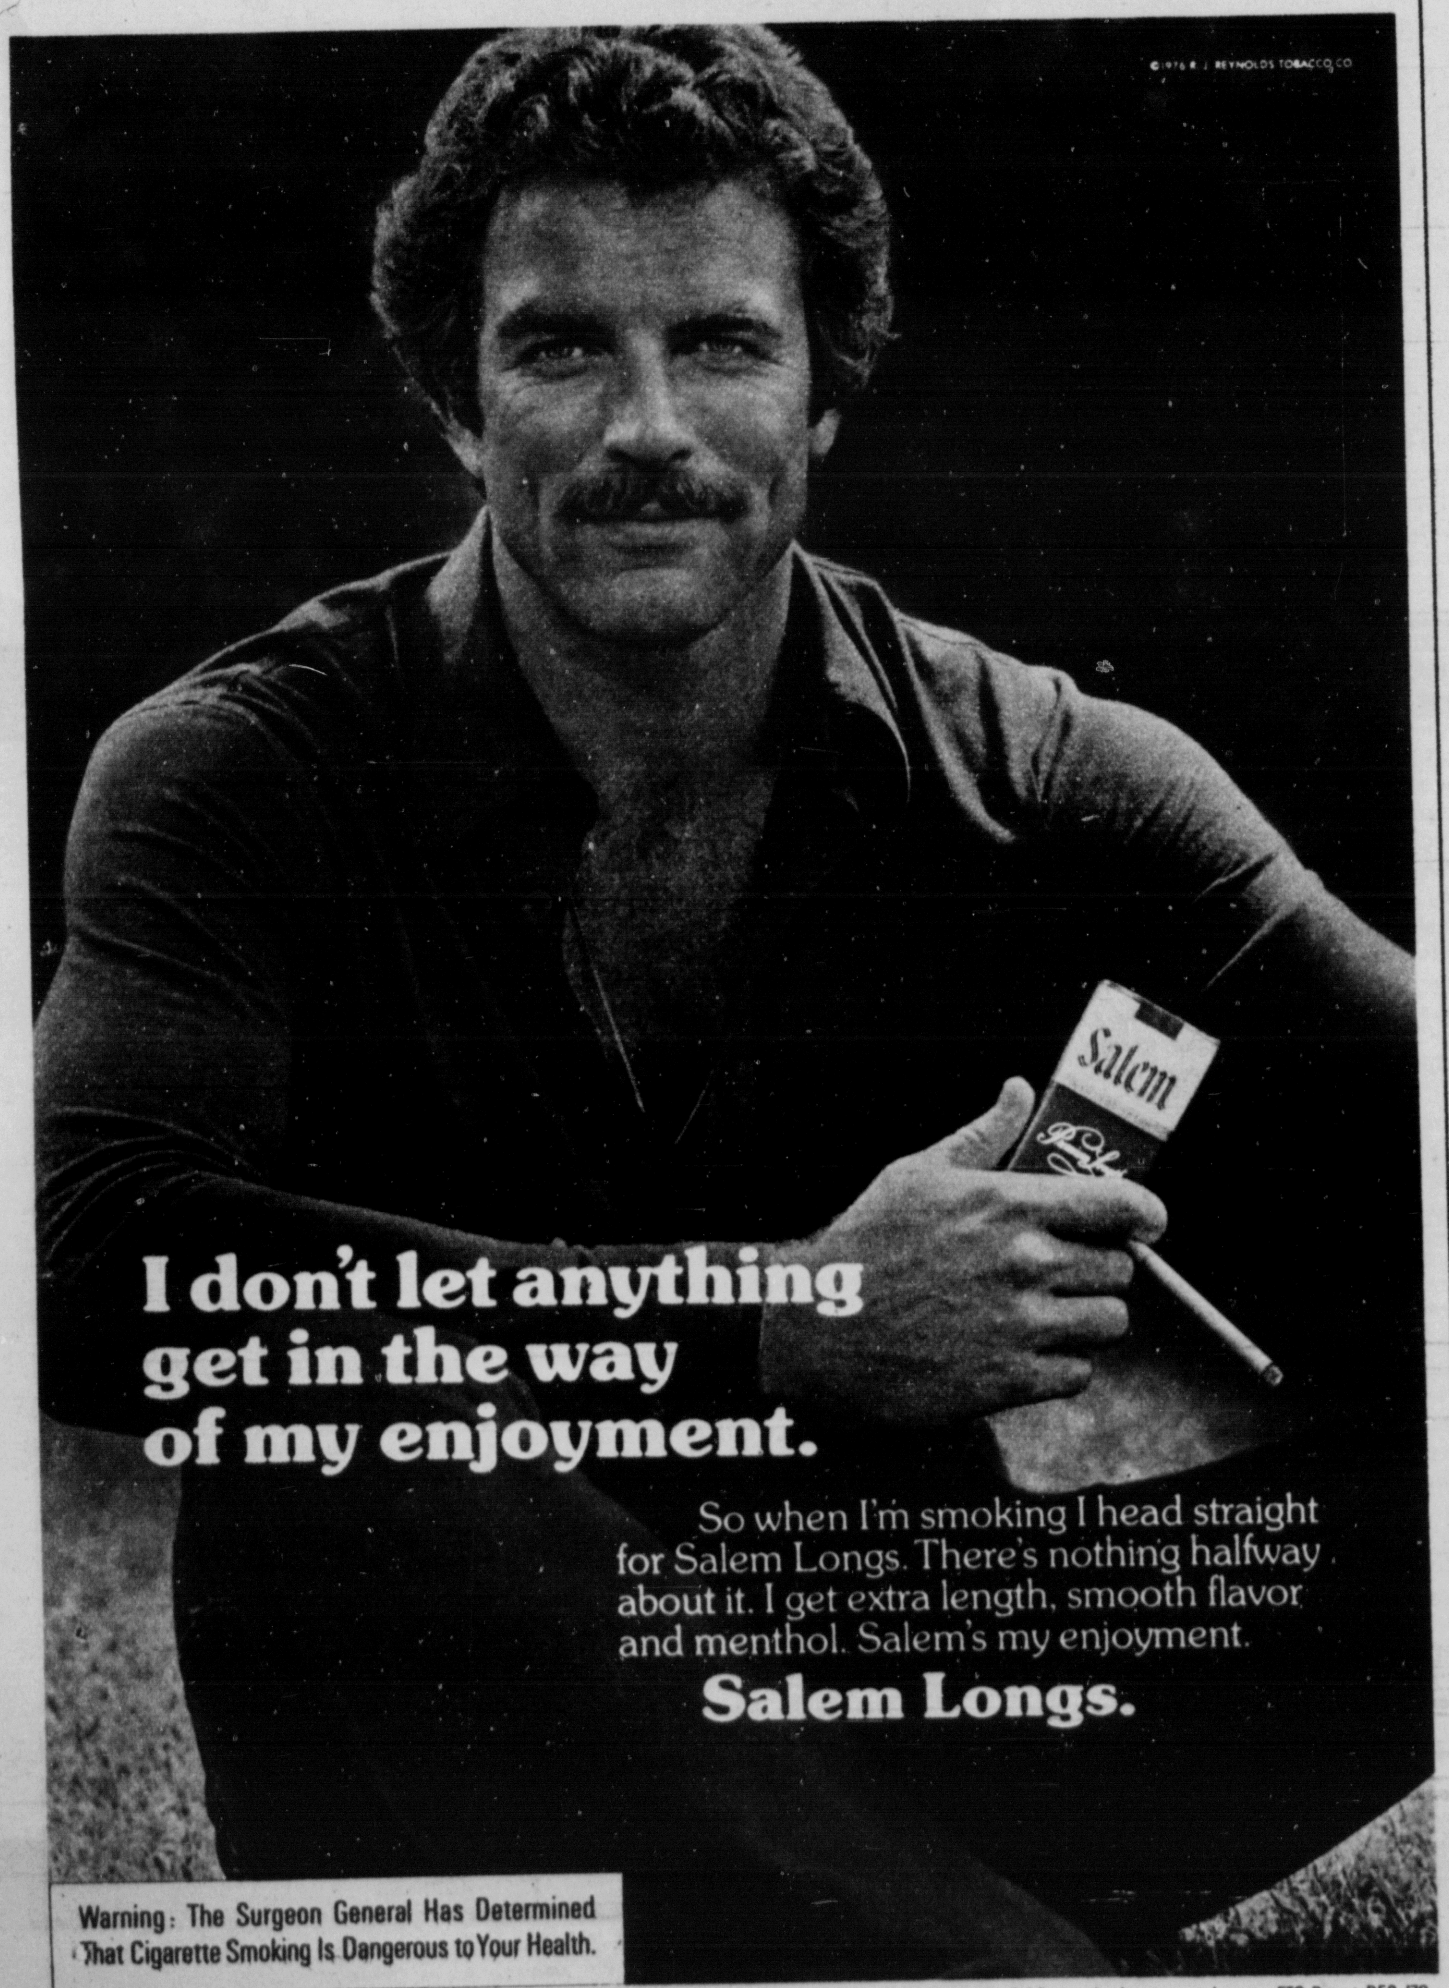
To ascertain the shrubs to which your soil will be most receptive, you need to determine its nutritional value and whether it is acid, alkaline or neutral. Your state agricultural extension service is equipped to make this test.

As in any garden, how you sow, so shall you reap. When the time comes to plant your shrub, don't do it hastily. Here is the basic technique for setting out a shrub. Dig a hole twice as deep and twice as wide as the wrapped root ball or mass of roots to be accommodated. (Burlaping needs only to be loosened and laid out in the hole beneath the roots, where it will disintegrate.) Keep sod (if any), topsoil and subsoil in separate piles. Then toss topsoil and sod into the bottom and mix in peat. Place the shrub in the hole, spreading the roots if planting a bare-root shrub. (For a balled shrub, the depth of the hole should allow it to rest on the layer of topsoil.) Add topsoil around the roots, packing firmly. Gradually add more soil, including subsoil, leaving enough depression around shrub to hold a bucket or two of water. Water and allow to drain thoroughly. Place additional soil around plant, leaving a dished area to facilitate future watering. Mulch with organic matter.

Care and Maintenance

Freshly planted shrubs should not be allowed to dry out. Surface mulching with garden compost, or with a mixture of compost and peat, will materially reduce soil moisture losses. If woodchips or sawdust are used as a mulch, nitrogen fertilizer is required to offset nitrogen starvation. The mulch should be maintained year round and, ideally, cover the entire area over which the roots grow (approximately from the base of the shrub to the ends of its branches).

Pruning can be kept to a once-a-year regimen if done conscientiously. There are three main reasons for pruning shrubs: to remove dead or damaged branches, to shape (just a little, making sure to keep shrubs natural-looking) and to promote flowering. You should never cut across the top of a shrub because new growth will come only from the top, resulting in a leggy growth. Stems must be cut back to the ground, and a good rule of thumb is to cut back about one-third of all stems each year for three years so you can have a continuous flower show. Spring-flowering shrubs usually should be pruned immediately after blooming, and summer-flowering shrubs should be pruned when dormant in the very early spring. The exact time, however, depends on your location.



PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

Is youth the best time of life? Is there a time in life when others have particular respect for your judgment?

THE BEST YEARS OF YOUR LIFE

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. There comes a time in your life when others will show particular respect for your knowledge and judgment and place the greatest value on your advice.

2. Youth is the best time of life.

3. Foods taste better when you're young.

4. You can be old and still be strong.

5. A person's chance of distinguishing himself in the business world is greatest before he reaches middle age because younger executives are better at making important decisions.

6. The longer you live, the longer you want to live.

ANSWERS

1. True. University of Southern California studies found that middle-aged persons are sought most often for advice because they are perceived as possessing the best combination of practical experience and recent technical knowledge. The researchers found that "adolescents preferred advisers 17 to 21 years older than themselves, young adults preferred advisers 13 to 15 years older, and adults preferred advisers 10 to 11 years their senior." Those past middle age, however, preferred to seek advice from persons appreciably younger than themselves. The age span favored by both young and old, so far as respect for advice is concerned, ranged from approximately 35 to 55 years of age.

2. False. Investigators from California State University and the University of Southern California made a sociological study of three age groups: Youthful (average age 18), Middle-aged (average age 44) and Elderly (average age 76). The youthful subjects were the most given to feelings of alienation, powerlessness, meaninglessness and disaffection with the goals of society. The middle-aged group was found least subject to these feelings; elderly subjects ranked in the middle.

3. True. A University of Pennsylvania study found that the taste buds of youngsters (ranging from the early to middle teens) are more stimulated than those of adults by sweet desserts — pies, cakes, puddings, ice creams, candies, for example. Youngsters were also found to be more appreciative than adults of the tastes of salty foods, such as potato chips, peanuts and pretzels.

4. True. A study of thousands of men and women, ranging widely in age and socioeconomic levels, presented to the International Congress of Gerontology, found that the exercise you give your mind or muscles has a definite bearing on how late in life you will retain your vigor and vitality. The investigators concluded that "Intense physical or intellectual activity seems to have a favorable effect on the maintaining of physical strength with age." This finding bears out the adage that the human machine rusts a lot quicker than it wears out.

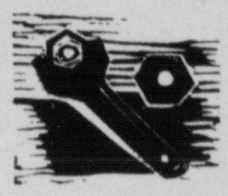
5. False. In psychological studies at the University of British Columbia, a representative sample of management-level personnel — ranging from the most youthful through middle age — were evaluated on the bases of prior decision-making performance and scores on decision-making tests. Results: older decision makers tended to take longer to make decisions but were able to diagnose the value of information more accurately than were the younger decision makers. This finding suggests that younger decision makers are most effective in the many situations where the success of an operation is likely to depend on the speed of the decision and when a deliberate decision, though perhaps more circumspect, may come too late.

6. True. According to the findings of a study sponsored by the National Institute of Mental Health, in which men and women of all ages and walks of life were interviewed on the question of how long they wished to live and how long they expected to live, those past middle age expected and wanted to live to a later age than those in the more youthful age brackets.

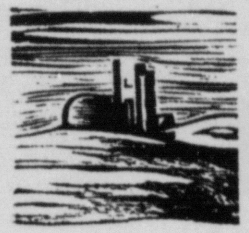
Observations™

Winter warmth. As gardeners look for the first crocus and small boys rub neat's-foot oil on baseball gloves, memories of the Big Freeze are fading. But, before warm weather dims memories too much, we want to acknowledge some outstanding performances during the past winter by Mobil employees and by our contractors, distributors, and haulers who moved heating oil and gasoline to where they were needed most. A few examples:

Raymond Genadek drives a Mobil fuel-oil truck in St. Paul, Minnesota. While making a delivery, with the temperature at 20 below zero, he saw an elderly woman walking down the street without a coat. She seemed bewildered, so he took her to the Mobil terminal and got the police to drive her home. Later, her daughter telephoned her thanks.



Karl Tielking is a contract hauler in Indianapolis. To keep his trucks going, he repaired them at night, lying on the ground in below-zero weather. Without his dedication, many fuel-oil deliveries would not have been made—some of them to non-Mobil customers.



Nowhere was the situation more desperate than in Buffalo, where 14 feet of snow fell during the winter. Yet our refinery never shut down. During the blizzard that began January 28, food and sleeping accommodations were arranged for 150 people trapped there. Workers caught a few hours' sleep on stretchers after 16 straight hours of duty.

Next door, the marketing terminal lost electric power, and 20 people (some of them not Mobil employees) were stranded for three days and nights. They bundled up in sweaters and coats, catnapped on locker-room benches, and used four-wheel-drive vehicles to obtain food at a nearby restaurant. When power returned, they dispatched trucks with fuel oil to hospitals, highway departments, schools, and other key installations.

Doug Hoffman works at the Paulsboro, New Jersey, heating oil branch. He learned that a mother and three children (not Mobil customers) had no heat. The mother spoke little English. He went to the home and found that one child in particular was suffering intensely from the cold. He delivered the fuel oil quickly, and started the furnace.

Nantucket Island, Massachusetts, benefited from cooperation among the Coast Guard, marketers, and marine transportation experts. Mobil is the only supplier on the island. Robert Caldwell, the distributor, ran out of heating oil, and the weather prevented him from bringing in more by barge from East Providence, Rhode Island. The Mobil 20 barge was dispatched from New York City. As it approached Nantucket, two Coast Guard cutters moved in to act as escorts. The trip normally takes about two days. This one took six, but the product arrived, and people kept warm.

The Hundred-Year Winter will long be remembered as the worst spell of weather since the U.S. Weather Bureau began keeping records. It should also be remembered for bringing out the best in people.

SMART COOKING / By Marilyn Hansen

This week we give you a collection of recipes that are all-time favorites with Family Weekly readers.

FROM THE FAMILY WEEKLY RECIPE FILES

MILLION-DOLLAR FUDGE*

- 1 can (13½ ozs.) evaporated milk
- 4½ cups sugar
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- Dash salt
- 1 pkg. (12 ozs.) chocolate bits
- 1 bar (12 ozs.) sweet chocolate, broken into pieces
- 1 jar (8 ozs.) marshmallow whip
- 2½ cups chopped walnuts

1. Mix evaporated milk, sugar, butter and salt in a saucepan and bring to boiling. Stir and boil for 7 minutes.
2. Combine all remaining ingredients in large bowl; mix well. Pour boiling evaporated-milk mixture over all. Beat until fudge is creamy.
3. Pour into buttered 9x9-inch square pan to cool. Cut into squares when cold.

Makes 30 squares

SLOW-COOKED SHORT RIBS IN WINE

- 6 lbs. well-trimmed short ribs cut into individual ribs
- 3 tablespoons liquid gravy seasoning
- 1 lb. fresh or frozen carrot chunks
- 1 lb. fresh or frozen small white onions
- 2 cloves garlic, crushed
- 2 bay leaves
- ¼ cup minute tapioca
- ½ teaspoon ground black pepper
- ½ teaspoon thyme leaves
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 2 envelopes instant bouillon
- 2 cups red wine
- 1 cup water

1. Brush short ribs with gravy seasoning and place in bottom of a 5½-qt. crock or slow-cooker. Add carrots, onions, garlic and bay leaves.
2. Combine minute tapioca, pepper, thyme, salt and instant bouillon. Sprinkle mixture over short ribs. Pour wine and water over all and cover.
3. Place crock in outer cooking shell. Cook on high setting for 4½-5 hours.

Makes 6 to 8 servings

CRAZY CAKE

- 1⅓ cups unsifted all-purpose flour
- 1 cup sugar
- 3 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 6 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 tablespoon vinegar
- 1 tablespoon pure vanilla extract
- 1 cup cold water
- 4 (1.4 ozs. each) milk-chocolate candy bars

1. Preheat oven to 375°F. Lightly grease 9x9x2- inch square pan.
2. In sifter combine flour, sugar, cocoa, baking soda, baking powder and salt. Sift dry ingredients directly into prepared pan.
3. Make 3 holes, spaced evenly, in dry ingredients. Into the first pour vegetable oil; into the second pour vinegar; into the third, vanilla.
4. Pour cold water over all. Stir thoroughly with fork or wire whisk until completely blended. Don't forget the corners of the pan.
5. Bake 35-45 minutes, or until a cake tester poked in center comes out clean.
6. Set cake pan on rack. Immediately place chocolate bars on hot cake. Allow to soften 1 minute, then spread with spatula to frost top of cake. Let cool completely, then cut into squares.

Makes 1 (9x9-inch) square cake

SWEET 'N' SOUR BAKED CHICKEN

- ¼ cup butter or margarine
- ½ cup chopped onion
- ½ cup coarsely chopped green pepper
- ½ cup coarsely chopped carrots
- ¾ cup ketchup
- 1 cup pineapple juice
- 2 tablespoons vinegar
- ¼ cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- ½ teaspoon garlic salt
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- Dash ground red pepper
- Dash ground ginger
- 1 cup pineapple chunks, drained
- 1 (3 lb.) broiler-fryer chicken, cut up

1. Preheat oven to 400°F. In medium skillet, heat butter until melted; add onion, green pepper and carrots and cook 5 minutes, stirring.
2. Stir in ketchup, pineapple juice, vinegar, sugar, soy sauce, garlic salt, salt, pepper and ginger; cook, stirring constantly, until mixture boils. Add pineapple chunks.
3. Arrange chicken pieces skin side up in 13x9x2-inch baking pan. Pour sweet and sour sauce over all. Bake covered 45 minutes. Uncover and bake about 30 minutes longer, or until chicken tests done.

Makes 4 servings

Doctors know heartburn is not caused by stomach acid alone, but by the eruption of this acid into your esophagus (the tube between your mouth and stomach).

"I have taken several leading antacids and relief was slight," writes Miss Rose Donabed, Cambridge, Mass. "Then I was introduced to Gaviscon and relief was almost immediate."

This shields the exposed lining of your esophagus from further burning discomfort. Get different, unique relief from heartburn (acid indigestion) that only Gaviscon Tablets can give you.

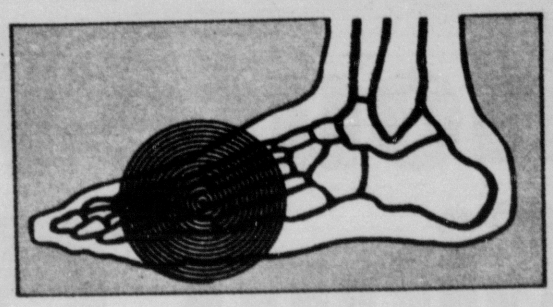
My Feet Were Killing Me...Until I Discovered the Miracle of Hamburg!



It was the European trip I had always dreamed about. I had the time and money to go where I wanted—see what I wanted. But I soon learned that money and time don't mean much when your feet hurt too much to walk. After a few days of sightseeing my feet were killing me.

Oh, I tried to keep going. In Paris I limped through Notre Dame and along the Champs-Elysées. And I went up in the Eiffel Tower although I can't honestly say I remember the view. My feet were so tired and sore my whole body ached. While everybody else was having a great time, I was in my hotel room. I didn't even feel like sitting in a sidewalk cafe.

The whole trip was like that until I got to Hamburg, Germany. There, by accident, I happened to hear about an exciting breakthrough for anyone who suffers from sore, aching feet and legs.

This wonderful invention was a custom-made foot support called Flexible Featherspring. When I got a pair and slipped them into my shoes my pain disappeared almost instantly. The flexible shock absorbing support they gave my feet was like cradling them on a cushion of air. I could walk, stand, even run. The relief was truly a miracle.

And just one pair was all I needed. I learned that women also can wear them—even with sandals and open backed shoes. They're completely invisible.

Imagine how dumbfounded I was to discover that these miraculous devices were sold only in Europe. Right then I determined that I would share the miracle I discovered in Hamburg with my own countrymen.

Today thousands of Americans of all ages—many with foot problems far more severe than mine—have experienced this blessed relief for themselves.

Here's why Featherspring work for them and why they can work for you. These supports are like nothing you've ever seen before. They are custom fitted and made for your feet alone! Unlike conventional devices, they actually imitate the youthful elastic support that Nature originally intended your feet to have.

Whatever your problem—corns, calluses, pain in the balls of your feet, burning nerve ends, painful ankles, old injuries, backaches or just generally sore, aching feet. Flexible Featherspring will bring you guaranteed relief with every step you take.

Don't suffer pain and discomfort needlessly. If your feet hurt, the miracle of Hamburg can help you. Write for more detailed information. There is no obligation whatsoever. Just fill out the coupon below and mail it today.

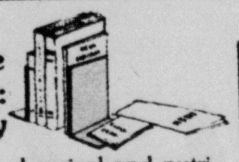
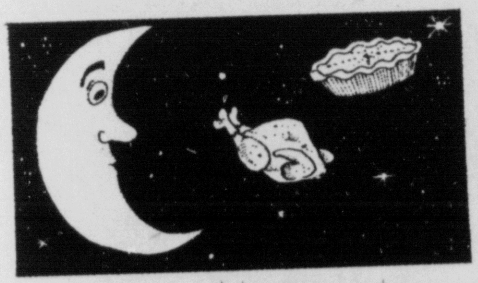
WHAT IN THE WORLD...

You Are What You Read: Use Your Library



Where can you get a chemical and nutritional analysis of popcorn? Where can you obtain a simple and detailed plan so that your fifth-grader can build a computer? At your library, where there are telephone referral services and specialists ready to answer all kinds of questions. Libraries are also among the most successful kind of alternative learning centers — many offer programs leading to a college degree, high-school equivalency or full literacy standing. There are special collections of books and tapes and places where patrons can borrow everything from garden plots to gold-digging pans. And today's libraries are reaching out to people in the community who, for one reason or another, can't make it to the library. For example:

- The Boise (Idaho) Library has a storybike that travels through neighborhoods. Its rider gathers children round for story-telling sessions.
- The Oklahoma City-County Library has established senior-citizens centers, nursing-home visits and more than 50 book sites in parks.
- Arizona's Yuma-City County Library has a telephone-story program in Spanish for children.



At Last — A Refrigerator With Lots Of Space

To Allen Kraft, the dark, cold recesses of space a few hundred miles above earth are just a big refrigerator. And Kraft, a professor of food technology at Iowa State University, wants to shoot a chicken or beef pot pie into space to test his theory that space could be a natural refrigerator for storing perishable foods for extended periods of time. Kraft has outlined his project as SPAM — "Space Preservation Applied to Meat" — but it is also known informally as "Hitch Your Chuck Wagon to a Star." To check out his supposition, his university has formally requested that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) include test-meat products, including the pot pie on its 1979 space shuttle. Kraft says NASA is "very interested." The purpose of such an experiment is not only to determine whether storing foods in space is feasible but also to determine whether food maintains good taste in space. The space-storage idea currently is not feasible, Kraft says, but in the future, when NASA is considering establishing space colonies, space dwellers could eat space-stored food instead of the dried foods consumed by earlier astronauts.

Choosing A Child-Care Center

If you both work and have young children, hiring someone to care for them in your home is costly. An excellent and less-expensive alternative is finding a good child-care center. First check several nearby day-care centers and determine how they compare in cost, location, facilities, etc. Then further evaluate the centers, following these guidelines:

- Make sure the center's program meets your requirements, such as plenty of opportunity for your child to be outdoors or a chance to work on schoolwork.
- Observe a class in session to see how the children interact with one another and the supervisors.
- Note whether the supervisors warm to the needs of the children.
- What is the ratio of children to supervisors? The Day Care and Child Development Council of America recommends at least two, and preferably three, supervisors for groups of 15 to 20 children.
- Talk to several mothers when they drop off or pick up their children. If possible, take your child to the center for a visit.

Get Ahead During Your Time Off

When it comes to getting ahead, what you do off the job can be as important as what you do on it. Here are some suggestions for the best ways to use your free time if you're interested in moving up the career ladder: Get broader recognition for your work by writing for professional publications, by applying for grants or fellowships or by entering projects or samples of your work in professional competitions. Get involved in state or national legislation affecting your field by writing your representatives, by speaking publicly or by petitioning for or against a bill while it's still in committee. Go for a college or graduate degree; attend workshops and lectures in your field. Read, read, read — books, magazines, newsletters in or related to your field. Develop related skills to expand your responsibilities. (If you edit the company newsletter, for example, consider learning photography.) Do consultant work on a volunteer or paid basis.

Colds Have Little In Common With The Cold

Whether or not you suffered through our recently past, uncommonly cold winter, it probably didn't cause any increase in the number of common colds in your home. Cold weather doesn't cause colds. Viruses do, and the brutal weather may drive people inside where they are more likely to breathe air carrying them. But if no viruses are around, you could stand in cold water or in a draft for hours without catching a cold. Research on the subject comes from a team of doctors at the Baylor University School of Medicine. It showed that keeping warm and dry doesn't prevent colds — and getting chilled and damp doesn't do any harm. Home seems to be the chief place for spreading colds, says the study. One reason why people get colds in the fall is that central heating is turned on at that time. The heat dries up the moisture in the air. The membranes that line the nose and respiratory system are affected, and their susceptibility to infection increases.

Quick Takes

Soviet scientists say they have discovered the world's most densely populated rookery of walruses. Russian newspapers said that aerial photographs of Vrangelya Island in the Arctic Ocean showed more than 36,000 walruses, a surprise to scientists who had believed no more than 50,000 existed in the entire world.... The number of girls participating in college varsity sports has doubled in three years from 50,000 to 100,000. And college scholarships for women have soared, too. According to the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women, 200 women's athletic scholarships were handed out in 1971. Today, 350 colleges and universities are offering from five to 60 women's scholarships.... The American Citizens' Band craze has caught on wildly in Mexico, even though all CB equipment must still be smuggled into the country and can be confiscated as contraband at any moment. Over the last six months, bulky-based radio antennas have begun appearing on cars and rooftops throughout Mexico City, and, according to the best estimates, over 10,000 CB sets are already operating there.... The most popular name for babies born in the Washington area now isn't Jimmy Carter — reportedly it's Kunta Kinte, straight from Alex Haley's Roots.... Which is the nation's most violent television network? According to a study conducted by the National Citizens' Committee for Broadcasting, it's NBC, with ABC second and CBS third. Shows were ranked according to the number and duration of violent incidents per episode, including acts of aggression, natural disasters, car chases and slapstick humor.
